Tonight marks the beginning of a new era in the history of Wake Forest football. For the first time since Peahead Walker, the Deacons will have an experienced head coach leading the team. Chuck Mills came to Wake Forest in December and tonight, he puts his troops through their first action on the Groves Stadium turf this new season.

The Speakin'

Deacon

The Demon Deacons, behind new coach Chuck Mills, kick off their 1973 season tonight against the Florida State Seminoles on Winston-Salem and Hall of Fame Day at Groves Stadium.

The intersectional game brings together two offense-oriented teams and their nationally respected head coaches, Chuck Mills and Larry Jones of FSU.

After suffering through a disappointing 2-9 season in 1972, the Deacons are ready to begin their new season with new offensive and defensive alignments under a new coach. A new style of play, the "Throw and Go" has replaced The Veer as Mills and his staff have installed an entirely fresh system.

Only nine months removed from Utah State where he compiled an outstanding 9-2 record in 1972 with one of the nation's top offensive teams, Mills is expected to combine the passing game with sophomore Andy Carlton at the helm with a powerful running attack.

Sophomore Frank Harsh, the Deacs' bruising fullback who gained over 600 yards last season, and senior Clayton Heath and Rawling Smith are expected to provide most of the running spark for the Deacons.

The Seminoles, who are coming off an impressive 7-4 season, claim this is a rebuilding year. A host of talented players, including All-Americans Gary Huff (quarterback) and wide receiver Barry Smith, have moved on to the pros leaving many positions open.

The quarterback position is the most evident of those spots where a newcomer will take over. Senior Billy Sexton, a transfer from Alabama, and red-shirted sophomore Mark Orlando are the top candidates for the starting job tonight.

Hodges Mitchell, a scampering running back with dazzling moves, is back for his senior year after gaining over 900 yards in 1972. And wide receivers Joe Goldsmith and Mike Allen seem destined to take over Smith's spot on the receiving end of all the passes.

"Florida State presents more than a challenge for us," said Mills. They have been one of the nation's finest football teams over the past five years and I see no way their superiority has been altered through graduation.

"I look forward to the test of playing them and hope to be respectable against one of the nation's finest teams."

The Seminoles have won the last six contests, including a 19-14 victory in Tallahassee in 1970, the Deacons' ACC Championship year.

Deacons To Play Football In Japan

Richmond, Austin, Charlottesville, Clemson, Chapel Hill and Raleigh. All playing arenas for the Wake Forest football team on the road this season.

But there is a seventh site not on the east coast, in fact, not even on the North American continent where Wake Forest will play football this season. Host location for the Deacons will be the "land of the rising sun," the beautiful oriental country of Japan, seven thousand miles from the American mainland.

The Wake Forest football team has been invited to play two games in Japan on January 5 and 13, 1974 during a thirteen day, goodwill tour in which the Wake Forest players and coaches will conduct demonstrations and clinics with the Japanese Universities.

Approximately fifty players and coaches will make the venture, which has gained NCAA approval, in addition to 100 Deacon Club and staff members. A full slate of activity including sightseeing, a bullet train ride, and exhibition football games between Wake Forest and Kwansei Gakuin University on the 5th and the Deacons vs. the Tokyo College All-Stars on the 13th are included.

The University and Athletic Department are excited about the overseas trip, only the second of its kind in the history of NCAA football. The first, in 1971, was conducted by Utah State when Chuck Mills, the Deacons' first year head coach, was piloting the Aggies.

"We are as excited as we could be about the trip," said Mills. "Football will be incidental to the entire trip. The experience of living with the Japanese people is an unforgettable, once-in-a-lifetime opportunity."

Called the "best hosts in the world" by Mills, the Japanese people, always warm and cordial, have made plans to receive the Wake Forest contingent with the full red carpet treatment. Such tangible evidence will be signs on every bus in Tokyo welcoming the team as well as numerous welcoming parties for the entire 165 member delegation.

Over fifty Japanese Universities play "American Football" as it is called in Japan. The game has caught the attention of the general Japanese public in the past few years, and the style of play is improving each year as new techniques are introduced into their game.

Ken Hirose and Shuhei (Sam) Hirota, two Japanese players who met Coach Mills in 1971, are presently with him at Wake Forest learning more about American football.

While the Wake Forest players will play football and share their knowledge with the Japanese players, they also will be the beneficiaries of a wonderful, educational learning experience.

Dr. Jon Reinhardt, a Professor of Politics at Wake Forest and an expert on Asian Politics, will teach a Winter Term course on Japanese culture to the players. The numerous shrines and places of interest will provide a perfect setting for the course.

