The Seminoles return all five starters on the offensive line and the entire starting front on the defense in 2002, which is probably why some preseason magazines have tabbed FSU preseason #1.

BOWDEN LOOKS AT 2002

"I thought we had a good spring. The bad part was that we had a lot of kids who had to miss because they had surgery. But injuries were at a minimum otherwise."

"The big thing we were trying to do during spring practice was to make everybody get better fundamentally — blocking, tackling, catching, not fumbling. I thought every kid made some improvement. All of our quarterbacks made some improvement too. The rotation didn't change any, but it was a good spring."

"Last spring was strictly a spring of unknowns, of question marks. We were trying to solve those questions and I think as the season progressed, we did. This year is just the opposite. We've got so many starters back that we kind of know where we are and it's just a matter of trying to get every person to be better at their position. Then, we must get the chemistry right."

"I felt real good about the last two games last year against Georgia Tech and Virginia Tech in the Gator Bowl. I felt like we were back on schedule when we played those two games. It gave us some momentum going into the spring and now we can take that into the fall. I think our boys gained a lot of confidence with those wins and they kind of showed us where we stood. When you play Virginia Tech, it's a good test because they've got a great program up there and you're playing a good team."

"If you're going to put pressure on a specific group and tell them they've got to be the guys that lead us, then the offensive line is the one you'd like to have go out and do it. If they block people, everybody can run the football and everybody can throw the football. Blocking is such a key. I think how far we go offensively this year will rest in the hands of those offensive linemen."

"Chris Rix made progress in the spring.

Adrian McPherson made progress as well. So did Fabian (Walker) and Matt Henshaw. I thought Chris Rix ended up having a real good year last year. He should go into this year with more confidence than he had last season. He's got all the tools. He is very gifted, but he's got to improve his decision-making. I think that's a matter of maturity. It will come with him and it will come with the other guys as well."

"Going into last year, we had three starters back on defense (LB Bradley Jennings, FS Chris Hope, RV Abdul Howard) and this year we have all the starters back but those three, so we are much further along. I thought the defense had a good spring. The first scrimmage we had in the spring, it looked like our defense of old. They just shut down the offense completely. Every scrimmage after that the offense began to move the ball and I don't know exactly what that means except that it looks like we've got more work to do. We're veterans now, these kids are veterans. If they can just improve and get the scheme under their belt we should be much improved defensively."

"We didn't have the pass rush last year that we've had in previous years and one of the reasons for that is we used more zone blitzes. We rushed more often with three men, or four men, than we have in the past and that makes getting to the passer tougher. This year I'm sure we'll send more people hunting, trying to get those sacks, because we feel like our cornerbacks have a year's experience now and we should be able to cover better man-to-man which would allow us to go after the passer more."

"Xavier Beitia had a great freshman year and he had a great spring. He kicked Xavier Beitia had a great freshman year.

The defensive front returns intact this season.

a 51-yard field goal in the spring game and kicked one from 50 in the bowl game against Virginia Tech. But the amazing thing about him is his accuracy. He was 16-of-17 last year when you include the bowl game."

"We've got a great schedule and we're playing more games (13) than we ever have. We are going to really have to watch ourselves about how we go about this. We will play two games in August and usually we don't play any in August. Ourschedule is very tough. I never thought I'd see the day that we have Notre Dame in Tallahassee, but we've got them here. Florida has a new coach, but it's still Florida and I don't expect that to change. Miami comes off a national championship and we play down there so that's been pretty close to impossible for anybody over the last 10 years or so. We didn't win the ACC last year for the first time and changing that will be a priority."

Quarterbacks

Bobby Bowden has coached 26 football teams at Florida State, but never one with a freshman at starting quarterback for the season-opener as he did last year. The good news for FSU fans is that Chris Rix showed he certainly has the talent to be the next great quarterback for the Tribe, and he also showed the competitive fire and leadership skills that coaches look for in a signal caller.

