9 A Dean's View

Florida State opens Pitt's 1972 season today at The Stadium, boosting one of the most explosive passing attacks in the nation. The Seminoles whipped Pitt, 31-13, last season, but the Panthers appear to be a vastly improved team this time. Pitt Sports Information Director, Dean Billick, tells what to expect today.

11 Someone Who Knows

Pitt coach Carl DePasqua has come out strongly in favor of the new NCAA rule permitting freshmen to play on the varsity. DePasqua should know what he's talking about. He once started for Pitt as a freshman. This article tells why he likes the freshman eligibility rule.

13 Superstars of Sports

The Pitt band welcomes a new director today, and in his first show the band will perform a salute to the Olympic athletes.

15 Pitt Coaching Staff

17 'White Paper'

This past year, the University released a 'White Paper' report on intercollegiate athletics at Pitt. The report was prepared by the University Athletic Committee and released by Dr. Edward Blakely, assistant to the Chancellor. Excerpts from this report are reprinted in this feature.

26 Pitt Jewels

The University of Pittsburgh boasts four regional campuses in addition to the main school in Oakland. Each of the four campuses is unique to itself, yet integral to the Oakland campus. This article tells something about these four regional campuses—Bradford, Greensburg, Johnstown and Titusville.

39 Campus Afloat

Florida State students participated this past summer in a trip overseas on a unique floating campus. The students returned with a new appreciation for the United States, and this feature tells why.

The Wishbone Vs. The Pass

By Dean Billick

How do you prefer your football. On the ground or via the airways?

No matter your answer, Pitt Stadium is the place to find both today when Wishbone-T oriented Pitt opens the 1972 season against air-minded powerhouse, Florida State.

"Florida State has an exceptional pass offense," Pitt coach Carl DePasqua notes in somewhat of an understatement. "They can score from anyplace on the field."

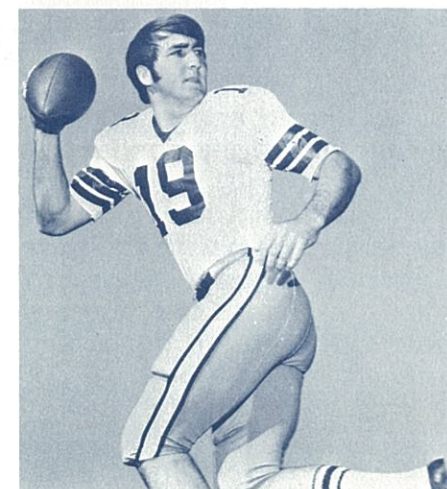

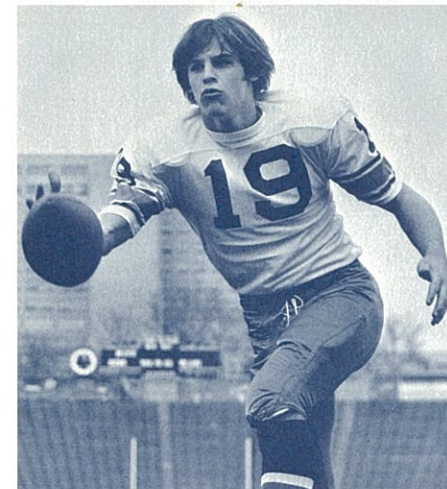

How right! The Seminoles have led the nation in passing over the past five-year period, averaging 260.9 yards per game, nearly 30 yards more than the second place team, Stanford. And back to further embellish that record is quarterback Gary Huff, a leading Heisman Trophy candidate and the nation's total offense leader last season with 241.2 yards per contest.

"Gary is the best college quarterback I've ever seen," says his coach Larry Jones. "He has all the physical tools, is mature beyond his years and knows the game. His coolness under fire is remarkable. In fact, I've never seen a quarterback who can face a rush and still do the job as well as Gary."

Huff's leading target will be senior speedster Barry Smith who Seminole fans feel is one of the best receivers in the country. Last season Smith caught 33 passes for 696 yards and six touchdowns. He averaged 21.1 yards per reception, fourth best in the country for receivers who averaged as many as three catches per game.

Against that aerial offensive assault, Pitt will counter with its newly installed Wishbone-T, an offense that normally runs before it passes. Junior Bob Medwid, a 6-2½, 190-pounder, will get the call at quarterback to engineer the new attack. Medwid is considered an excellent runner, and his presence would give four striking threats in the backfield.

"In order to stop an explosive team like Florida State, you've got to keep the ball from them," DePasqua theorizes. "We've got to control the tempo of the game."

That would seem to imply that Pitt will try to slug it out up front with the Seminoles, something the Panthers were able to do for 219 yards last season in a 31-13 loss. But, the Wishbone also could offer Pitt fans an exciting outside running attack, and DePasqua isn't counting out the possibility of an aerial show from his quarterback either.

Right behind Medwid, stands senior John Hogan, an outstanding passer who is also adept at ball handling off the Wishbone. In short, Pitt could show its 1972 fans a wide open offense.

