1024 SOUTH MAIN STREET • GAINESVILLE, FLORIDA

Dear Friends:

Today we are pleased to welcome to Florida Field the Seminoles from Florida State University. This will be the sixth football meeting of these two schools in a rivalry that is rapidly becoming one of the most colorful and intensive in the South.

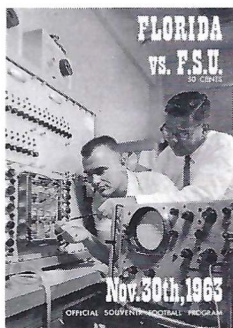

This game also closes the 1963 'Gator football schedule. It has been our pleasure to host many of you on several home dates here in Gainesville and, also, to have the support of many in less familiar surroundings at games played away from home. On behalf of the members of the football squad, Coach Graves, and all of the campus family, I should like to thank you for your support this season and extend our hope that you will return often.

A portion of this program is devoted to the role of research in a modern university. The discovery of new knowledge is vital to the all-important teaching function as well as being a well spring to a progressive society. I believe you will find that this brief article sheds considerable light on this important role of the University.

With best wishes for an enjoyable afternoon, I am

Cordially,

J. Wayne Reitz
President

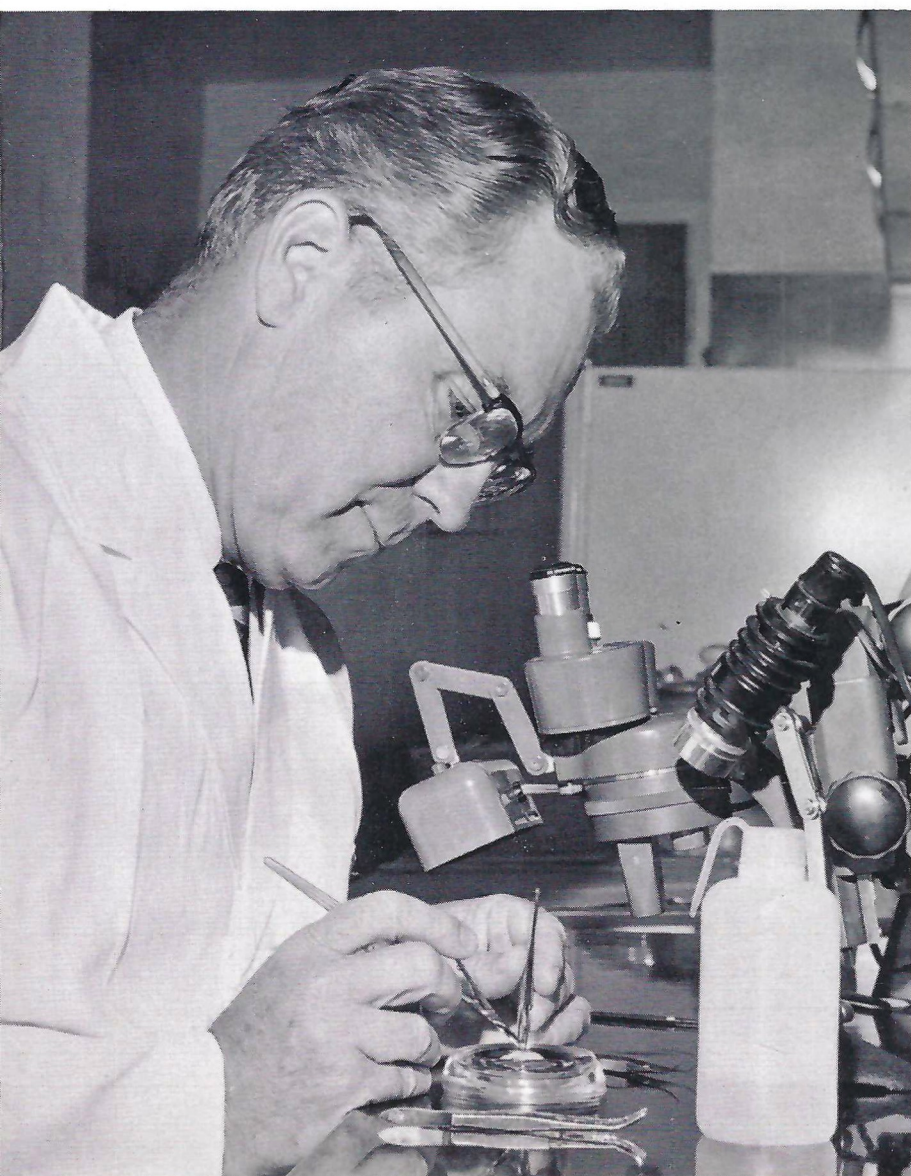

COVER:

RESEARCHING NEW USES for control computers for such diverse studies as papermaking and medical research is the task of University of Florida industrial engineers. The studies will be of great value to Florida and the nation in advancing technology and in providing a new kind of engineering training that is greatly needed. Dr. Robert J. Wimmert (right), Head of Industrial Engineering in the College of Engineering, shows student Charles E. Anderson, Jr., of Jacksonville, new equipment in the Systems Engineering Laboratory which is the first of its kind in the Southeast and only one of two in the nation.

Why Research . . . ?

“Research and education are equally important objectives of a great university. Both of these objectives have the task of producing new knowledge and then of disseminating it. Thus, research is a major activity at the University of Florida. Its annual volume of about thirteen million dollars represents research investigations in every college of the University. In fact, one-half of the entire research program is now sustained by outside sponsorship. Without this outside support in science, the University would find it even more difficult to sustain scholarly studies and research in the important areas of humanities and social sciences where sponsored projects are relatively few in number.” — DR. LINTON E. GRINTER, Dean of the Graduate School and Director of Research.

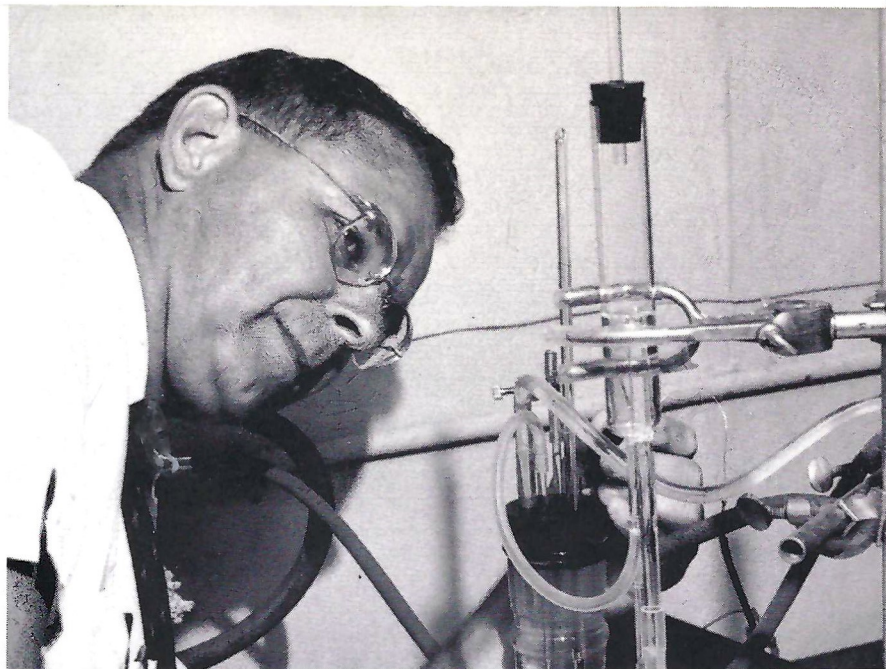

“Research, to me, is the challenge of devising ways to reveal truth, or, to separate truth from supposition. It is the opportunity to make a contribution to man’s store of knowledge.

The privilege of doing research is certainly one of the more gratifying aspects of academic life . . . and while it may bring prestige and material benefits to the University and to the individual, it is at the personal level that it brings the best rewards . . . It offers the research worker the chance to satisfy his curiosity about the nature of things.” DR. JAMES G. WILSON, Professor of Anatomy in the College of Medicine and Head of the Department of Anatomy.