The charge to Rix since winning the ACC Rookie of the Year award following a freshman season in which he ranked among the top 10 nationally (8th) in passing has been fairly simple—cut down on the mistakes. Rix's miscues were perhaps fewer than most freshmen quarterbacks but under the microscope of the Seminoles program and with a young team not able to cover up the mistakes, his stood out. Coaches love the fact that he never got down on himself and fans can't get enough of his daredevil races out of the pocket. However, both Bowdens and quarterback coach Daryl Dickey will be looking for Rix to stay in the pocket and use his head more than his feet in 2002. If he does that, he's already shown that he has tremendous ability to lead a team.

Rix may spend some time looking over his shoulder in the fall as he did this past spring. Sophomore Adrian McPherson is right behind Rix and should make even more improvement this pre-season. McPherson throws a beautiful ball and has impressed coaches with his raw talent as well. He too must learn to be patient as a quarterback, but has already proven his talent can win at this level. Florida's first-ever Mr. Football and Mr. Basketball, he hopes to play hoops for Leonard Hamilton when the football season is over.

Sophomore Fabian Walker is a junior college transfer who went through spring drills in 2001, which provided him with a chance to knock some of the rust off and learn the FSU system. He came on over the last half of spring practice to play much better and will be in the mix as fall drills begin.

Redshirt freshman Matt Henshaw served notice in the spring game that he was also in contention at the quarterback position. He connected on a 55-yard bomb in the gamet and gold game and just missed on another to show that he was ready to make a move as well.

BOTTOM LINE: Florida State coaches expect significant improvement from Rix and McPherson as both are much more comfortable in the system. Rix will be tough to beat out as he has performed extremely well under pressure, but FSU coaches have the luxury of depth at the all-important position.

Wide Receivers

The consummate team player for the Seminoles, Anquan Boldin was a highly touted high school quarterback who moved to WR to fill a need as a freshman. He also worked at quarterback last fall but moved back to WR when Robert Morgan injured his knee in pre-season which left the position thin.

What a difference a year makes must be the theme that Jeff Bowden quietly hums to himself these days. Last year, Bowden's job looked difficult enough as he was taking over the offensive coordinator's position at FSU at a time which just happened to coincide with the departure of a Heisman Trophy winning quarterback in Chris Weinke, four-year starter at tailback in Travis Minor, a wide receiver who led the nation in yards per game in Snoop Minnis along with a tight end and three offensive linemen. Add to the mix the fact that he would take over play-calling duties with a freshman quarterback for the first time since the elder Bowden took over the program 26 years ago. Then, just in case the offense was not facing enough uncertainty going into last year, the two starting wide receivers (Anquan Boldin and Robert Morgan) were both lost for the season with knee injuries just two weeks before the first game. Trial by fire seems an understatement under those conditions.

The best place to start a look at the 2002 receiving corps is with the two guys who missed all of last season. Junior Anquan Boldin and senior Robert Morgan should be 100 percent healthy when fall drills begin and with a solid pre-season camp should be the starters when the Seminoles travel to Kansas City to take on Iowa State. Both are talented and bring big game experience to the receiving corps—an element that was lacking until Javon Walker got enough experience last year. Both Boldin and Morgan excel at catching the ball in traffic and Boldin, at 236 pounds, may be the most physical receiver FSU has had in years.

Another blessing Bowden has this year in contrast to last season is depth. The trio of junior Talman Gardner and sophomores Craphonso Thorpe and P.K. Sam will be chomping at the bit for playing time. All three possess breakaway speed and all produced in the clutch last season. The wealth of talent means Florida State should be able to use some formations that they simply could not a year ago.

Adding experienced depth to the unit are former walk-ons Joey Kaleikini, a junior, and senior Travis Smith along with a significant influx of talent from the recruiting class.

BOTTOM LINE: The Seminoles should be able to field a lot of talent and depth at the wide receivers positions in 2002.

Robert Morgan

Running Backs

The offensive coaching staff emphasized improving the running game as the 2001 season approached and the emergence of Greg Jones at tailback to compliment Nick Maddox gave the coaches something to work with as the season progressed. By the end of the year, FSU had found a power running game reminiscent of the late 1980s when Sammie Smith carried the mail. It seems the emphasis will be the same in 2002, as Florida State will lean hard on the running game with all five offensive linemen returning and a bevy of talented tailbacks. The big question mark will be who will clear the way at fullback.