"We're a better football team than last year," DePasqua said earlier this week as he prepped his fourth Pitt entry. "Defensively, we appear to be improved in all areas, and I'm satisfied with the progress of the Wishbone. We still need to polish our timing and execution, but the improvement is steady."

Pitt will show a veteran team against Florida State, both offensively and defensively. It will also be a big team. The Panthers will average 6-3, 234 pounds in the defensive front five, and 6-2½, 233-pounds in the interior offensive front five. That's big, by college standards.

Experience wise, the Panthers are expected to start six seniors, 13 juniors and only three sophomores. The newcomers expected to get the call against Florida State are Dave Jancisin (6-5, 242) at defensive tackle, Mike Bulino (6-0, 192) at defensive halfback, and Dave Janasek (6-2, 210) at fullback.

Pitt's bevy of good running backs waged a strong battle for starting jobs at the fall camp at Johnstown. Winning starting roles were junior halfbacks Bill Englert and Lou Cecconi, Jr., in addition to Janasek at fullback and Medwid at quarterback. Right behind the halfbacks are juniors Clair Wilson and Stan Ostrowski and sophomore speedster, Bruce Murphy. At fullback, the backup man is sophomore, Dan Smith.

"Everything we've done so far has been against ourselves, so it's tough to tell how much we're improved," says DePasqua. "We'll know after Saturday."

It should be quite an opener.

Lou Mervis (Bus'21), former grid great who played under Pop Warner from 1917 to 1919, has established a $2 million trust fund for the University of Pittsburgh's Graduate School of Business. Having owned and headed several corporations locally, he still serves on the boards of directors of a number of banks and hospitals in Pittsburgh and elsewhere though he and his wife, Myra, have resided in Miami Beach for nearly ten years.

Pitt alumni hold important, interesting and vital jobs throughout the world, and keeping track of them is part of our responsibility. It's no easy task. Pitt graduates are spread throughout 50 states and more than 101 foreign nations. Whatever they do, we like to know about it. The Office of Development and Alumni Affairs conducts alumni tours of both the campus and the world, sponsors continuing education programs, provides alumni with a quarterly newspaper through which they can keep up with their former classmates and activities on campus, engages in fund-raising activities, and arranges reunions, meetings and gatherings of all sorts. If you're a Pitt graduate and you haven't heard from your alma mater recently, it may be that we don't know where you are. Why not drop a line and tell us?

DePasqua Favors New Frosh Rule

BY DEAN BILLICK

Carl DePasqua remembers it well.

"We had about 150 players at camp. It was right after the war, and all the GIs were returning. It was a tough camp and we all lived in tents. As a freshman, you started out as a nobody, and you just worked, worked. It was like a dream come true when I found out I was going to start the first game. I don't remember too much about the game except that I wanted to play well for the coach who showed enough confidence in me to start me as a freshman. It was a thrill."

The year was 1946 and a 5-9, 155-pound freshman named Carl DePasqua started at quarterback for Pitt against Big Ten powerhouse and eventual Rose Bowl champion, Illinois. Perhaps it is best his memory is a little hazy on details. It was 93 degrees hot in Pitt Stadium that day, and in all, eight freshmen started for Pitt. The final score was Illinois 33, Pitt 7.

DePasqua managed to pick up only 14 yards on six carries, and completed just 2-9 passes for 32 yards. Perhaps, the details are best forgotten. But the memory and impression on Pitt's head coach today, is not.

Add Carl DePasqua to that list of college coaches who favor the recently passed freshman rule. If empathy and past experience mean anything, there will be 23 Pitt freshmen who have got to feel good this fall. Their head boss is secretly pulling for them to make it.

"As a coach I'm excited about the new rule permitting freshmen to play," DePasqua says. "I think it's a good rule. I'm not saying we have anyone who'll make our first team this year, but they'll at least have an opportunity to make the traveling squad."

Would DePasqua be afraid of starting a freshman against Florida State?

"He'd have to be awfully good," the

Carl DePasqua

... knows the feeling

Pitt coach notes. "But if he's capable, I'd start him. Why not? I experienced it, so I think I know what to expect."

DePasqua doesn't agree, either, with the coaches who feel a freshman isn't prepared mentally to handle a varsity role.

"This is a different student who's entering college today," he says. "They're much smarter than we were, and also much more mature physically. I think they can handle it. I know here at Pitt we are going to make sure of that by still maintaining our freshman academic program of counseling and study halls."

Pitt will play a three-game junior varsity schedule this fall, replacing the normal three-game freshman season. Under the new NCAA rules, a player will be permitted to compete on both the junior varsity and varsity teams as long as his total games in one season do not exceed 11.

DePasqua has indicated he will use the players he feels needs the experience for the makeup of his jayvee squad. The Panther jayvees will open Sept. 22 at West Virginia, play at home Oct. 13 vs. Maryland, and then close their season Oct. 27 at Kent State.

Experience, they say, is the best teacher. With all the 'pious' statements against the freshman rule, maybe some of today's college coaches ought to ask somebody who really knows. Somebody who has been through it before.

