

THE UNIVERSITY

THIS IS FLORIDA STATE UNIVERSITY

Florida State University, home of the world's fastest supercomputer, is setting the pace as higher education in the state prepares to enter the 21st century. The FSU Supercomputer Computations Research Institute attracts international attention with scientists from many nations using the University's two powerful supercomputers in their research.

The Department of Physics' Tandem Van de Graaff Superconducting Accelerator Laboratory, ranked in the top four in the nation by the National Science Foundation, houses two powerful atom smashers which also provide unique research opportunities.

Located in Tallahassee, the capital of Florida, FSU is a public, coeducational university and a senior member of the State University System. More than 24,000 students are enrolled, representing all 50 states and 100 foreign countries. The University offers more than 250 graduate and undergraduate degrees in its 15 schools and colleges. Outstanding programs in the colleges of arts and sciences, business, communication, education, engineering, home economics, law and social sciences combine with the schools of criminology, library and information studies, music, nursing, social work, theater and visual arts to make Florida State a nationally acclaimed university.

The Florida State campus, located just blocks away from the state capitol, is beautiful in all seasons. Its 347 acres mirror the picturesque features of the surrounding North Florida region. The buildings are nestled among evergreen live oaks, pines and palms, as well as hardwoods that provide fall color, and dogwoods and azaleas that are covered with a profusion of spring-time blossoms.

As an institution, FSU began as coeducational Seminary West of the Suwannee River, approved by the Florida Legislature in 1851 and assigned to Tallahassee in 1857. Name changes over the years included Florida State College in 1901; then in 1905, Florida Female College and, in 1909, Florida State College for Women. Gov. Millard Caldwell signed a bill in 1947 which again made the institution coeducational and changed the name to Florida State University.

The first building to house the institution was completed in 1855. Westcott, the present administrative building, replaced the original building, making this location the state's oldest active university site.

Today, Florida State faculty and administrators generate more than $50 million annually in external funding to supplement state sponsorship of research. In addition, $14.5 million in private gifts was raised through the FSU Foundation during the past fiscal year.

These contributions from alumni, friends, corporations, the University community and charitable foundations benefit Florida State's academic programs.

The University's location affords excellent research and internship opportunities in government, law and the social sciences. The reputation of Florida State's research programs and the expertise of its more than 1,500 faculty members—including four members of the National Academy of Sciences and four members of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences—represent major strengths of the University. FSU prides itself on pursuing academic quality while maintaining a friendly, welcoming atmosphere.

Programs in music, dance and theater at Florida State have earned well-deserved national recognition. The visual and performing arts exhibited and produced on campus offer students and the community a wealth of enrichment opportunities.

Student activities at FSU create an important balance between the classroom experience and the personal life of the individual scholar. Honors programs, student government, intramural sports and more than 200 organizations are available for student involvement. Furthermore, the Flying High Circus, the world's only all-collegiate circus, makes its home here.

Florida State academic programs extend well beyond Tallahassee. The FSU Marine Laboratory is located on the Gulf of Mexico, 45 miles away. Students participate in professional training programs at the Asolo State Theater in Sarasota and the Burt Reynolds Institute for Theatre Training in Jupiter. The Panama City Campus of Florida State offers upper-level courses which lead to bachelor's and master's degrees. The Center for Professional Development and Public Service, housed in the Florida State Conference Center on the edge of the main campus, manages educational outreach activities from Pensacola to Miami.

The physical growth of the University during the 11-year administration of President Bernard Sliger represents new construction expenditures of more than $100 million. It includes such additions as the University Union expansion project, the new Paul A.M. Dirac Science Library Building, the Jeffersonian-style Village Green project at the College of Law, the new wing of the Rovetta Business Building, and the new FAMU/FSU College of Engineering at Innovation Park.

It is not only the academic programs and facilities of Florida State, but also its people—students, faculty, alumni, administrators and staff—who make this University such a proud monument to learning.

The Florida State campus is preparing for the largest enrollment in history come fall

DOAK CAMPBELL STADIUM

As Florida State has grown into one of the nation's top football programs—even though it started the sport just 41 years ago—Doak Campbell Stadium has grown right along with it. The booming interest in Seminole football was born in 1976 when head coach Bobby Bowden arrived to give the program new life. Doak Campbell Stadium has grown by some 20,000 seats since that time. The attraction of so many followers, from students and Tallahassee folks to the ever-increasing die-hard alumni who make the eight-hour weekly trek from Miami, has created demands that have made every expansion a necessity.

On Oct. 7, 1950, just three years after FSU had fielded its first football team, the Seminoles and Randolph Macon Yellowjackets played the first game at "Doak." A record crowd of 9,676 watched the game under temporary lights as Florida State won 40-7.

Today, Doak Campbell is fully lighted for nighttime football. Seven expansions over the last 38 years have added over 45,000 seats. Doak's original 15,000 capacity in 1950 soon grew to 19,000 four years later and in 1961, a further expansion enabled 25,000 to view Seminole football. During the Bill Peterson era, the stadium was expanded to seat 40,500 and it remained at that capacity for the next 14 years. Between 1978 and 1982, there were three more additions with the seventh becoming a reality in 1985 and giving Doak its present capacity of 60,519.