Greg Jones pounded opposing defenses for a team-high 713 yards on just 134 carries last season. The 6-1, 243-pound junior hammered a tough Virginia Tech defense for 120 yards on 23 carries in the Gator Bowl win. He gained over 100 yards in four of the last seven games of the season to give him momentum heading into his junior year. Jones' combination of brute strength with break-away speed should give defenses, already stretched thin by the Seminoles' multi-formation offense, a tough assignment. He will be the starter as fall drills begin.

Senior Nick Maddox was FSU's second leading rusher in 2001 with 438 yards on 98 carries and his ability to catch the ball out of the backfield makes him a lethal weapon for the FSU offense.

Also pushing for playing time this year will be redshirt freshman Willie Reid who was lighting it up as a true freshman in the preseason last fall before an injury cost him the entire year. Coaches are excited about his big-play ability and elusiveness in the open field. He too can catch the ball from the backfield.

Senior Lemar Parrish should provide depth at running back, as will sensational recruits who will have to prove themselves in pre-season camp before the redshirt is taken off.

Fullback is an area of strong concern for FSU because of a lack of experience. Redshirt freshman B.J. Dean showed promise in learning the position after moving over from linebacker just prior to spring drills. Another walk-on, junior P.J. Selvidio, may be the most consistent of the trio coming into the fall. Redshirt freshman James Buchanan is anxious to show coaches what he can do, but injuries kept him on the sidelines all of last year.

BOTTOM LINE: A wealth of good running backs and a talented and experienced offensive line should mean that Florida State can exploit defenses set up to stop the vaunted passing attack.

Florida State's success in 2002 probably starts and stops right here with the offensive line. While it's cliché to say that you win football games on the line of scrimmage — it's also true. That being the case, FSU has as talented and experienced a group along the offensive front as they have had in years. Led by All-American and Outland Trophy candidate Brett Williams, the Seminoles return all five starters from last season along with senior Todd Williams who will be trying to regain his starting spot before the season begins. Brett Williams (6-6, 310, senior) earned preseason Playboy All-American honors going into the 2002 season and finished last year as the best blocker in the ACC as voted on by opposing coaches. With nagging injuries behind him, Williams has the talent to emerge as one of the finest linemen FSU has ever produced. He returns to the split tackle position after starting all but two games there over the last two seasons. Next to Williams on the split side is senior Milford Brown who made quick work of dumping his rookie tag last year after transferring in from a junior college. Brown may have been FSU's most ferocious run blocker and should get even better with another year of technique work.

Coaches knew from his work as a backup in practice that Antoine Mirambeau had the talent to be successful and he finally got a chance to prove it as a starter on the field last year. He spent this past spring trying to show coaches that he also could carry the mantle of leadership from his center position, which is asked to do a lot in the FSU system.

Montrae Holland comes off one of the most effective springs ever for an FSU football player and he appears ready to contend for All-America honors as well. At 6-3, 336-pounds, he has the size to move people out of the hole in the running game and the weight that allows him to stand people up in pass blocking.

Sophomore Ray Willis wears a look of determination just about wherever he goes and once he got a chance to start at tight tackle last year he simply refused to let go. He has the talent and the demeanor to be a tremendous player for the Seminoles for the next several years. Todd Williams will use the fall to try and unseat the youngster to get his position back and he backs up the effort with the best spring of his FSU career.

The backups at the offensive line position are all young (none older than a sophomore) but talented and ready to make a move.

Tight end might be the thinnest position on the offense going into 2002 but coaches are hoping that senior Patrick Hughes plays to his potential and a season free of injury would certainly help him with that. Sophomore Paul Irons brings some unique talent to the position and he could win the starting job if Hughes is not solid in preseason drills.

BOTTOM LINE: With all five starters returning, the Florida State offensive line could be one of the finest in school history.

