Florida State Head Coach Steve Robinson and his staff begin their third year guiding the Seminoles.

Head Coach
Steve Robinson:

Establishing

Coaches

A young boy got off his school bus carrying a cane and a backpack with a smile as wide as a basketball court. Eight-year old Donal Bouie, a huge Seminole athletics fan who is blind and was featured in the Tallahassee Democrat's Caring Connection in September of 1998, had just returned from another day at Sable Palm Elementary School. He was in for a big surprise. Florida State head basketball coach Steve Robinson was at his home waiting to greet him.

"We have a surprise for you," said Robinson. The surprise was a portable basketball goal, purchased by Robinson and installed by the Seminole coaching staff and a few players for Donal.

Donal, along with his two older sisters, lives just a stone's throw away from the Florida State campus. His appearance in the Democrat was sponsored by Independence for the Blind and generated nearly $2,500 from members of the Tallahassee community.

"I always talk to our players about doing things that can help people who are not as fortunate as they are," said Robinson. "Our players are very lucky. Sure, they have to work hard, but that is not a lot to ask. They are going to college, getting an education and get to play basketball. This was a great opportunity to be a part of our community and to help someone in need. I hope this was a valuable lesson and memory for our players to take with them when they leave Florida State University."

That is the kind of man – and coach – Steve Robinson is. Robinson, entering his third year at the helm of the Seminole hoops program, has an intense desire to succeed but also takes the time to recognize life's lessons. He demands a great deal of himself and of those associated with his basketball program – both on the basketball court and off – and expects all of the hard work to pay great dividends for the future of the Florida State basketball program and for the lives of the players who play for him.

Last year's 13-17 record, leaving his two-year FSU record at 31-31, notwithstanding, Robinson is one of the nation's brightest young coaches. His desire in the face of adversity rubs off on those around him.

"Last year was a tough season," said Florida State junior guard Adrian Crawford. "We had a lot of tough things happen, a lot of close.

Seminole Pride

heartbreaking losses. But Coach Robinson just keeps on going. He teaches us that if we don't get back up and try again then we can never succeed. We have to keep working."

Working to reach levels – and then raising the bar – that Robinson took the Seminoles to in his initial season at Florida State, when he put FSU back on the national map in college basketball. Consider:

- The Seminoles returned to the NCAA Tournament for the first time in five years, upset fifth-seeded Texas Christian in the first round and advanced to the second round for the fourth time in the 1990's.
- Florida State reappeared in the Associated Press Top 25 for the first time in four seasons, was ranked for eight consecutive weeks and peaked at No. 13.
- Robinson became the first FSU first-year coach to lead the Tribe to the NCAA Tournament.

- The Seminoles' 84-79 win over defending national champion and No. 5 Arizona on Dec. 23, 1997 equaled the highest ranked team ever defeated by Florida State at home and marked FSU's first Top 10 non-conference win in 11 years.

The end result of Robinson's first season was the beginning of a foundation for the future of the Florida State program. That foundation is built upon organization, structure, hard-work and pride.

"I am here for the long haul," said Robinson, "and things being built for the long-term need a solid foundation. I think we have put that foundation in place."

Robinson's practices at Florida State are organized so that no minute is wasted. He includes a thought of the day on each day's practice plan and each drill during workouts has a purpose.

"Practices are like his classroom," said FSU assistant coach Coleman Crawford. "There is a lot of teaching going on and he is an outstanding teacher."

His day off the court is structured in time that allows for staff meetings and media obligations but his door is always open for the people who are most important in his program – his players.

"We need to put them first because that is why I am a basketball coach," Robinson said. "My challenge is to make everybody on our team a better player and a better person. I enjoy that aspect of coaching."

Proof of that players-first philosophy is seen in the policies Robinson has put in place when the Seminoles travel on the road.

Steve Robison
Florida State Head Coach

Steve Robison's third team at Florida State features four returning starters from last year. Robison has posted a 77-49 record in his four years as a head coach and has put three teams in the NCAA Tournament.

Taller players get first crack — ahead of coaches and staff — at aisle and emergency exit row seats on commercial flights, and Florida State charters flights home after week night games so players can attend early classes the next day. Most importantly, he has instilled pride in his Florida State players.

"I think one of the most important things we have accomplished in our first two years here, has been establishing Seminole Pride," said Robison. "That means that our players give their best effort every day in practice, every time they are in the weight room, give their best effort during every game. They try to make the right decisions off the court and give everything they have in the classroom. I think our players used to be proud to play basketball in the ACC. Now they are proud to say that they play basketball at Florida State University."

Robison has also established tradition to a program where there was once no legacy.

Bringing back former Florida State players to his basketball camp and honoring former players with team awards in their name are just a couple of examples. But nothing else would be expected from a coach that has spent his 16-year coaching career — the first 12 as an assistant, two as the head coach at Tulsa and the last two at Florida State — among tradition-rich programs and winning teams.

