

THE UNIVERSITY

*"The athletic program
at Florida State University is a means of identification for Florida State and a rallying point for anyone connected in any way with the university . . ."*

—Dr. Bernard F. Sliger

This is Florida State

Tucked in the Florida panhandle just shy of the state's northern border lies Florida State University. At home in the capital city of Tallahassee, Florida State is a co-educational university and is the senior member of the nine universities in the state system.

A beautiful campus of some 345 acres is wrapped in greenery that combines the blossoms of camellias, azaleas and dogwoods with palm trees and moss-hung oaks. Over 150 buildings — from old gothic structures to the newer contemporary designs — dot the rolling campus.

Academic excellence is found in 14 colleges and schools offering courses of study in 18 major disciplines. There are over 90 choices of bachelor's degrees, 95 choices of master's degrees and doctorate degrees offered in 66 areas.

THE UNIVERSITY

But it all began 125 years ago in one building on 10 acres—on Jan. 1, 1857, when Gov. James E. Broome signed a bill locating the Seminary West of the Suwannee in Tallahassee.

By 1859, the school, which had not yet achieved college status, boasted 120 students and in 1860, enrollment had reached 250.

The seminary saw some bad times when war broke out, and by the 1864–65 school year, the number of students had dwindled to 54. During the next 40 years, the seminary, more often than not beset with financial and personnel problems, struggled to stay alive.

In 1887, Col. George M. Edgar, newly-installed president of the seminary, embarked on a project to organize the school into a four-year liberal arts college. At the first commencement, which took place in June, 1891, former Gov. William D. Bloxham delivered the baccalaureate address and degrees were conferred on two women and five men.

On June 5, 1901, the Florida Board of Education took the final step of converting the seminary, renaming the institution Florida State College.

Up to this point, most of the students were from the Tallahassee area, but with the new name came increased enrollment. During the first session, the student body of 252 also came from five other states and from 32 Florida counties extending from Pensacola to Fernandina and as far south as Brevard and Orange counties.

In 1905, as a result of the Buckman Act, Florida State College became Florida Female College. In 1909 it was renamed Florida State College for Women, the FSCW claimed as alma mater by thousands of ladies. Dr. Edward Conradi was named president that year, a post he was to hold until 1941.

During the "war to end all wars," from 1914 to 1918, the FSCW women did their part—performing Red Cross and liberty bond work. There was no yearbook in the final war year—the girls felt it more patriotic to buy war bonds. Many went without class rings, donating the money to the war effort instead.

Despite the war, Florida State College for Women continued to grow. In 1918 enrollment had reached the 500 mark.

Rules and regulations of FSCW seem humorous by today's standards. Attendance at card parties and dances was forbidden and smoking was strictly prohibited. On Sunday the College gates were closed to all vehicles and no visitors except family members were allowed. Pianos and musical instruments were not played on Sundays except 15 minutes before and after mealtime and never ragtime or jazz!

The years went by and the rules were relaxed. By 1934 limited smoking was allowed, but no student could be seen smoking in the company of a man. Juniors and seniors were allowed 12 dates a month and freshmen and sophomores, nine.

On Feb. 19, 1940, the girls of FSCW lined campus streets to greet First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt, who spoke in Conradi Auditorium, urging the students to study politics. "You won't like it very much. You may think it isn't a clean game; but we women, if we keep up our ideals, can do much to improve politics," she told them.

And war had not ended forever, after all. . . .

During the World War II, FSCW scheduled courses to train language and radio code specialists, x-ray experts and other needed technicians. President Doak Campbell (1941-1957) praised students and faculty for "sane programs, cutting out unnecessary extra-curricular activities and replacing them with voluntary activities closely related to the war effort."

Easter holidays were cancelled in 1944 due to transportation problems caused by the war; there was no Artist Series that year.

The population influx following the war and educational opportunities fostered by the GI Bill brought another change to the Tallahassee college.

During 1945, FSCW assumed a dual identity. GIs stationed nearby already were attending classes at the school, but as men, couldn't legally enroll at the women's college. Therefore FSCW took on the additional title Tallahassee Branch of the University of Florida (TBUF). Dr. Milton W. Carothers, professor of education at FSCW since 1943, was placed in charge of the branch. He was later to serve as acting president for a time.

The situation remained such until May 15, 1947, when Gov. Millard Caldwell signed a bill making both the University of Florida and FSCW co-educational.

FSCW was renamed Florida State University and a young Tallahassee man, John Patterson, became the first male student to enroll at FSU.

Under the mantle of TBUF, the school already had tennis, basketball and swim teams. FSU quickly assembled a football team, coached by Ed Williamson. In October of that year, Florida State played its first game, losing to Stetson 14-6.

However, that inauspicious start could have been worse. The Seminoles could have been the Fighting Crackers!