Dr. James G. Wilson, left, is currently engaged in continuing research into congenital abnormalities.

Robert D. Walker, professor of chemical engineering and research professor, Engineering and Industrial Experiment Station, whose "fuel cell," currently being researched, combines the efficiency of electrical power systems with the mobility of portable fuel supply.

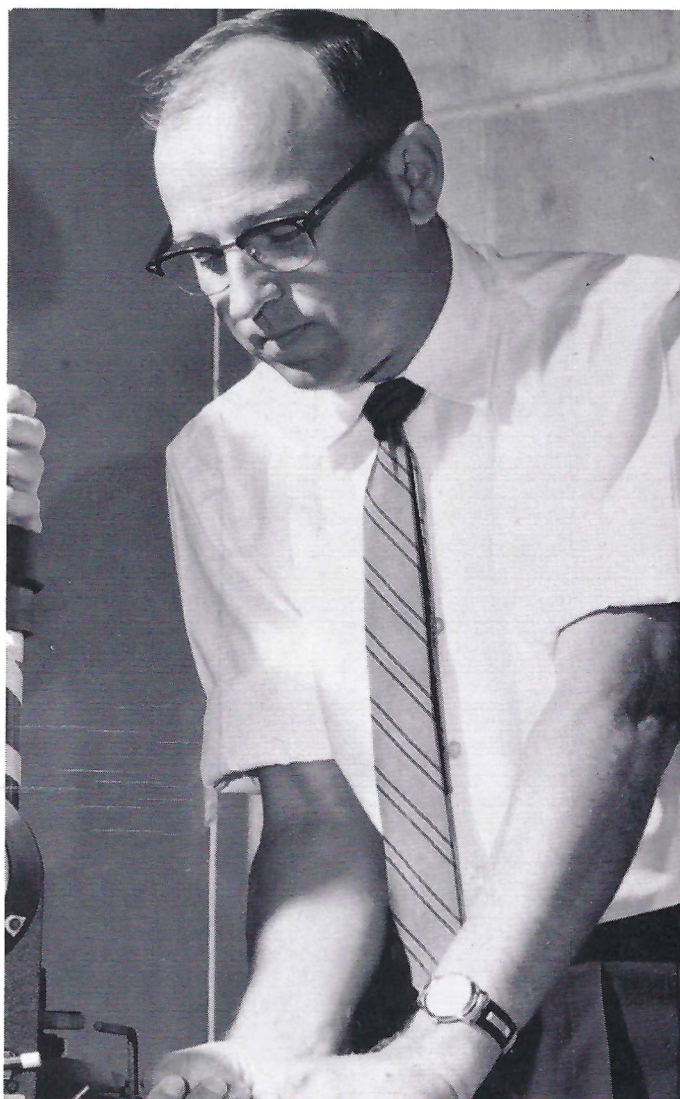

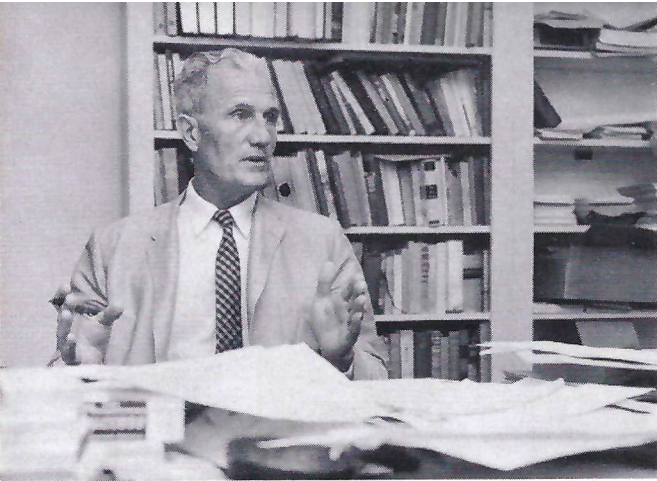

New types of elastomers, which have space related application, and work incorporating fluorine into high energy propellents for rocket fuels are among the principal interests of Dr. Paul Tarrant, Professor of Chemistry.