The Robison coaching resume includes: 14 winning seasons in his 16 years; 10 NCAA Tournament appearances, including nine consecutive; an average of more than 21 victories per season; and — just as importantly — numerous academic all-conference and honor roll awards for his players.

While at Tulsa, Robison posted back-to-back 20-win campaigns and guided the Golden Hurricane to the NCAA Tournament both years. His first season at the school produced a 22-8 record, the school's first Missouri Valley Conference tournament title in 11 years and an automatic bid into the NCAA Tournament. Robison became only the second Tulsa head coach to take the program to the NCAA Tournament in his first year.

Robison's second year at Tulsa presented a new challenge: a move to the expanded Western Athletic Conference. Robison responded by taking Tulsa to the NCAA Tournament again, posting a 24-10 record (the fourth most wins in school history) and earning the WAC's Mountain Division Coach of the Year honor.

When Florida State Director of Athletics Dave Hart initially approached Robison about FSU's vacancy, the 41-year-old Robison said no — twice. But Hart was persistent, and was able to hire one of the rising young stars in the college coaching profession.

Robison's initial reason for withdrawing from consideration for the Seminole post was one of the very reasons Hart pursued him so persistently. "One big thing that I struggled with was being able to tell those players at Tulsa that I was leaving. That would be very hard for me," Robison told Hart when he first declined the offer to coach the Seminoles. Hart countered, "That is exactly why we want you here, because of the fact that you are the kind of guy that cares so much about your players."

And those words are backed up by Robison's accomplishments in his previous coaching stops.

His players at Tulsa had a reputation for academic success. Five of his players carried grade point averages of at least 3.0 during each semester of his tenure at Tulsa. Two years ago, two starters carried 4.0 GPAs and the team's was 2.84. His first two seasons at Florida State produced similar classroom results. The Seminoles' team GPA during the spring semester during his first two years have been the program's highest this decade while five players posted GPAs of 3.0 or better last summer.

Robinson's coaching star began to shine in the seven seasons prior to his appointment at Tulsa. During those seven years, he served as an assistant coach at Kansas under one of the college game's most respected coaches - Roy Williams.

Robinson helped Williams build the Jayhawks into one of the nation's most dominant college basketball programs from 1988-95. During that time, KU averaged 26 wins per season while compiling a 184-51 record. Kansas won four Big Eight Conference titles and made six trips to the NCAA Tournament, including appearances in the Final Four in 1991 and 1993. In addition to his coaching duties at Kansas, Robinson served as the basketball program's academic counselor. During his time, nine Jayhawk players were named to the Big Eight All-Academic team and 37 recorded grade point averages of 3.0 or better during the fall or spring semesters.

It is obvious that Williams made a permanent impression on Robinson. When asked to comment on what Williams meant to him during the press conference announcing his hiring at Florida State, Robinson responded: "Do you have two hours? And that might not be enough time. I have very strong feelings for that man. My relationship with him is not like head coach-assistant coach, it is more like brother to brother. He is someone who I have great admiration for. He has done a tremendous job in helping me in terms of developing my career, teaching me to be a head coach and assisting me in all phases of running a basketball program."

Prior to joining Williams at Kansas, Robinson served as an assistant coach for two years at Cornell. The Big Red went 15-11 in 1987 and 17-10 in 1988. The 1987-88 team earned the school's first NCAA Tournament berth in 34 years. Robinson began his coaching career at Lincoln (Pa.) University, where he spent the 1981-82 season.

A one-year stint at Albemarle High School in Charlottesville, Va., followed during the 1982-83 season. He then returned to his alma mater, Radford, for three seasons as an assistant coach (1983-85).

A native of Roanoke, Va., Robinson is a graduate of William Fleming High School. He attended Ferrum Junior College and played basketball for two years there before transferring to Radford to complete his eligibility. Robinson was Radford's first athletic scholarship recipient and was team captain during the 1980 and 1981 seasons.

He received his bachelor's degree in health and physical education in 1981 and a master's degree in counseling in 1985, both from Radford. Robinson was inducted into the school's Athletic Hall of Fame last year.

Robinson has become a popular figure on the speaking circuit. He participated in the NCAA YES Clinic at the 1996 Final Four, where he was a guest clinician. Robinson has also lectured at various coaching clinics in California, Florida, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

He is also a member of the National Association of Basketball Coaches recruiting committee. Robinson and his wife, Lisa, have four children: daughters Shauna (19) and Kiaya (7); and sons Tarron (11) and Denzel (8).

Coleman Crawford

Assistant Coach
North Alabama, '75 – 3rd Season at Florida State

Coleman Crawford is in his third season on the Florida State basketball staff as assistant coach under Steve Robinson. Crawford was named to his post on July 7, 1997 and works with FSU's post players.

"Coleman is very well connected and very well respected in the coaching business," said Robinson. "He is a great teacher and has a great feel for post-man development."

