Quarterbacks

Chris Rix enters his senior campaign with 34 career starts under his belt and at the controls of an offense that with nine starters returning has the potential to be one of the most effective in school history. Rix, who has a 24-10 record as the starter with four of the losses coming at the hands of Miami, will be counted on to make the right decisions at the right time to keep the offensive machine going.

Rix's physical talent is undisputed as he combines a strong arm, great speed, courage and unquestioned toughness. He has received criticism in the past for his decision making on and off the field, and his ability to mature in both areas likely will be a strong predictor of FSU's success this season.

Rix has climbed the FSU record book over his previous three years as the starter and begins his senior campaign ranked second all-time in career passing yardage (7,525), touchdown passes (60) and total offense. He threw for 3,107 yards last year, completing 216 of his 382 passes (56.5 percent). He connected on 23 touchdown passes while throwing 13 interceptions.

The good news for quarterbacks coach Daryl Dickey is that over his career at FSU, Rix has proven both tough and resilient. The bad news is that the lack of depth at the position may have coaches on the edge of their seats each time he takes contact. Wyatt Sexton is the only other returning scholarship quarterback. Sexton redshirted as a true freshman in 2002 and played in just five games last year. His career numbers include just five pass attempts and three completions, but his pedigree raises optimism. The son of long-time FSU running backs coach Billy Sexton, Wyatt has shown good command of the offense over the course of last season and especially this past spring.

FSU's thin lineup at quarterback suggests that either, or perhaps even both, of the highly touted incoming freshman quarterbacks will see playing time this year. Xavier Lee has the physical size at 6-4, 200 pounds to play right away and the state's Mr. Football out of Daytona Beach comes in as one of the most highly regarded players in the country. Drew Weatherford also has the size that suggests he could take the physical aspect of the game and FSU coaches pointed to his unusual maturity and focus as some of the qualities that made him so attractive to them as a high school player.

While there will be tremendous talent at quarterback, there is no question that without Rix in the game, FSU will be very low on experience at the crucial position.

Receivers

Florida State athletic trainer Randy Oravetz's phone might have been the one that Jeff Bowden called most frequently over the summer. The progress of All-America candidate Craphonso Thorpe's recovery from a broken leg suffered in the next to last regular season game in 2003 will play a large part in determining how effective the FSU passing game will be. The news has been all good since Thorpe underwent surgery to stabilize the break in early December and coaches are planning on having the deep threat in the lineup this fall.

Thorpe's world-class speed made him an obvious deep threat, but his emergence as a sure-handed receiver who competes for every ball made him invaluable last year. He already had 51 receptions for 994 yards before breaking the leg in overtime against NC State. With 1,657 career receiving yards, Thorpe's experience and game-breaking ability became even more essential when junior P.K. Sam entered the NFL draft early in April.

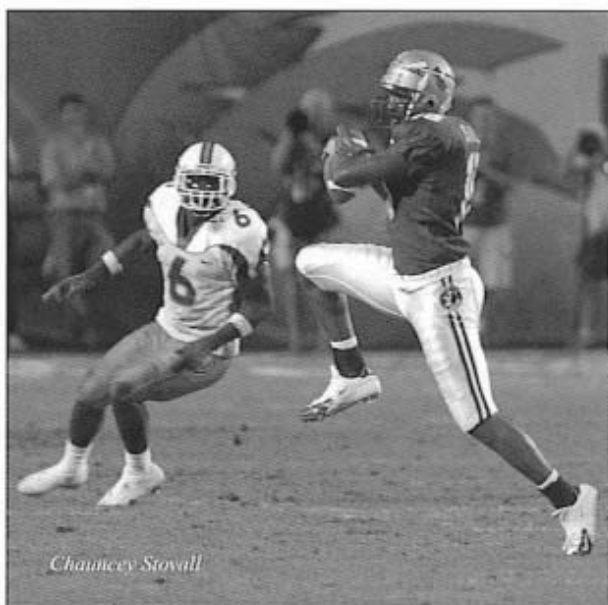

Craphonso Thorpe

Joining Thorpe at the flanker position will be senior Dominic Robinson who has made clutch catches, but lacks blazing speed. Robinson's gutsy snag of Chris Rix's fourth-down pass at Florida preserved the game-winning drive in Gainesville. Sophomore Lorne Sam, who is the younger brother of

P.K., got a lot of work in the spring and should see plenty of opportunities to win playing time in the preseason. Chris Davis' speed is outstanding, but he has yet to shake the injury bug long enough to prove that his potential will pan out.