The University of Pittsburgh Varsity Marching Band

Hower Named New Director

Everybody's getting on the new look bandwagon this year at Pitt, the Panthers with their Wishbone-T offense and the Varsity Marching Band with a new director.

Donald E. Hower, the new director, comes to Pitt from Ohio State University, where he was serving as the assistant marching band director.

In addition to directing experience in Ohio, the thirty-year-old Hower has his Bachelor of Science degree in Music Education from Ohio State and a Master's in Musical History from Temple University. He is presently working on his Ph.D., and has accumulated credits towards it from Temple.

Hower says, "the band's main function will still be to support the Panthers at their games and perhaps attend a few local high schools." He also notes "there will be no noticeable changes in the marching band."

Dedicated to Putting Pitt Back on Top

Carl DePasqua was named head football coach at Pitt in 1969 and in three short years has taken the Panthers from the brinks of disaster back to competitive, fundamentally solid football.

Yes, DePasqua has taken giant steps to restore Pitt's tarnished gridiron image, but the real payoff is yet to come. He is dedicated to putting Pitt back on top—a winning, bowl-producing program.

On paper, Pitt's progress under DePasqua might not seem spectacular—12-19 in three years. But in football circles, among people who knew the Pitt story, it has been unqualified success.

It is hard to imagine any football coach who took a job under more difficult circumstances. A national sports magazine had headlined the story, "Doesn't Anybody Here Want This Football Job?"

Pitt, once a power in major college football circles, had reached an all-time low. In three years, the Panthers had lost 27 of 30 games, most of them by unbelievably large margins.

Three 'big name' coaches were offered the job, but turned it down. Then Pitt turned to one of its own—alumnus Carl DePasqua. The task was monumental but nothing that hard work and fundamentally sound football couldn't cure. In his first year, DePasqua immediately made the Panthers respectable again with a 4-6 record that included wins over Eastern rivals Syracuse, Army and Navy.

The improvement continued in 1970 when Pitt compiled its first non-losing season since 1963 with a 5-5 record. At one point until injuries struck a stunning blow, Pitt was 5-1, Number One ranked in the East and listed in the nation's Top Twenty for the first time in seven years.

Last season DePasqua tried vainly to match a sophomore-dominated team against one of the nation's strongest schedules. Pitt fell into a disappointing 3-8 mark, but DePasqua is confident the experience gained by the sophomores will pay dividends this fall.

DePasqua is the seventh former Panther player to return to his alma mater as head coach. An outstanding Pitt back from 1946-49, he played under Wes Fesler (1946) and Mike Milligan. Coming to Pitt from Williamsport High School where he captained both the football and basketball teams to brilliant records, DePasqua was a starting quarterback as a freshman, a halfback as a sophomore, and then a fullback on two winning teams as a junior and a senior. All this while weighing only 160 pounds.

Following graduation from Pitt in 1950, DePasqua spent two years in the Army and then returned to Pitt to earn a Master's degree and coach part-time. He coached in Canada in 1955, went into the pizza business in Pittsburgh for two years, and then joined John Michelosen's Pitt staff in 1958.

After eight years as a defensive specialist on the Pitt staff, DePasqua was named head coach at Waynesburg (Pa.) College in 1966, where he produced two of the finest small college teams in the nation. In two years his teams lost just once (17-1) while winning the NAIA championship his first year and losing 7-0 to the eventual national champions his second season.

From Waynesburg, DePasqua gained valuable experience on the professional level by joining the Pittsburgh Steeler staff in 1968 as the defensive line coach.

A resident of Pittsburgh, he and his wife, Catherine, have two children—Dana, 15; and John, 7. DePasqua was born October 28, 1927.

'White Paper' Praises Athletic Program

Following is a 'White-Paper' report on intercollegiate athletics at Pitt. The report was prepared by the University Athletic Committee and recently released by Dr. Edward Blakely, assistant to the Chancellor.

Students, faculty, alumni, and the Pittsburgh and greater Western Pennsylvania community generally support Pitt's sports program. Sports are considered by most residents as part of the college's basic extra curricular activity.

The majority of students and alumni appear in favor of Pitt's programs as presently constituted, but it must be recognized that some are losing patience with our apparent shortcomings. The faculty has some genuine reservations regarding the scope and purpose of the athletic program. However, in spite of these questions many faculty support both intramural as well as intercollegiate athletics.

There is little doubt that the Pitt football program, among all sports has the most direct impact on public attitude towards the University. Perhaps this is a geographic, Western Pennsylvania, phenomenon. This area is one of the nation's football citadels. Our own students tend to relate with each team victory and defeat as if it were their own accomplishment or failure. Student body spirit is undoubtedly affected among all segments of our diverse campus by a winning football team.