THERE ARE two kinds of research, that may differ only with respect to the motivation behind them. One we call applied research, or directed research. This seeks, from the start, to find answers directly applicable to human betterment. This kind of research can be as profound and creative as any. We owe much of our progress directly to this kind of research.

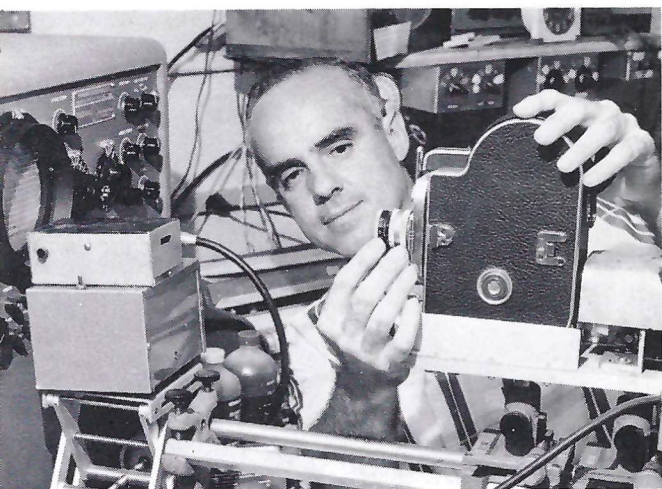

But there is another kind of study in which the only motivation is the intellectual curiosity of the investigator, and which progresses along any lines that seem to him most challenging or stimulating. This kind, known rather vaguely as "pure" or "basic" research, is really not different from scholarship in any field. Both these processes are necessary. To deprecate research because it has a practical goal is thoughtless. To chide the scholar because he has no practical goal in sight, to stop the learning process anywhere short of knowing the knowable, is failing to keep faith with human destiny.

The results of any research—no matter how impractical it may seem—are likely to become materially valuable, eventually. But to reason that all scholarship must seek practical results is probably, in the end, fatal to the intellectual growth of man.

Pushing back the horizons in the geographical world which still are not fully known, Dr. Raymond E. Crist, graduate research professor of geography, plans continuing studies to fill in the gaps in data of Andean America. His work will serve not only as field training for younger men but will result in further basic research.

Listening to radio signals from the planet Jupiter between midnight and dawn, Dr. Alexander G. Smith, professor of physics and assistant dean of the Graduate School, is collecting information to make vast dollar savings for the nation's space explorations.

Dr. A. D. Wallace, professor of mathematics, is conducting research on relation theory in topological spaces and is also conducting a course on the subject for doctoral students. The course is the only one of its kind in the U. S. and points to the University's growing programs of basic research in mathematics.

THE UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA is one of three academic institutions in the country with all of its colleges and schools located on one campus. Consequently its research programs comprise one vast complex, reaching into all areas of interest in the natural sciences and humanistic-social studies.

Such an all-encompassing program—so varied in its activities and implications—places the University in a strategic situation for service to the state, the nation, and the world at large.

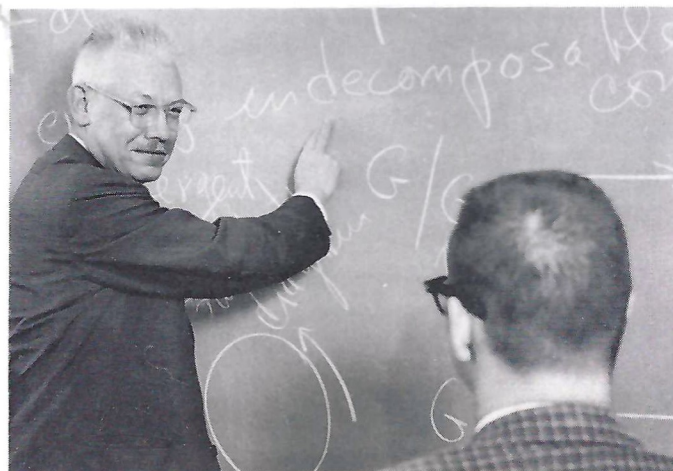

RESEARCH AND STATE DEVELOPMENT

Research and graduate education is fundamental in the development of any state to its full capacity. The University of Florida is already making significant contributions to the State of Florida, contributions that are increasing, and, with the full weight of their effectiveness, steadily becoming more apparent.