Chauncey Stovall and Willie Reid will begin preseason camp locked in a battle for starting honors at split end. Stovall, a senior, is big (6-2) and had 19 catches a year ago. He has seen considerable playing time in his two years at FSU and worked on his speed over the summer. Reid, a junior, is more elusive and versatile having played both receiver and running back for the Seminoles. He had 27 catches a year ago and coaches are determined to get him the ball this season. Redshirt freshman Joslin Shaw will be going through his first preseason camp with real playing time on the line, so coaches will want to see how he performs. Newcomer De'Cody Fagg went through spring practice after sitting out of football last fall and brings both size (6-3) and speed to the position.

Nearly all of FSU's top receivers missed spring drills because of injuries so the passing game will have to come together quickly in August for the Seminoles to be effective. FSU coaches are anxious to have the unit work together because they feel good about the depth of talent. The receiving corps will be exceptionally strong if Thorpe is at full speed to start the preseason.

Running Backs

The departure of a three-year starter at running back from any program is difficult to overcome, but FSU's practice of playing a lot of players at each position should pay dividends during this transition. Greg Jones literally left big shoes to fill, but Seminole coaches are excited about the versatility that Leon Washington and Lorenzo Booker bring to the offense.

B.J. Dean

Bobby Bowden's appreciation for junior Leon Washington has been no secret as he has called him perhaps the most valuable player on the team. Washington starred primarily on special teams as a freshman and established himself as one of the nation's top return specialists as a sophomore last year. He also managed to finish second among all FSU rushers with 387 yards on 74 carries (5.2 yards per carry). He will enter the fall listed at first team tailback and with the complete confidence of the FSU coaching staff. Sure-handed as a receiver and a surprisingly effective runner between the tackles, Washington should excel with more opportunities.

Sophomore Lorenzo Booker is also sure to see a lot of action at tailback and his game has been described by experts as polished. Certainly his 334 yards gained on 62 carries a year ago were enough to convince FSU fans that getting him the ball was a good idea. Booker also managed 10 catches for 86 yards out of the backfield and his open field elusiveness leads to big plays. He got the bulk of the work this spring as Washington was out with an injury, and the two should play complimentary roles in exhausting a defense in 2004.

Depth is an issue at tailback with walk-on Marlon Napier the only other returning player listed at the position entering the fall drills. The incoming freshman class will supply Jamaal Edwards (6-0, 202) and Lamar Lewis (5-9, 188) who could see playing time if injuries play a part.

Depth is not an issue at fullback where juniors B.J. Dean and James Coleman shared starting honors a year ago. Dean will enter the fall listed at first team and he has proven he can produce in the big games. Coleman came on strong as a sophomore last year and won playing time with his blocking skills on the practice field. Both are reliable veterans at the position. Sophomore Torrance Washington missed all of last year with an injury and he will use the preseason to reestablish himself and push for playing time. Junior Chad Canfield played on most special teams and saw limited playing time at fullback last year, but he has the ability and mentality to play the position.

Offensive Line

FSU offensive line coach Jimmy Heggins welcomes a rare occurrence in 2004 and that is the return of all five starters along the offensive front. Heggins had to scramble this time last year as he lost four of the five starters, and he must have felt snake bitten this past spring when all but Matt Meinrod missed most of spring with injuries. But the surgeries should be healed and a big reason FSU's offense expects to move the football is the return of the entire offensive line from a year ago.