There is little doubt that alumni read, see or hear of our athletic teams frequently and use games, particularly football as events to occasion return visits to the campus. There are many more academic and professional interests in the institution. However, we can and should capitalize on the fact that athletics is one method of reaching many individuals we cannot or do not reach in any other way. Further, the value of national publicity of our athletic teams and individual athletes is difficult to calculate. Pitt's teams are well known and receive significant coverage on the sports pages of every major newspaper in the country. Some of this publicity undoubtedly assists in public recognition which generally benefits the institution via alumni contributions, student recruiting and public good will.

Operational Cost

The Athletic Program is probably among the more cost effective programs in the University. More students, faculty, staff and community utilize athletic facilities than any other facilities of the University.

In fact, the intercollegiate sports program taken alone is not as expensive as many individuals suspect. Last year the total program cost $1.3 million including scholarship aid and generated over $960,000 in receipts. The difference between these amounts is an operating cost of $351,000 for a program involving fourteen intercollegiate sports and three hundred forty intramural teams. Excluding administrative cost, football provides over ninety percent of the support for all other sports and intramural programs. The football team last year made a profit after expenses (excluding student aid) of over 1/2 million dollars or almost enough to support all other sports programs and intramurals excluding facilities maintenance. A reduction in the football program obviously would have serious adverse consequences for other sports programs as well as intramurals.

The cost of the athletic facilities should be viewed in terms of their total University use. The cost of a sports program must be allocated according to clientele utilization, to provide a clearer picture of cost-effectiveness. As an example, much of the operating cost of the athletic program should be assigned to academic areas, recreation, community service, etc. However, it should be understood that athletic participation among students is increasing, which in turn increases cost.

Utilization of Athletic Facilities

Studies of use of the existing facilities suggest that they are heavily taxed, if not over-burdened by students and faculty. Last year, 135,495 individual uses were made of all sports areas. Over 340 teams competed in intramurals with over 3,300 participants. Students indicate an overwhelming demand for greater use of the existing facilities and a desire for additional sports areas. Students and faculty are almost unanimously agreed on the need for increased use of the stadium for intramurals and by the community in spite of the present crowded conditions. There are so few playing areas that demands are being generated to plan new sports areas in the Forbes complex.

There have been several suggestions that the University use the city owned stadium for football, etc. This study indicates the cost of using civic facilities (Three Rivers Stadium and Civic Arena) would be greater than any off-setting benefits. The rentals alone for all dates needed would exceed current University maintenance costs—and all intramural and exercise facilities would still be required. Further, students point out that such a move of major sports would undermine school spirit and reduce increasing student attendance. The stadium and field house are a genuinely valuable long-term investment for students, faculty, alumni and the community.

Athletes and Academic Performance

The athletes at the University of Pittsburgh clearly rank well above those from comparable institutions in academic performance. Nearly 90 percent of all our athletes graduate from Pitt, and a sizeable number go on to graduate or professional schools. In the past year, 51 of 59 athletes from the senior class graduated, which compares most favorably with the University as a whole.

Pitt athletes have a higher median grade point average than the University norm, with a QPA of nearly 2.5. They are distributed well throughout the disciplines: of the total 296 varsity athletes, 247 are in the College of Arts and Sciences, 46 Engineering, and 3 in Education. Among 200 juniors and seniors in the College, 45 are in the Humanities, 55 in Natural Sciences, and 100 in Social Sciences. The majors of these athletes are fairly well distributed among the major sports.

Why Panthers

The Panther (felis concolor) was adopted as the University of Pittsburgh's mascot at a meeting of student and alumni leaders in the early autumn of 1909. According to George M. P. Baird, '09, who made the suggestion, it was chosen for the following reasons: (1) the Panther was the most formidable creature once indigenous to the Pittsburgh region; (2) it had ancient, heraldic standing as a noble animal, (3) the happy accident of alliteration; (4) the close approximation of its hue to the old gold of the University's colors (old gold and blue), hence its easy adaptability in decoration; and (5) the fact that no other college or university then employed it as a symbol.

A LOT OF LITTLE CARS
HAVE TWO DOORS.
THIS ONE HAS TWO ROOFS.

Vega is a little more car than a lot of little cars.

The roof, for instance, is constructed of not one but two separate steel panels, one under the other, to add strength and quiet to the car.

And although, like we said, a lot of little cars have two doors — very few of them have steel guard beams built into them, like the Vega doors do.