Defensive Line

Florida State's defensive front returns intact from last season and, in fact, the Seminoles return six of the seven starters among last year's front seven (linebackers and defensive line). The return of a veteran group should mean that the defensive unit gets on track sooner than it did a year ago, although the Gator Bowl proved the attacking style was still there.

Alonzo Jackson

FSU's sack numbers were way down last year and part of the reason for that was a more conservative scheme designed to relieve some of the pressure on inexperienced cornerbacks in pass coverage. However, FSU coaches will be focusing a lot of their attention on this unit in the fall as they did in the spring with an emphasis on returning the ferocious pass rush to the game plan.

Leading the defensive line will be All-America candidate Darnell Dockett who should dominate play during his junior season from his defensive tackle spot. Strong, quick and agile, Dockett looks more like a linebacker when he is pursuing the ball. He matured on the football field last season and showed coaches he had the desire to win that is fundamental to a great player. He missed all of spring after a knee injury suffered in the Gator Bowl, but should be 100 percent once the season begins.

Down in the trenches along side Dockett once again will be junior Jeff Womble who also had a fine season last year. Excellent at defending the run, Womble showed pass-rushing skills over the second half of his sophomore season last year that will allow coaches to try some new things this season.

Talent abounds behind the interior stars as well. Redshirt freshman Donnie Carter is listed at second team behind Womble and he is joined by talented senior O.J. Jackson giving coaches a chance to keep a rested player in the lineup. Sophomore Travis Johnson brings excellent experience to his role at defensive tackle as does senior Tony Benford who played very well over the second half of the 2001 season.

NEW COACH FOR DEFENSIVE ENDS

FSU defensive ends will be coached by Jody Allen in 2002 the first "new" coach for the position since the recently retired Jim Gladden took over the spot in 1996.

Allen brings a wealth of experience to the job with over 10 years experience as a collegiate coach. He was a graduate assistant on the FSU staff for the last two years working with the secondary and special teams.

Playing defensive end at Florida State brings a unique level of pressure with the history of great players at the position and senior Alonzo Jackson and junior Kevin Emanuel are back to try and take their place among the all-time greats. The Seminole defense did not get the pressure on the passer they were accustomed to from the ends last year and that is the simple charge for Jackson, Emanuel and their backups in the fall.

The position will be coached by Jody Allen for the first time, but spring proved an easy transition for the veteran assistant who was moving up from a graduate assistant spot. He inherits one real positive this season and that is depth. Charles Howard is an experienced and proven veteran who will push for playing time as will talented sophomore Eric Moore. True freshman Kameron Wimbley and redshirt freshman Willie Jones, who brings a considerable Seminole pedigree, hope to see early playing time as well.

BOTTOM LINE: The pressure is on to keep the pressure on opposing quarterbacks. Coaches hope to turn this unit loose again this year and cause havoc in the passing game.

Derrick Brooks

Linebackers

FSU linebackers coach Joe Kines is another of the assistants on the FSU staff whose challenges have moved 180 degrees from last year. A year ago, he pushed a razor thin linebacking corps through a season with two rookie starters on either side of a solid veteran. This year, Michael Boulware and Kendyll Pope will enter the season as potential stars at their strongside and weakside linebacker spots, respectively. However, veteran Bradley Jennings has left after three years as the starter at middle linebacker.

Both Boulware and Pope entered FSU as players who experts expected to become great players and both have put the work and dedication into becoming just that. With experience has come the ability to cut it loose for the duo rather than focus on mistakes and that seemed to be the key over the second half of last season. They provide the 2002 team with exceptional talent at the positions.

The Gator Bowl win over Virginia Tech did a lot for overall team morale at FSU, but no place was it more satisfying than among the linebackers. Senior Jerel Hudson was thrust into the starting role at middle linebacker over the last two games with an injury to Jennings and his trial by fire proved to be just the motivation he needed. He played very well against both Georgia Tech and Virginia Tech and carried the confidence into the spring where he emerged as the starter leading into fall drills.