Named for Doak S. Campbell, the first president of Florida State University, the garnet and gold steel structure sits adjacent to the four-year-old Moore Athletic Complex, just on the outskirts of campus. The stadium's gold seats rise out of a Bermuda grass turf enclosing the field except at the endzones where additional stands accommodate over-flow crowds. A long-range plan has the stadium encased in a classroom office building with skyboxes overlooking the field and the endzones bowled in to create a horseshoe-like effect.

Last summer, an underground system of pumps for watering and draining the field was installed, allowing a deeper root system in the natural turf that alleviates drainage problems. The improved surface was replanted with prescription turf, a Bermuda hybrid. The surface, which cost $350,000 to install, is the same surface that has recently been installed in stadiums like Joe Robbie and Soldier Field.

The press box above the west stands accommodates the media and includes seating for close to 100 writers as well as broadcast booths for radio and television. A catwalk extended from the press box allows additional working space for television cameras.

A skybox providing a comfortable viewing area for the Seminole Boosters, Inc. was erected over the east stands in 1982. The plush box seats over 200 in its main section while six loge boxes are on another level.

A half-million dollar scoreboard, installed in 1980, sits above the south endzone and includes a computerized message center that updates offensive and defensive statistics throughout the game. Flanking the scoreboard is one of the symbols of Florida State football, a neon spear that registers crowd noise.

A new addition for the 1988 football season is an enlarged

Seminole Gift Shop which has been constructed just outside the north grandstand. With 3,500 square feet in the new facility, it nearly doubles the size of the old shop, which was located under the north stands.

In 1987, Florida State recorded its largest crowd ever when the University of Miami and the Seminoles played one of the greatest games in college football history in front of 62,561 fans. Florida State averaged its all-time attendance mark of 57,305 in 1986 and with seven home games in '88—including Florida and Michigan State—a new all-time mark should be reached.

Doak Campbell has also become a favorite of the network and cable magnates who have made the trip to Tallahassee 14 times since Bowden became head coach. Nine of those games were national telecast while five were regionals. The nighttime capabilities that Doak Campbell has enjoyed since its early years have also made FSU a natural choice for late night telecasts—three such have been televised from Doak since 1982 when the idea of nighttime college football first took root.

Truly, overnight, Florida State football has risen from humble beginnings.

SEMINOLE SATURDAY NIGHT FEVER

Garnet and Gold balloons fill the stand at Doak Campbell Stadium as 60,000 fans await another action-packed Saturday of Seminole football.

Suddenly all heads turn to the north endzone as the Seminoles, led by head coach Bobby Bowden, burst out of the tunnel from the locker room onto the playing field following Chief Osceola and Renegade.

Renegade, a large Appaloosa horse, gallops the length of the field. Perched atop Renegade, holding a 10-foot flaming spear, is Chief Osceola. The Chief wears an authentic costume designed specifically for Florida State by Seminole Indians. His face is covered with grease-based makeup, giving him an Indian-reddish tint. Garnet and gold stripes have been added in FSU Seminole fashion.

The 16 Seminole cheerleaders encourage the Campbell Stadium crowd as mascot Tommy Hawk pounds an intimidating beat on Big Sam, the Seminole Victory Drum. The fans move their arms in unison to the Scalp 'Em cheer following the beat of the drum. Renegade fidgets and shakes his head from side to side, awaiting the end of the coin-toss proceedings. Chief Osceola shakes the spear over his head and the crowd roars its approval.

The game captains and referees leave midfield. The excitement of the crowd is reaching its peak. Renegade and Chief Osceola gallop to the 50-yard line. Renegade rears up on his hind legs and Chief Osceola plants the fiery spear into the turf. This is what the crowd of 60,000 has been waiting for.

The roar of the crowd is deafening. The moment the spear hits the ground, thousands of balloons are released, filling the Tallahassee sky with garnet and gold while the Marching Chiefs play the FSU fight song in the background.

It is one of college football's greatest opening shows and has become the heart and soul of Seminole football.

College Football's most exciting opening show can be found in Tallahassee, Florida on fall Saturdays

SEMINOLE STRENGTH PROGRAM

The Seminole strength complex at Florida State is undoubtedly one of the nation's finest. With over $100,000 worth of Nautilus and free-weight equipment, every major muscle group of the body can be developed in at least six different exercise movements through workouts in the multi-equipped facility.

Six-year staff director Dave Van Halanger oversees a year-round strength and conditioning program. Not only have excellent strength gains come from the program, but the flexibility, quickness, explosion and speed of the FSU athlete increases from the minute they step on campus. Van Halanger's philosophy of "the strong shall survive," is understood by FSU athletes after going through an off-season program.

Athletics at FSU train in a three-dimensional manner. The physical aspect of the body is not the only concern in the program. Says Van Halanger, "We believe that the mental aspect of conditioning combined with a solid spiritual base is vital for our athletes to perform at the peak of their physical potential."

The Seminole Strength Complex is located in the Moore Athletic Center