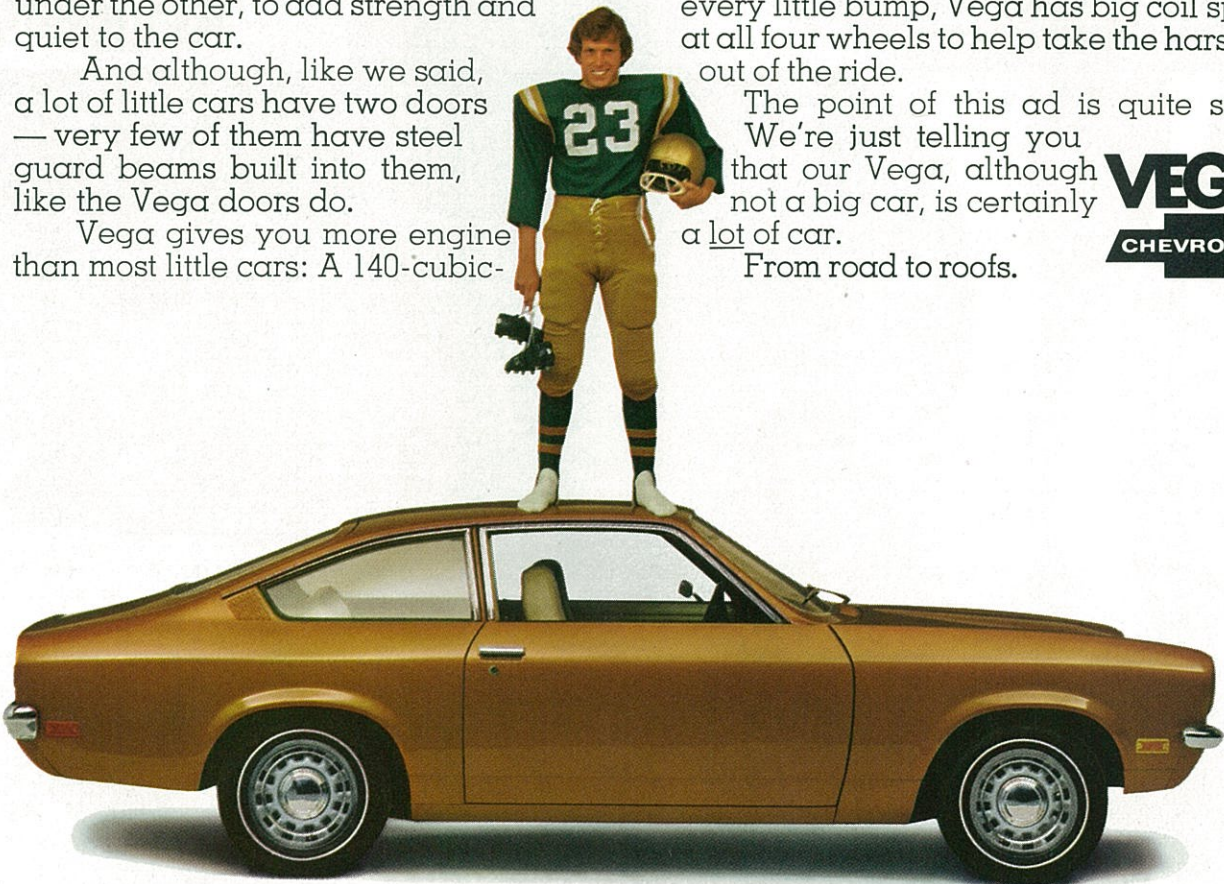

Vega gives you more engine than most little cars: A 140-cubic-inch overhead cam four that can handle turnpike speeds quite comfortably without a lot of straining.

And where some little cars let you feel every little bump, Vega has big coil springs at all four wheels to help take the harshness out of the ride.