Junior Allen Augustin also learned a lot about himself and gave coaches increased reason for optimism by playing spectacularly in his first-ever start in the Gator Bowl. The former walk-on did not learn he would start until Pope could not complete warm-up drills before the game, and he responded with outstanding play. He'll begin the year as Pope's backup along with Marcello Church, whose blocked punt proved to be a pivotal play in the Gator Bowl win.

Senior Robert May enters the fall as the backup to Hudson at middle linebacker, but junior college transfer Nate Hardage will get a chance to show coaches if he is ready during preseason scrimmages.

Ray Piquion, a sophomore, and Corey Collier will compete for reserve roles behind Boulware.

The preseason drills will be interesting at this position as well, as a number of very high profile recruits will be in the mix for the first time with the hope of earning early playing time with the linebacking unit.

BOTTOM LINE: Florida State will have the luxury of depth at linebacker and both Kendyll Pope and Michael Boulware are hoping for All-America type performances. The combination should make the linebackers a much more effective unit than a year ago.

Kendyll Pope

Defensive Backs

The good news for coach Mickey Andrews is that he has four veteran cornerbacks returning who have all seen considerable action for the Seminoles. The bad news is that the middle of the field must be guarded by inexperienced players with the departure of All-ACC free safety Chris Hope and rover Abdul Howard.

One of the keys to the success of the defense that Florida State likes to play it is to put constant pressure on the opposing offenses. To do that, FSU's corner press and play man-toman defense, which leaves them on an island. Last year, FSU coaches were reluctant to put a unit with only one player older than a sophomore through that pressure. This year, starters Stanford Samuels and Rufus Brown, both juniors, will have plenty of help from senior Malcolm Tatum and sophomores, Leroy Smith, Dominic Robinson and Bryant McFadden. The combination of overall experience and the leadership skills developed by Samuels in particular should mean success for the cornerbacks.

The rover position was the site of one of the most intense battles of the spring and that should carry over into the fall. Sophomore Claudius Osei emerged in April at first team rover with fellow sophomore Jerome Carter right on his heels. Both proved to be big hitters who answered quickly when asked to fill in this spring. They will both contribute a lot in 2002.

Sophomore Kyler Hall may have the most power per pound in FSU's lineup this year as he spent all spring winning the free safety position by laying out wide receivers with practice-halting hits. He showed flashes of brilliance on special teams as a true freshman last year and appears headed for an outstanding career at free safety. Junior Yohance Buchanan is listed just ahead of B.J. Ward, who moved back over from receiver in the spring, to add unusually talented depth to the position.

BOTTOM LINE: Mickey Andrews has the numbers and the type of players he likes in the secondary heading into 2002, which for the past 18 years has meant that he will craft one of the best defenses in college football once they get their legs underneath them.

The most overlooked player in college football last year might have been FSU place kicker Xavier Beitia (pronounced Sah-V-ed Bay-THE-uh) who missed just one field goal attempt all season as a true freshman. He has been nothing short of remarkable and finished strong with a 50-yard field goal against Virginia Tech in the Gator Bowl bested by a 51-yarder in the spring game.

Beitia's accuracy and consistency has impressed coaches and changed their philosophy a bit once they cross midfield. He also has the temperament that inspires confidence among his peers who defer to his nickname "X-man" when referring to their rocket-legged teammate.

Also back for his senior year is punter Chance Gwaltney. He's all the way up to weighing 172 pounds and will use his final summer to build strength and size needed for the chore. Pushing him will be freshman Chris Hall who has impressed coaches in practice.

"Having your kicker and punter return seems unusual," said Bowden. "It always seems like we're trying to find one or the other throughout preseason practice so that is a relief. Having a kicker as accurate as Beitia is like having a fifth ace in the deck. I like that."

Last Game-Winning Field Goal

Florida State's last game-winning field goal came in the 1994 Orange Bowl (which concluded the 1993 season) against Nebraska. Freshman Scott Bentley's 22-yard kick on second down with 21 seconds remaining gave the Seminoles an 18-16 victory and their first national championship.