RESEARCH AND THE SPACE AGE.

Because virtually all branches of physical science, biological science, social science, and engineering are heavily involved in the space effort, no one segment can be said to be most contributory. The need is not for new directions of space research, but for more intensive inquiry and quicker application to space utilization of the results of universal research.

Ray Graves

Head Football Coach

Ray Graves, an enthusiastic recruiter, speaker, athletic director and head football coach, has in the brief span of three years pumped new life into the football and overall athletic situation at the University of Florida.

In these years he has compiled an outstanding 20-11-1 gridiron record against top SEC powers, plus the best of the independents.

He has fielded two bowl teams, both winners.

His 1960 team compiled the finest record in Florida football history (9-2), best SEC record (5-1) and captured a 13-12 thriller over Baylor in the Gator Bowl.

As Athletic Director, Graves has seen Florida teams compile the highest winning percentage in the SEC over this three-year period, winning over 69 percent of all athletic contests.

Graves came to Florida from Georgia Tech, where he was an assistant coach from 1947-57, and assistant head coach from 1957-60.

In addition to coaching at Georgia Tech, Graves was line coach at Tennessee from 1944-45 and a scout for the Philadelphia Eagles in 1946.

A star center during his playing career, Graves was captain of his high school, college (Tennessee) and pro (Eagles) teams.

Graves' bowl record as player and coach matches any in the country. He played on Tennessee teams in the 1939 Orange Bowl, 1940 Sugar Bowl and 1941 Rose Bowl.

As an assistant coach he helped guide teams which appeared twice in the Orange Bowl, three times in the Sugar Bowl, twice in the Gator Bowl and one in the Cotton and Rose Bowls. Now he has added two Gator Bowl trips as head of the Gators.

Graves graduated from Tennessee in 1942. He married the former Opal Richardson of Tazewell, Tenn., Nov. 3, 1942 and they have three lovely daughters—Rebecca Ann (Becky) 19, Katherine Gibbs (Kathy) 16, and Elizabeth Greer (Beth) 13.

We like the State we're in

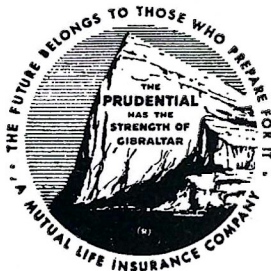

In 1953 we of the Prudential established our South-Central Home Office in Florida. The years since then have been busy ones for us. We have grown as the state has grown. And it's wonderful living and working along with our neighbors in the Sunshine State.

No one is ever very far from a Prudential neighbor. There are more than 2,500 of us serving you in 47 offices throughout the state. More than 676,000 of our fellow Floridians are our policyholders. Last year we paid $40.4 million to Prudential policyholders and beneficiaries in Florida.

We have invested approximately $450 million in Florida homes, businesses and industries. Every dollar of it proves our faith in Florida's bright future.