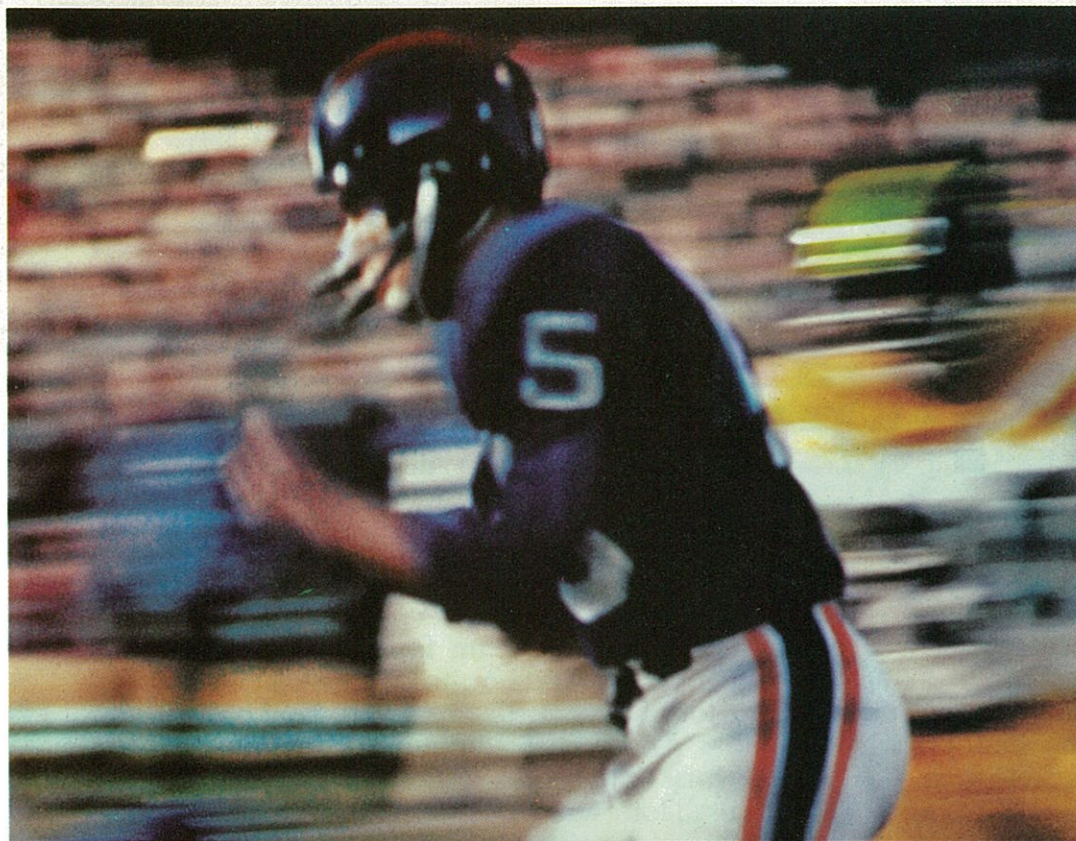

The point of this ad is quite simple. We're just telling you that our Vega, although not a big car, is certainly a lot of car.

From road to roofs.

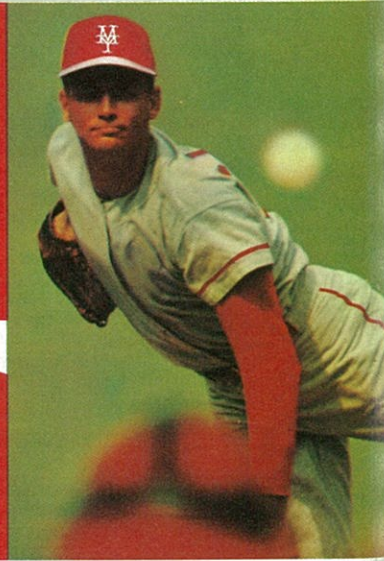

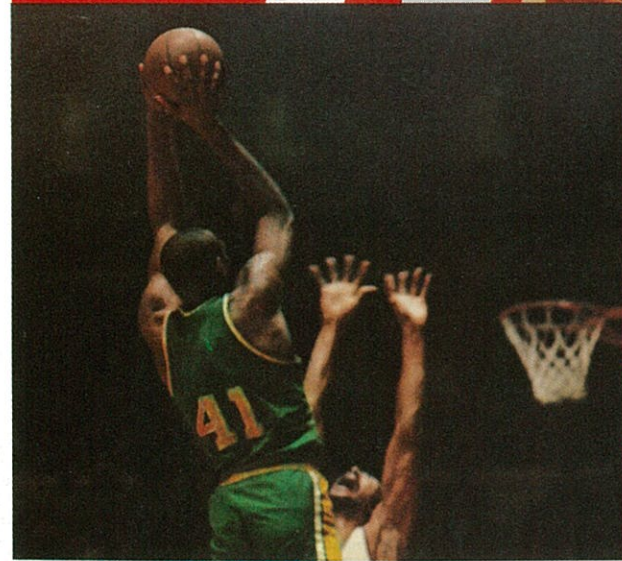

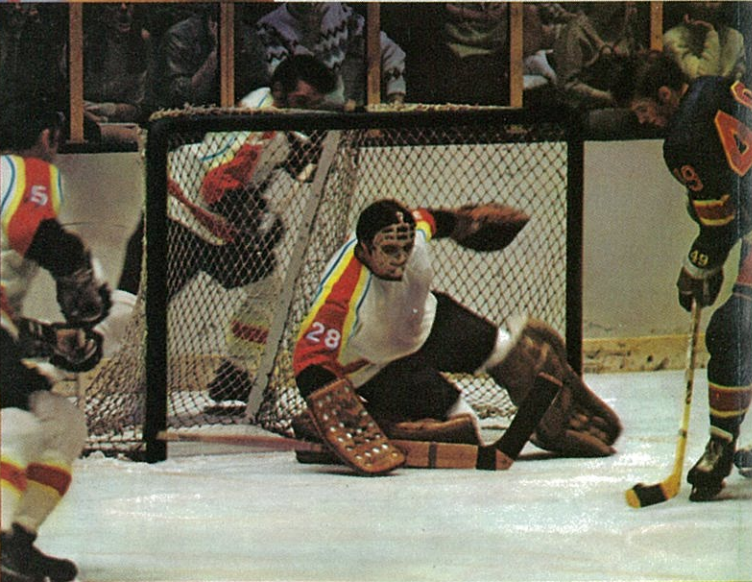

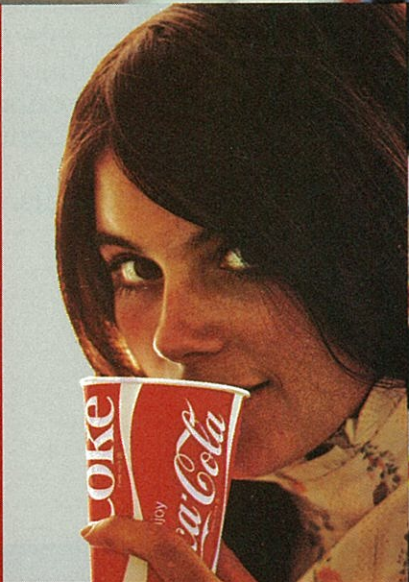

Chevrolet. Building a better way to see the U.S.A.
Highway safety begins at home. Buckle up before you leave.