In November, FSU students were asked to submit names for the football team. One hundred were submitted and in the first vote, these were favored: Crackers, Fighting Warriors, Seminoles, Statesmen and Tarpons. Fortunately, "Seminoles" won in the runoff.

The Seminoles' second year of intercollegiate competition, under Coach Don Veller, resulted in the Dixie Conference title.

Florida State definitely has developed from its humble start in 1857. Since it became a university, it has had six chief executives. Following Doak Campbell were Robert M. Strozier (1957-60), Gordon W. Blackwell (1960-65), John Champion (1965-69) and J. Stanley Marshall (1969-76). Bernard Slinger was named president in 1976, a post he holds today.

Both the men's and women's athletic programs are among the best in the nation. The fame of names like Ron Sellers, Dave Cowens, Fred Biletnikoff and Dick Howser originated at Florida State.

On the academic side of the spectrum, the University has grown to include 14 schools and colleges and offers overseas study opportunities in Italy, Great Britain, the Panama Canal Zone, Switzerland and Yugoslavia. A joint engineering program with Florida A&M University begins in Fall, 1982.

Rita Coolidge, Robert Urich, Herb Morgan, Alan Sundberg and Burt Reynolds all were former Seminoles.

DR. BERNARD F. SLIGER
President

Dr. Bernard F. Sliger doesn't fit the stereotype of the ethereal, pipe-smoking academic. Almost everyone who's ever dealt with him calls him "Bernie"; he's down-to-earth, personable and by his own admission, "not tough enough" when it comes to handling personnel.

This year, the Florida Board of Regents gave Sliger an "outstanding" evaluation after his first five years in office. Regents Chairman DuBose Ausley said Sliger has brought "a great sense of stability and purpose" to the University.

Sliger earned a Ph.D. in economics from Michigan State University. Prior to coming to Florida State, he worked 19 years as a professor and administrator at Louisiana State University and helped create the Louisiana Coordinating Council for Higher Education, of which he was executive director.

In 1972, Sliger joined the administrative team at FSU as executive vice president. He officially became the 10th president of Florida State on June 10, 1977.

One of Sliger's proudest accomplishments has been getting legislative approval for the FAMU/FSU Institute for Engineering which opens this fall. That was one of his goals when he became president.

His remaining goals include seeing the completion of the engineering program and obtaining a new science library.

Although Sliger gives academics top priority, he sees athletics as a vital aspect of FSU. He said, "The athletic program at Florida State University is a means of identification for Florida State and a rallying point for anyone connected in any way with the University, in addition to being an important source of outside giving."

Even with the time-consuming demands of a university president, Sliger finds time to participate in Florida State sports as, he terms it, "an energetic spectator."

But President Sliger is no newcomer to the athletic scene. During his high school days in his hometown of Trout Creek, Mich., he was a member of the basketball, track and football teams. Following a three-year tour of duty with the Army during World War II, Sliger returned to Trout Creek to teach math and coach the track and basketball teams.

"This year," Sliger said, "Florida State is celebrating its 125th birthday—more than 12 decades educating young people. First, they came just from the immediate environs; now we have students from every state and more than 100 foreign countries. I predict the next 25 years will see us growing even more in quality, taking our rightful place among the leading educational institutions in the United States. We have survived and thrived, developing from a tiny pre-Civil War seminary into a first rate university of which we can all be proud."

DR. JAMES P. JONES
Chairman, Faculty
Athletic Committee

Dr. James P. Jones has been a member of the Florida State University History Department since 1957, and was named to chair that department in 1980. He received his B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Florida. Jones has served on the Athletic Board since 1973. He was chairman of the Board's Academic Subcommittee until 1980 when he was named Board chairman. In this capacity he is the University's representative to the NCAA.

Jones is a historian of the American Civil War and has published five books and thirty-five articles on the history of 19th century America. He has also written on such sports subjects as minor league baseball, Hank Aaron and the Gator Bowl. Jones' work best known to fans of Seminole football is FSU One Time! A History of Seminole Football, published in 1973 and updated in 1974, '75 and '76.

C. W. "HOOTIE" INGRAM
Athletic Director

C. W. "Hootie" Ingram is in his second year as Florida State's athletic director. He came to the post in 1981 after serving as associate commissioner of the Southeastern Conference.

Since coming to Florida State, Ingram has initiated a $10 million dollar building program for athletic facilities that will include a new athletic administration building and improvements to the football stadium, baseball complex and swimming pool area.

Ingram had been associated with the SEC office for eight years. He was first an assistant commissioner before being named associate commissioner (1978).

A native of Tuscaloosa, Ala., the home of the University of Alabama, Ingram played football for the Crimson Tide from 1951 through 1954. He was All-SEC as a sophomore when he led the nation in pass interceptions. The '53 Alabama team played in the Orange Bowl and the '54 squad in the Cotton Bowl. Ingram also lettered for the Tide in baseball as an infielder.

After an Army stint, Ingram turned to coaching. He started as an assistant at Bradenton (Fla.) Manatee High School and was later head coach at Tuscaloosa High School for three years.