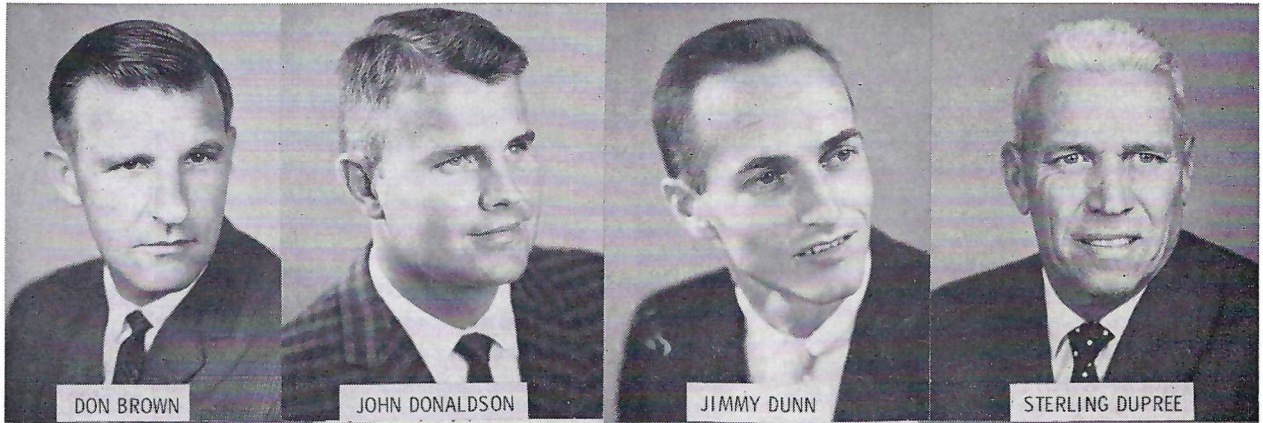

It's good to be here!

What does she mean "cigars...cigarettes...Tiparillos"?

You'll be hearing that chant more and more—now that Tiparillos have arrived. And arrived they have. In all the right places. With all the right people.

The new Tiparillo has a neat, trim shape. It looks young and debonair. And its pearly, pliable tip pays more than lip service to your smoking pleasure.

And never before such mildness! The most careful blending of choicest imported tobaccos has seen to that. So, too, has the exclusive, veinless Ultra Cigar Wrapper* that burns so evenly and smoothly it insures complete mildness.

You can even see the mildness. The surprisingly whiter ash is visible evidence. Smoker's proof. Here is flavor you don't have to inhale to enjoy.

"Cigars...cigarettes...?" Who knows, maybe someday it will be just "Tiparillos!"

Why don't you ask for one today?

*T.M. GENERAL CIGAR CO.

Tiparillos are on sale at this stadium.

Last year, Florida and FSU took the field with many young and relatively unknown Gators on hand as spectators.

These boys, who watched the Bruce Starlings, Hagood Clarkes, Tom Shannons and Larry Duprees take the spotlight, were members of the Florida B-Squad.

Each week this squad has the assignment of running opposing team defenses and offenses. An unglamorous task at best, and not one designed to keep morale of the ambitious, youthful athlete at a peak.

They don't get any headlines and no doubt these boys wonder if anybody ever notices they are on the practice field.

Put through their paces under an outstanding coaching job by John Eibner, the B-Team is a vital component in a football coaching and teaching system.

"Just because they don't get the headlines doesn't mean they are not given attention by our coaches," says head Gator Ray Graves.

"Our offensive coaches notice the B-team boys who look good on defense against them. The defensive coaches are aware of what a B-teamer is doing against them, offensively."

And the man who notices these boys the most is Graves. In moving from practice group to practice group, Coach Graves is able to observe the efforts and progress of every man on the squad.

The question is often raised over whether or not B-Team players ever get a good shot at playing on the top Gator units.

So, let's go back to last year's Florida-FSU game again for an answer.

B-team spectators at the game included guard Larry Beckman, center Gary Cliett, end Barry Brown, defensive back Ken Russell, halfbacks Allen Trammell, Alan Poe and Dick Kirk.

All of these boys have earned the headlines this year playing on the top Gator units.

There are many boys here today who will be stars by the time the 1964 Florida-FSU game rolls around. Graves and his staff have paid particular attention to many B-team boys who are expected to be of big help to next year's varsity.

Names you might as well start learning include halfback-fullback John Feiber of Gainesville, halfback John Watson, fullback Marquis Baeszler, quarterback Wayne McDaniel, ends Don Barrett and Neal Sneed, tackles John Horton, Dennis Tschetter and Sam Ford, guard Phil Maggio, center Wayne Waldrip . . . and many more.

This is the sixth meeting between Florida and FSU, with the Gators ahead in the series, 4-0-1. It has developed rapidly into one of the better rivalries in the Deep South.