4 Regional Campuses Offer Unique Education

The University of Pittsburgh System of Higher Education includes four regional campuses offering courses and programs in service to their regions, yet integral to the Oakland campus.

The locations at Bradford, Greensburg, Johnstown, and Titusville, as divisions of the University, offer the initial two years of undergraduate education in varying departments. At Johnstown, programs have been extended in certain areas to the full four years. In addition, in keeping with the current needs for continuing education, evening programs are designed to meet many of the needs of the community. Certain graduate offerings in select fields are made available as time and resources permit.

It has been recommended that each campus develop programs unique to themselves and offer a model for experimentation in higher education. Objectives have been defined for the campuses, and long-range plans are currently being developed in accord with these proposed goals.

The Bradford campus has increased the student body this year to 550, and is particularly concerned with continuing education. A diploma program in data processing has proved to be helpful for administrators in business and industry. Informal courses in photography, ecology, and other special interest areas are being offered as part of an expanded evening school program. The University also co-operates with Bradford civic associations in presenting well-known speakers and artists.

The Bradford campus is continuing to develop its physical plant to accommodate an increasing number of programs. The campus now has town house residences for 300 students, and is projecting two academic buildings to be completed in 1974.

The Greensburg Campus, in addition to its programs and activities, has the added feature of being close enough to Oakland so that students may attend the sports, cultural, and academic events in Pittsburgh.

This fall, however, Oakland will be coming to Greensburg. Eleven professors in the Department of Philosophy at the main campus will participate in the Greensburg Campus Community Series of Informal Courses by delivering lectures on "The Great Philosophers" at the Westmoreland County Museum of Art. Continuing the community series in the winter will be Dr. Paul Chew, director of the museum and faculty member at Greensburg, with "The Great Artists."

Working in cooperation with Oakland and the other regional campuses, Greensburg is also participating this fall in an audio-visual experimental course via a telenetwork system of telephone and microphone, along with slides and video tapes. The system allows the instructor of the course to originate a lecture from any of the campuses and to be heard simultaneously by students at all of them. In addition, the telenetwork provides for immediate feedback from students.

The cooperative spirit at Greensburg extends to other institutions in the local area: Seton Hill College, St. Vincent College, and the Westmoreland County Community College. Currently, a program of individualized instruction in statistics is being planned with Seton Hill, and a co-operative effort among all four of the institutions is in the offing for social science courses.

The Johnstown Campus, largest of the four regional campuses, has added two highly unique and innovative programs to its curriculum. The degree program in Engineering Technology at Johnstown is primarily oriented to prepare man and women in the fields of manufacturing, applied design, and mass transportation system construction. While this program is clearly oriented towards the application of engineering fundamentals, its relevance is geared towards the function of responsible technology in the present and future.

The need for a citizenry better informed on the problems of man's relationship to the environment have fostered the development of an environmental studies program. Interdisciplinary, it places considerable emphasis upon the natural systems of the environment. The intellectual thrust of the environmental studies program is essentially the development of a comprehensive overview of the world's pressing ecological crisis.

The modern physical plant at Johnstown provides facilities for dynamic new educational concepts. UPJ's $17 million academic residence hall complex includes 13 beautiful buildings built during the last five years.

4 Regional Campuses

The Titusville Campus has increased its intramural athletic program this year to include tennis, wrestling, and golf. In addition to these activities, the varsity basketball team will play a sixteen-game schedule with other two-year campuses.

Extensive additions have been made in the humanities area at Titusville. The student theater group now has four major productions during the year and presents one on tour in neighboring cities and other educational institutions. The student Glee Club assists in the presentation of the musical dramatic productions.

A new informal course in Practical Problems of Social Living is part of the evening program. It will include relevant topics in the social sciences such as black studies and practical politics. Also new courses in non-verbal communications, business law, and accounting will be offered this year.

The regionals, then, bring the standards and the advantages of the University of Pittsburgh to Western Pennsylvania.

'Campus Afloat' Gives Students New Focus

When 430 students—sans sea legs—set out on a four-month ocean voyage, there was a tendency for them to share many things, including the rail of the ship.