Alex Barron

Senior All-America candidates anchor the offensive line in tackles Alex Barron and Ray Willis. Barron earned consensus All-America honors as a junior and has been anointed by most of the preseason magazines this year. At 6-6, 308, he plays the challenging split tackle position at FSU with a wing span that seems to stymie his entire side of the field. Willis is equally tough at the tight tackle spot and will be entering his third season at first team with 25 starts, including all 13 games last year to his credit.

Sophomore Mario Henderson started the Orange Bowl game against Miami and managed considerable playing time behind Barron at split tackle last year. He will enter the fall as the backup there again. Redshirt freshman David Overmyer has coaches excited about his potential and they will ask him to backup Willis at the tight tackle.

David Castillo returns at center which is a much bigger statement than it would seem. An outstanding talent and one of the top leaders on the team, Castillo played every game last year with a cast on a broken foot that only served as a distraction for his injured left hand that will require a series of operations once his playing days are over. He received a sixth year of eligibility for missing the 2002 season and will return to his starting role listed with the same class, a junior, that he was a year ago. He will be backed up by sophomore John Frady who answered the bell in crucial situations as a true freshman last year. Converted defensive tackle Brian Ross will get a look here as well.

Senior Bobby Meeks will battle junior Ron Lunford to maintain his starting role at tight guard. The two shared the position last year, while Meeks battled medical conditions that should not be as much a factor in 2004. Junior Matt Heinz missed all of last year with an injury and he will begin this season listed behind both Meeks and Lunford.

Junior Matt Meinrod started every game at split guard last year and was the sole offensive line starter to go through spring drills. He proved extremely effective last year and provides coaches with leadership and savvy at the position. Sophomore Cory Niblock will lineup behind him with Eric Broe also a possibility here.

FSU's young backups along the offensive front got all the work this spring, so the Seminoles will head into fall with returning starters at each position and reserves with some serious practice time in the books.

Tight Ends

The tight end position is as deep and as talented as FSU has enjoyed in years. Three players with considerable experience return and they will team with a Notre Dame transfer to make a formidable group.

Paul Irons is the lone senior among the tight ends and the man to beat for the starting position. Irons is very solid at the spot with excellent run and pass blocking skills. He had six receptions a year ago and started all nine games in which FSU began the game with a formation that included a tight end. Although Coach John Lilly feels very good about Irons, the upperclassman will have to fend off three talented players to hold the position in the fall.

Donnie Carter

Donnie Carter, a 6-4, 255 junior, pushed for the starting position all summer. He had five receptions for 99 yards a year ago, while still adjusting to tight end after playing on the defensive line his first two years on campus. He has excellent speed and good hands. His blocking skills have come a long way and hold the key to playing time for him in 2004. Ditto the agenda for fellow junior Matt Henshaw who also has proven himself an excellent receiver with five catches for 94 yards as a sophomore last year. He doubled Carter's touchdown total with two, including one against Florida and Miami in the Orange Bowl to close the season on a high note.

Matt Root is big (6-6, 249) and anxious. He sat out last season after transferring from Notre Dame. He has the size to be extremely effective at tight end, but is also big enough to provide help along the offensive front if the Seminoles' numbers get too low.

The emergence of FSU tight ends in the passing game over the course of last season made the entire offensive unit much more difficult to defend and they are all back this year. They combined for 21 catches and nearly 300 yards, which should force defenses to play a different strategy in 2004.

Defensive Line

FSU's depth chart was hardest hit among the defense's front seven, with the defensive line losing three of four starters. Odell Haggins and Jody Allen will be able to put players in the lineup with playing experience, but they will have only one who has gone in the game with the weight of starting responsibilities.