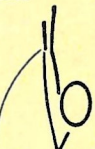

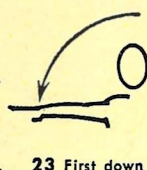

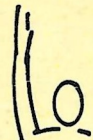

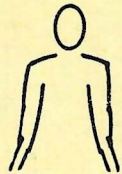

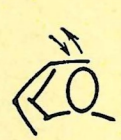

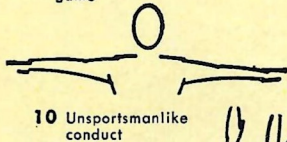

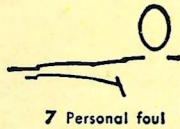

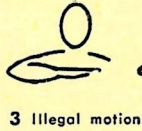

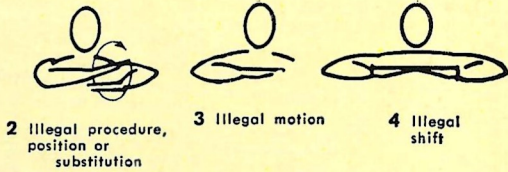

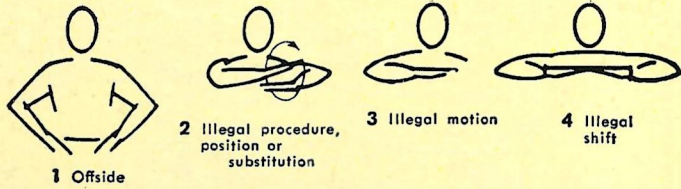

Gator wins have been 21-7 (1958), 18-8 (1959), 3-0 (1960), 20-7 (1962) and the tie was 3-3 in 1961.

The teams have three opponents in common this year, Miami, Georgia Tech and Auburn. FSU beat Miami, 24-0, lost to Georgia Tech, 15-7, and Auburn, 21-15.

Florida lost to Georgia Tech, 9-0, and Auburn, 19-0, while stopping Miami, 27-21.

“Educational Value of Physical Fitness”

by JUSTICE BYRON R. WHITE of a strong and immediate challenge. Games resemble life in capsule form, and the participant quickly learns that his performance depends upon the development of strength, stamina, self-discipline and a sure and steady judgment.

Unfortunately, our educational system does not expose all boys and girls to such experiences. Many youngsters have little opportunity to develop strong, efficient bodies, or to engage in activities which would help them to discover and develop the resources of physical, mental and moral strength which lie hidden in all of us. In many school sports and physical activity programs, the best facilities, topflight instruction and enthusiastic public support are reserved for those who need them least—the skilled athletes.

The result has been a steady decline in the physical fitness of all but our most athletic children. When 200,000 pupils in five states were given physical fitness tests in 1961, nearly one-third of them failed to meet minimum standards for strength, agility and flexibility. In a recent comparison of fitness tests results from Japan, Nationalist China, Okinawa and the United States, American boys and girls ranked last in strength and endurance.

This situation constitutes a serious threat to the continued growth and freedom of America. A nation is merely the sum of all its citizens, and its strength, vigor and vitality can be no greater than ours. Fortunately, there is a way to solve this problem. Through the efforts of the President and his Council on Physical Fitness, a program has been developed which already is improving the health and physical fitness of many of our children. I strongly urge you to see that your school offers such a program.

The program has the support of 19 leading medical and educational organizations, and it is not expensive in terms of time, money or staff. It calls for periodic health appraisals for all pupils, a screening process for identifying physically underdeveloped children, at least 15 minutes of vigorous physical activity each day for all boys and girls, and regular achievement tests to measure progress and to provide incentive. You, your schools and your community can afford such a program, and your youngsters and your country cannot afford to be without it.

From my first high school game for Wellington, Colorado, more than 30 years ago to my final game with the Detroit Lions in 1941, football played an important role in my life. It was responsible for much that I enjoyed and did at the University of Colorado, and it enabled me to get an education in law at Yale. I have more reason than most people to love the game and to appreciate its values.

Because of this, I am always disappointed when people express surprise when they find former football players occupying responsible positions in public life. They seem to think it incongruous that a person once noted primarily for his ability on the playing field should later aspire to a significant role in real life. I am sure this thinking arises out of serious misapprehension.

Sports and other forms of vigorous physical activity provide educational experiences which cannot be duplicated in the classroom. They are an uncompromising laboratory in which we must think and act quickly and efficiently under pressure, and they force us to meet our own inadequacies face to face—and to do something about them—as nothing else does.