He later moved into college coaching and had stops at Wake Forest, Virginia Tech, Georgia and Arkansas as an assistant. His only college football head coaching assignment began in 1970 when he succeeded the veteran Frank Howard as head coach at Clemson. Three years later he joined the SEC as assistant commissioner.

During his tenure with the SEC, his duties included supervising football and basketball officials, rules interpretations and eligibility.

Ingram and his wife Toni have two daughters and a son.

BOB GOIN
Associate Athletic Director

Bob Goin joined the Florida State staff as associate athletic director on July 1, 1981 after serving two years as athletic director at California (Pa.) State College.

Goin, who received a bachelor's degree from Bethany (1959) and master's at West Virginia (1962), has a background in both coaching and athletic administration. Prior to taking the California State post, he was assistant director of athletics at West Virginia. Between 1960 and 1976 he served in various capacities at Bethany (W. Va.) College. Included among those duties were coaching responsibilities in football, basketball and baseball.

Immediately prior to moving to West Virginia, Goin served Bethany as associate professor and chairman of physical education and athletics. That assignment lasted for four years (1972-76). Goin was Bethany's head football coach between 1963 and 1972.

Goin was responsible for expanding the California athletic program. He formed the Cal State Athletic Scholarship Fund and Athletic Booster Club. He also developed a new office complex for coaches, helped equip a training room, exercise and weight training areas and renovated the football locker rooms.

While coaching at Bethany, Goin saw two of his football and baseball teams win the President's Athletic Conference championship. He was also voted Tri-State Small College Coach of the Year, was named the winner of the Pittsburgh and Ohio Valley Dapper Dan Awards and the Morgantown Touchdown Club Award.

Goin and his wife Nancy have four children.

CLAUDE THIGPEN

Pendleton's present role covers many areas within the athletic department. He is responsible for maintaining and scheduling of all the facilities in the athletic complex. Any building projects will be coordinated and supervised by Pendleton.

His duties also include scheduling for the basketball team and aiding the coaching staff with its travel arrangements during the season. He is also responsible for management of the athletic department insurance programs.

Pendleton is in his eighth year as a full-time member of the Seminole staff. He returned to his alma mater in 1973 as a graduate assistant football coach and spent the '74 season as an assistant coach.

During 1975 and 76 he served solely as the academic advisor for the football squad. Those duties were expanded to include all athletes in 1977.

A native of Winter Garden, Fla., Pendleton played linebacker and offensive guard for the Seminoles. He twice was selected to the Florida all-star team while starting 33 consecutive games.

His involvement in the promotional area consists of developing seasonal ticket campaigns and organizing "special event" programs for the athletic department.

Prior to becoming a member of the athletic staff, Boyle was general manager of a former Seminole Sports Network flagship station. In that capacity, Boyle served as the network producer and designed the format for football, basketball and baseball broadcasts.

Boyle graduated from FSU with a bachelor of science degree from the mass communications program in 1977. He received his master's degree from FSU in March of 1978.

Doak Campbell Stadium

Some 259,414 fans filed through the gates of Doak Campbell Stadium to witness Florida State's five home football games in 1981, a figure that ranked the school 28th in the country in home attendance. Only in 1980 were more fans attracted to Tallahassee; 361,402 saw the Seminoles play six home contests. The 1980 figure, although smaller in average attendance, ranked 21st in the country for total attendance. In a short period of time, Florida State's football program has attracted many faithful followers.

On October 8, 1950, just three years after Florida State had fielded its first football team, the Seminoles and the Randolph Macon Yellowjackets played the first game in Doak Campbell Stadium. A record crowd of 9,676 watched the game under temporary lights as Florida State won 40-7.

Today, Doak Campbell Stadium is fully lighted for nighttime football and seats a comfortable 55,246. Six expansions during the last 32 years have added over 40,000 seats, including 4,000 for the 1982 season.

Doak Campbell's original 15,000 capacity in 1950 soon grew to 19,000 four years later and in 1961, a further expansion enabled 25,000 to watch Seminole football. During the Bill Peterson era, the stadium was expanded to 40,500 and it remained at that capacity for the next 14 years. Between 1978 and 1982, three more additions became a reality for Florida State followers.

Named for Doak S. Campbell, the first president of Florida State University, the steel structure sits adjacent to the school's campus. The stadium's gold seats rise out of a natural Bermuda grass playing surface, enclosing the field except at the endzones where additional stands accommodate an overflow crowd.

Future plans of expansion will enclose the ends into a perfect bowl.

Above the west stands towers the pressbox while a new skybox over the east stands provides a viewing area for the Seminole Boosters, Inc.

A $400,000 scoreboard, erected in 1980, rises above the south endzone. One of the finest in the country, it includes a message center that is operated by computer. In addition to the usual scoring summary, the scoreboard updates offensive and defensive statistics throughout the game.