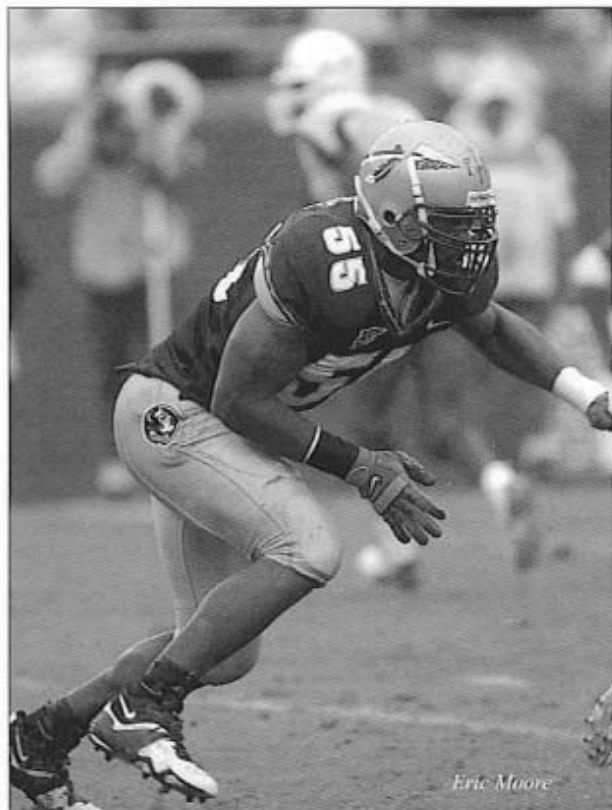

Travis Johnson

Senior Eric Moore must be the leader both during the games and on the practice field. As the lone returning starter, Moore will be asked to lead the defensive front, which seems certain he can do from a performance level. He has the skills to become the next great defensive end from FSU with remarkable speed and great strength. He led the team in quarterback sacks a year ago with 7.5 and has 11.5 over his career. He must be effective from his right end position to give the newcomers time to gain experience alongside him.

Junior Willie Jones changed his jersey number from 29 to 6 and with that probably hopes to shake the injuries that have haunted him since his arrival. He missed all of last year with a leg injury, but should be at full speed as Moore's backup entering 2004. Coaches are pleased with the raw talent they see from redshirt freshman D.J. Norris and Alex Boston, but both need more practice time to adjust to the college game.

defensive end, but both are likely to see plenty of time on the field. Davis transferred from a junior college prior to last year and recorded a pair of sacks while learning the FSU system during 2003. Wimbley was credited with 2.5 sacks over his sophomore year and has seen a lot of playing time over his first two seasons. Sophomore Darrell Burston will also see action at left end.

The interior defensive line is where most of the preseason concern lies and that comes more with the experience lost with the departure of Darnell Dockett and Jeff Womble than any apprehension about the available talent. Seniors Charles Howard and Travis Johnson will use the preseason to decide the starter against Miami in the season-opener. Howard slides inside from the defensive end spot and gives coaches a pass rushing threat up the middle. Johnson has played a lot at nose guard, but will be relied upon to be a leader in 2004. Redshirt freshman Chris Bradwell may play here as well.

Junior Brodrick Bunkley has shown flashes of brilliance and enters this year as the starter at defensive tackle. He will be pushed by sophomore Clifton Dickson. Redshirt freshman Andre Fluellen will try to win the attention of coaches in two-a-days as well.

Linebackers

The fact that FSU must replace all three starting linebackers from last season should mean that the position will be the weak point in 2004. The fact that they are not automatically written in as a top concern attests to the talent depth at the position and the practice of playing younger players in big situations. Because of both, Seminole defensive coaches believe that the linebacking corps may actually emerge as a strength on the defensive side of the football.

A.J. Nicholson

Junior A.J. Nicholson put any doubters to rest early in spring practice this year and finished the 15-day workout as the winner of the Hinesman Award, which goes to the most dominant player during spring practice. He already has a lot of experience at the position and was ninth on the FSU tackle charts last year with 55 tackles (36 solo). Classmate Marcello Church will begin the year behind him at the weakside position and also has game experience, but was slowed at the early part of last season by an injury. Newcomer Barry Wright, a sophomore, will get his first chance to show coaches he's ready to go during preseason drills.

Sam McGrew emerged from spring practice listed at the top spot in the middle of the defense. The junior has shown coaches enough to be excited about his potential, but must prove reliable to hold the pivotal middle linebacker spot. Sophomore Buster Davis was all over the field again during spring and his play making ability has linebacker coach Kevin Steele scheming for a place to get him in the lineup. He'll backup McGrew in the middle to start the year.