In any athletic activity, we are thrown upon our own resources to succeed or fail in the face

GO GATOR BASKETBALL, 1963

Tom Baxley and Brooks Henderson
Coach Norm Sloan

The "new look" basketball Gators of Coach Norm Sloan could well be a darkhorse candidate in what shapes up as an outstanding year of Southeastern Conference court activity.

Sloan, a dynamic and spirited leader, has moved Florida quickly up the ranks in basketball, from a league doormat to a highly-respected and feared opponent for the best of them.

Mark 1963-64 as a year of opportunity for the Gators. Back is perhaps the league's top guard combination, Tom Baxley and Brooks Henderson. Mix with veterans like Mont Highly, Dick Tomlinson, Bill Koss and Bob Hoffman and season lightly with newcomers John Morton, Richard Peek, Gary Keller and Bruce Moore and nights should be exciting for Florida fans.

A home schedule which includes traditional rivals FSU and Miami, national power Tulsa, and SEC kingpins Auburn, Kentucky and Georgia Tech, is one of the finest ever held at Florida Gym.

Beset with injuries and illness, Sloan's 1963 squad, when together, could go with the best of them, as witnessed by a 21-point lacing of conference champion Mississippi State.

Most of the leaders of that team are back as Florida heads into what could be one of its most interesting basketball seasons yet.

Why Research?

"In research we are probing into the unknown with the profound excitement that comes from seeing deeper into the basic mysteries of life . . . Research gives me, personally, freedom to use my imagination and the satisfaction of seeing my ideas come to fruition. . . . Every man wants to create. Research is a means of creation. . . . I hope that through my efforts in the laboratory I am serving God and perhaps making a contribution to mankind. . . ."—DR. ALVIN T. WALLACE

Dr. Alvin T. Wallace, geneticist and Head of the Plant Science Unit of the Agricultural Experiment Stations, with research associates, used atomic radiation to develop a disease resistant oat which has influenced the agricultural economy of Florida.

Although the literature in all areas of research, whether physical or social, is continuing to broaden, there is no diminishing of its need. Essential is the development of its primary requisite—the tools with which the horizons will be pushed farther back—men. Students trained to meet the mounting problems are as necessary to the University's research programs as its libraries, its experimental areas, its atomic reactor, its electronic computers.

It is within this realm of producing the scholars to guide future achievements on this planet—and the other planets that most likely will fall into man's domain—that the University of Florida dedicates its research endeavors.

Navigational aids that direct Caribbean sea turtles to pinpoints of land thousands of miles away not only interest Dr. Archie F. Carr, Graduate Research Professor in Biology, but the U. S. Navy as well. His interest in turtle conservation, recognized around the world, will prove far-reaching economic effects in the Caribbean.

“The research I am primarily interested in is what would be known as basic research, investigation for the sake of gratifying curiosity, of intellectual adventure, or adding to knowledge, of coming to know more about a section of one’s discipline than anybody else knows. Such studies nearly always turn out, in the long run, to have bearing upon human welfare, but this is not their primary aim. Once it becomes the primary aim, the research becomes by definition not basic, but applied. Applied studies may, of course, be every bit as creative and ingenious as the unapplied kind.

“In fact, the two kinds mix completely at the edges, and at any unexpected time, one may turn into the other. But I think it is important to distinguish between them all the same, if only to emphasize that there is a sort of research which, though not in any conceivable way likely to advance our physical well being, must nevertheless be supported, encouraged, and allowed complete freedom to go where it will.” — DR. ARCHIE CARR, Graduate Research Professor of Biology.

Dr. David T. Williams of the Department of Aerospace Engineering is working with plastic sheets to develop a reflecting surface which can be used for very large and very lightweight space mirrors in orbiting telescopes. Dr. Williams believes that such a telescope could make possible better pictures of the moon than can now be obtained.

Three ways to quarterback the most important drive of the day —your drive home

1. Don't buck the line of traffic, stay in it. Fancy open field running doesn't pay on the highway.
2. When dusk falls and your visibility is limited, slow down and turn on your lights. What you can't see can hurt you.
3. Don't try to beat the clock by speeding. Remember, when time runs out on the highway, everybody loses.