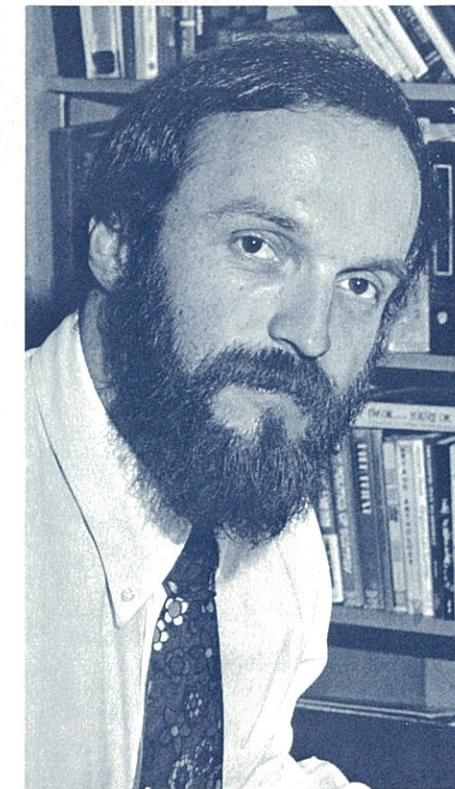

One becomes accustomed to the pitch and roll of the ship, according to Dr. Gary Faltico, but the experiences, which came in rapid-fire succession, seemed to be unique.

Faltico, an assistant professor of psychology and staff member in the Counseling Center at Florida State University, has returned to campus, having been on leave since February serving as a faculty member aboard the World Campus Afloat of Chapman College at Orange, Calif.

"The Campus Afloat is an undergraduate liberal arts college aboard a ship," Faltico said. "It is sponsored by Chapman College, a land campus with about 1,500 students. Many students transfer to Chapman just for the one term at sea. Some are from the United States; some from other countries. It is truly an international college."

Faltico's function on the trip was two-fold: he taught a philosophy/religion course and was in charge of mental health and emotional adjustment of those aboard. "I was referred to as the 'ship's shrink,'" he said.

The students quickly realized that situations in foreign countries were less than ideal. The very delicate racial situation in South Africa amazed the students. The Apartheid Law (segregation) was very evident. "In Capetown we weren't certain whether or not the black students would be allowed off the ship," Faltico said. "Once they did leave the ship, they found the atmosphere extremely hostile. Some were refused service in restaurants; they couldn't ride with a white in the same taxi; they couldn't even buy stamps in the post office from the same person! Surprisingly enough, the hostility was on the part of the South African blacks."

Those with whom Faltico and the students talked seemed intensely interested in what was taking place in the United States, and were curious to know what Americans thought about South Africa. "It was easy to see the social change and the problems confronting a developing nation," Faltico said.

Feedback from students and faculty who have made the trip indicate that "99 percent feel it to be the most meaningful experience of their lives," Faltico said.

"It's very easy to relate to the experiences one has when visiting different ports," he said. "After observing such things as ritual bathing in the Ganges, tribal ceremonies in Africa, and visiting the ancient temples and shrines in Nepal, it all meant so much more than what it would have in a classroom environment."

The students, according to Faltico, had their own method of gaining information. "At each port they would automatically head for the nearest university," he said. "Here they seemed to have a common bond and could find out things from the students not included on a pre-arranged tour."

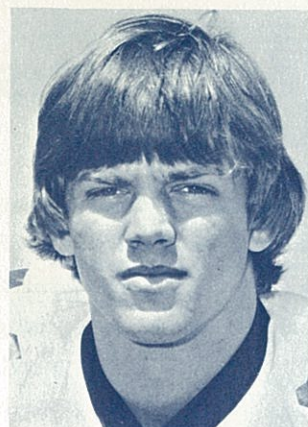

On a trip of this nature there is usually one thing that stands out in a person's mind. Faltico was not without his.

"There was one young girl who admitted to me that when she left the United States she was a very angry person," Faltico said. "She had little respect for the people running our government, and had, for all intents and purposes, given up on her country. She had considered making the trip just to find another nation to call 'home.'"

"On the return trip, having seen how the rest of the world is handling the same problems, she told me that people in the United States at least are able to question, criticize, and look at alternatives. Many people in the world, she said, are trapped in their problems. They don't have the freedom to consider them as problems; or, to consider that there might be solutions to these problems."

"The trip gave her and others a new focus. Many found some theme or concern which made for a change and a commitment in their lives."

Pitt Ranks 4th in National Championships

Elusive. Cantankerous. Agonizing. Dreadful. Wonderful. These are all adjectives used to describe that holiest of grails in college football — the search for No. 1.

To settle countless arguments Sports Illustrated in 1970 researched the first and only complete and wholly accurate list ever compiled of college football's mythical national champions. Every recognized authority that ever presumed to name a No. 1 is included. They include Parke H. Davis Ratings (1889-1935), the Helms Athletic Foundation (1889-1970), the Dickinson System (1924-1940), the Illustrated Football Annual (1924-1941), The Football Thesaurus (1927-1958), the Dunkel System (1929-1970), the Litkenhous System (1934-1970), the Williamson System (1932-1963), the Associated Press (1936-1970), the United Press International (1950-1970), the Football Writers Association of America (1954-1970), and the National Football Hall of Fame (1959-1970).

In all of college football, only 42 different schools have claimed a national championship, and only 28 have managed to win two national titles. As shown below the University of Pittsburgh is 4th to properly rank as one of the nation's all time great football names.