Senior Ray Piquion's experience and steady play have earned him the starting nod at strongside linebacker as the team heads into 2004. He saw considerable playing time last year although his 16 total tackles do not really reflect that playing time. Behind Piquion on the depth chart is a player who has everyone around the program buzzing. Sophomore Ernie Sims literally made a big impact as a true freshman last year. His highlight film hit on Miami tight end Kellen Winslow even brought the Hurricane bench to its feet. Sims had 42 tackles last year which ranked him 10th on the FSU tackle chart, and he finished spring as the most valuable player on defense.

Again, it is surprising to think that a program that lost three-year starters Michael Boulware and Kendyll Pope, along with two-year starter Allen Augustin, would not be dreading the coming season, but the wealth of talent returning to the program as well as key signees have FSU defensive coaches planning big things for the defensive unit.

Defensive Backs

Florida State defensive coordinator Mickey Andrews will be able to jump right into the game plan beginning in August as his secondary unit returns three starters as well as key reserves at all but one of the positions heading into 2004.

Jerome Carter should contend for All-America honors at the rover position as he enters his senior season. He is a ferocious hitter who ranked fourth on the team last year with 78 tackles (45 solo, 33 assisted). He is listed above classmate Kyler Hall who also has starting experience at rover and should get plenty of playing time this year. Claudius Osei rounds out the trio of experienced seniors at the position and he too has played a lot of snaps for the Seminoles.

Pat Watkins

Junior Pat Watkins (6-4, 204) used the spring to move ahead of senior returning starter B.J. Ward, so there should be a good battle for starting honors at free safety in August. Watkin's speed and athletic ability have been a practice field legend since he arrived, and he was able to transition that to the game field last year finishing fifth on the team with 62 tackles (45 solo) and his three interceptions tied for the team lead. Ward, who has tied the school record for blocked kicks with seven, is an outstanding athlete who is the more physical of the two. Freshman Roger Williams will find playing time behind the two veterans at the free safety spot.

FSU coaches were forced to play without All-America candidate Bryant McFadden at cornerback over the final two games of last season against Florida and in the Orange Bowl against Miami and it showed. McFadden's groin injury has healed and he gives FSU coaches the outstanding one-on-one cover guy they must have for the system to work. Gerard Ross is a junior behind him and has made steady progress and should be ready for playing time this season. Freshman Jhermaine McAroy made plays on the practice field while redshirting last year and will get a chance to push for playing time based on his performance in preseason practices.

The depth is also solid at right cornerback where Leroy Smith returns to his starting role as a junior. Smith tied Watkins for the team lead with three interceptions and he returned one of them 90 yards for a touchdown at Notre Dame. He has excellent coverage skills and is a sure tackler. Sophomore Antonio Cromartie will enter the season as the backup at right cornerback.

He is as physically talented as any Seminole defensive back in years. He and wide receiver Crapnonso Thorpe are the fastest players on the team and Cromartie normally starts with a height advantage before the ball is snapped as he stands 6-3. He is also one of the nation's top kickoff returners.

FSU history has shown that an experienced secondary means a successful defense. If that recipe continues to work in 2004, the Seminole stoppers could be among the nation's best.

Kickers & Punters

Florida State will begin 2004 with a three-year starter returning at place kicker and a punter who almost won the job to begin last season. Coaches will be searching for a replacement for Brian Sawyer who made every special teams snap for the last four years.

Xavier Beitia will be the man to beat at placekicker, but he will have to prove himself in preseason practice once again. Beitia has hit 77.3 percent (51-of-66) of his field goal attempts over his career with the Seminoles, but has missed (or had blocked) potential game-winning field goals against Miami in 2002, NC State in 2003 and the Hurricanes again late in last year's Orange Bowl. Beitia made 19-of-24 (79.2 %) field goals as a junior last year with a long of 48. He made 19-of-28 as a sophomore and an astonishing 13-of-14 as a true freshman in 2001.