Crawford will have a full complement of newcomers to work with down in the post as David Anderson, Nigel Dixon and Mike Mathews are all in on the Florida State staff that has Division I head coaching experience (Jim Platt is the other). Crawford was the head coach at Akron from 1989-1995.

During the 1989-90 season, his first at Akron, the Zips went 16-12 and fell just one victory shy of tying the best record for a first-year Akron basketball coach. Crawford's teams also put together winning seasons in 1991 and 1992 with 15-13 and 16-12 marks, respectively.

Prior to his appointment at Akron, Crawford served as an assistant coach at Tennessee under Don DeVoe from 1986 through 1989. During his three seasons with the Volunteers, Tennessee earned bids to the 1988 NIT and 1989 NCAA Tournament.

Previously, he was an assistant coach at Akron under current Cincinnati coach Bob Huggins for three years (1984-86) and also held assistant coaching positions at Middle Tennessee State (1982-84) and Delta State (1979-82).

Crawford is a member of the National Association of Basketball Coaches (NABC) and has served on the NABC's Legislative Committee. He is a frequent speaker at coaching clinics around the nation as well, talking about post player development. He also served as a member of the NCAA Midwest Advisory Committee that evaluates teams for the NCAA Tournament Selection Committee and, at the 1994 Final Four, participated as an instructor in a special NCAA youth clinic. Crawford served as a coaching panelist at the 1998 NCAA Student Leadership Conference in Orlando.

A standout in college at North Alabama, Crawford began his collegiate career at Seward County (Kan.) Community College before transferring to UNA. While at North Alabama, he was a two-time all-conference performer in 1974 and 1975. In 1974 he was selected named conference player of the year. North Alabama honored Crawford by inducting him into its Athletic Hall of Fame in 1993.

Crawford received his bachelor's degree from North Alabama in history and secondary education in 1975 and earned a master's degree in administration supervision in 1980 from Delta State.

Crawford and his wife, Elaine, have two sons: William (26) and Adrian (21), who transferred into the Seminole basketball program from Tulsa during the summer of 1997. Adrian was Florida State's fourth leading scorer last season at 10.6 points per game.

Jim Platt

Assistant Coach

Jim Platt
Assistant Coach

Jim Platt, in his 21st year of Division I college coaching, is in his third season as an assistant coach at Florida State. Platt joined FSU head coach Steve Robinson's staff's at Tulsa for the 1995-96 season and followed Robinson to Tallahassee when he was appointed the Seminole head coach in July of 1997.

Platt works with FSU's perimeter players and also holds recruiting and scouting responsibilities.

"Jim is as enthusiastic and hard-working as they come in this business," said Robinson. "He owns a vast knowledge of the game of basketball and I am fortunate to have someone with his qualities on my staff."

Platt, along with fellow Florida State assistant Coleman Crawford, is a former head coach at the Division I college level after serving four seasons in that role at the University of Arkansas-Little Rock. He was named to that post prior to the 1990-91 season and led the Trojans to an 18-12 record and an appearance in the Trans America Athletic Conference Tournament championship game. Platt posted two winning seasons and compiled a 56-59 record in four years there.

He was on Robinson's staff at Tulsa the two years when the Golden Hurricane twice advanced to the NCAA Tournament.

Prior to his appointment as the head coach at Arkansas-Little Rock, Platt was an assistant for 12 seasons at two Division I programs.

Platt served under Bob Donewald at Illinois State for six seasons from 1978-84 then moved on to DePaul under Joey Meyer from 1984-90. He was associated with teams that made nine postseason appearances, including seven NCAA Tournaments, in those 12 years and averaged 21 wins per season.

During his stint at Illinois State, the Redbirds finished in second place twice in the Missouri Valley Conference, won the MVC Tournament in 1983, were crowned co-champions with Tulsa in 1984 and advanced to the NCAA Tournament twice and the NIT one time. Platt helped lead DePaul to five straight NCAA Tournament appearances and one trip to the NIT. While at DePaul, Basketball Times tabbed Platt as one of the nation's top 20 assistants.

Platt began his coaching career at Luther North High School in Chicago in 1973. He made the jump to the collegiate ranks for the 1978-79 season.

A 1973 graduate of Concordia (Ill.) College, Platt earned a bachelor of arts degree. He was a four-year letter winner on both the basketball and baseball teams at Concordia.

A native of Aurora, Illinois, the 48-year-old Platt and his wife, Cheryl, have three children: Jeff (23), a senior on the Oklahoma Christian basketball squad, Jessica (20), a sophomore at Florida State, and Jamie (17), a senior at Tallahassee's North Florida Christian School.

Tim Juhlin returns to the Florida State coaching staff under Steve Robinson and is in his second season as an assistant coach. The 1999-2000 season marks the fifth that Juhlin has been associated with a Robinson coached program. "Tim is a hard working young man that has a great deal of basketball experience," said Robinson. "He has done an excellent job for our staff since I have known him and he has a bright future in this business."

Juhlin's work with Robinson dates back to the 1995-96 season while both were at Tulsa.