Chris Hall

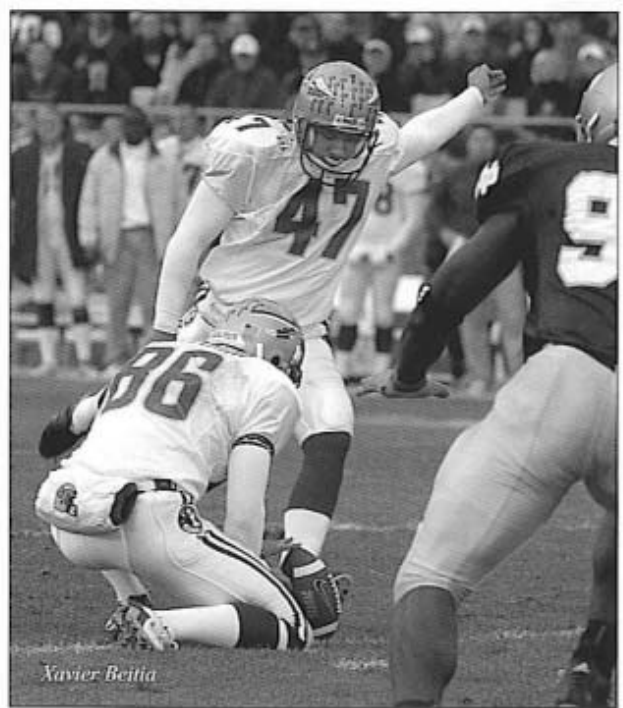

Pushing Beitia right off the bat could be incoming freshman Gary Cismesia. The Bradenton, Florida native made 12-of-14 fields goals last year for Lakewood Ranch High, including all five attempts from beyond the 50-yard line. In addition, over 89% of his kickoffs went for touchbacks as a high school senior.

Coaches feel very good about the potential of junior punter Chris Hall. He was locked in a battle with rising senior Jesse Stein in preseason last year and coaches decided to go with the upperclassmen. Stein had a terrific year at punter in 2003 and coaches feel very comfortable with Hall in that role in 2004.

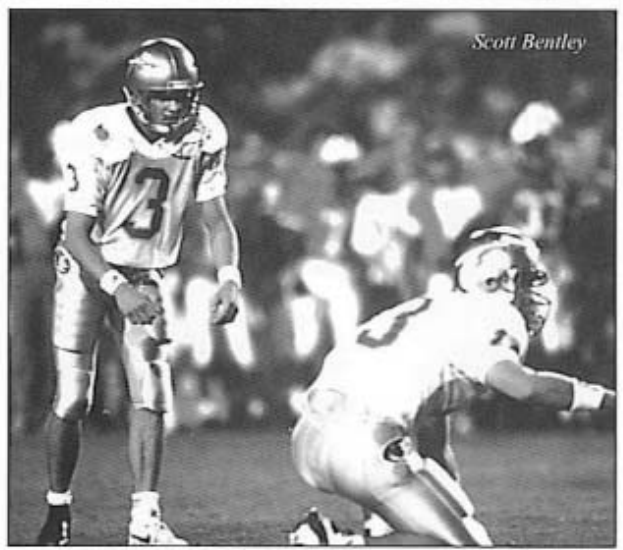

A major concern for the special teams will be replacing Sawyer and his four years of nearly flawless special team's snaps. Former walk-on Myles Hodish won the job during spring drills, but he will feel the pressure in preseason practice to make sure that he is up to the task.

Florida State's kicking game appears solid and could be outstanding if Beitia proves his reliability early in the season. Coaches remain confident that he is an outstanding talent at the position. Punting chores fall into capable hands making getting the snaps to the right places perhaps the biggest item on the agenda in early 2004.

Last Game-Winning Field Goal

Florida State's last game-winning field goal came in the 1994 Orange Bowl (which concluded the 1993 season) against Nebraska. Freshman Scott Bentley's 22-yard kick on second down with 21 seconds remaining gave the Seminoles an 18-16 victory and their first national championship.