Bill Hensley of the North Carolina State Motor Club has designed the trip, planning the travel itinerary and the ground itinerary in Japan.

Introducing CHUCK MILLS Head Coach . . .

"We want a man who has experienced success; one who plays exciting, winning football; and one who is capable of directing a major college program."

These were the goals in mind last December when athletic director Gene Hooks began the search for a new head coach of the Wake Forest football program.

And in Chuck Mills, the Deacons came up with (1) a man who in 12 years of major college coaching has compiled an impressive 66-47-3 record; (2) whose 1972 Utah State team finished fifth in the nation in total offense and whose quarterback ranked second in the country in total offense and third in passing; and (3) a man whose strongest point is in the organization of his staff.

Mills' professional background is fascinating and has touched on almost every phase of football. He has been a high school coach; a Marine; a semi-pro coach; an assistant junior college coach; a small college head coach; a wrestling coach; an assistant dean of men; a service academy coach; a major college assistant; and a professional assistant.

Once taking over the Deacon football program in December of 1972, Mills eagerly began tackling the task of rebuilding. He immediately surrounded himself with a staff of extremely capable assistants, who have proven to be the same tireless workers that Mills is himself.

His goal at Wake Forest is a complete program. "A football program is all-inclusive," says the personable

CHUCK MILLS

Mills. "It includes the academic; it includes the social; and it includes athletics."

Prior to coming to Wake Forest, Mills spent six years at Utah State and gave the Aggies some of their most productive and exciting seasons. His first two seasons at Utah State produced a 14-5-1 record, which stands alone in State coaching history for a coach's first two seasons.

His 1972 team finished with a 9-2 record, giving him a six-year total with the Aggies of 39 victories, 22 defeats, and one tie. In addition to ranking among the nation's best offensive teams last season, Utah State also finished being ranked 17th in the national polls.

The 44-year-old Mills is a 1950 graduate of Illinois State University and following graduation spent five years in the Chicago Public Schools. He then served in the Marine Corps and coached a semi-pro team in Chicago to a three-year record of 30-0-3.

In 1956, he became a line coach at Citrus Junior College and from 1957-61 served as head coach of football and wrestling at Pomona College in Claremont, Calif. For two years (1962-63) he was head football coach and assistant dean of men at Indiana State University of Pennsylvania, where his teams were 14-3-2.

Mills took over the head coaching duties at the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N. Y., in 1964 and then in 1965 moved to the University of Arizona, where he was an assistant. The next year (1966) saw him move to the Kansas City Chiefs, where he was an assistant coach and participated in the first Super Bowl.

In his twelve years as head coach, Mills has deservedly gained both national recognition and universal admiration for his contributions to football. He has served with some of the top coaches in the nation, both professional and collegiate, and has coached as many as seven All-Americans in college, including Tom Forzani and Tony Adams, national leaders in two offensive categories last year at Utah State, and pro stars MacArthur Lane, Altie Taylor, Phil Olsen, and Roy Shivers.

Mills is one of the most popular clinic speakers in the U. S. and has conducted clinics and football workshops in Japan and Guam. He took his 1971 Utah State team to Japan, where they won two NCAA sanctioned university level games.

And his 1972 Wake Forest team has been invited to Japan in January and is scheduled to play two games during a two-week tour.

"I look forward to the challenge here at Wake Forest," says Mills. "Wake Forest is a fine university with an outstanding athletic tradition; it is proud of both its athletics and academics."

Mills and his wife, Barbara, have no children.

Twenty Former WFU Athletes Now Are Pros

Wake Forest University is proud of the fact that over twenty former Wake Forest athletes are currently either coaching or playing in their respective sports in the professional ranks. Few schools in the nation could match such an impressive figure. And with newer and better Deacon athletes moving up each year, the list continues to grow.

The former Deacon athletes now getting financial reward for their talents include nine former All-American golfers, eight of whom played under the tutelage of the Deacons' nationally recognized head coach of some fourteen years, Jesse Haddock.

In addition, five football players and three coaches had their schooling at Wake Forest along with four former basketball players and one professional basketball administrator. Two recent Wake Forest graduates and members of the Deacon baseball squad have also been successful in organized baseball.

Here is the breakdown by individual and sport:

GOLF: The first name anyone mentions when he talks about golf, whether it be professional or collegiate can only be that of Mr. Golf, Arnold Palmer, a classmate of Jesse Haddock at Wake Forest College and the first ACC Champion in 1954 while a member of the Wake Forest team. Now the greatest name in golf and still the sport's top attraction and most successful personality, Palmer maintains an avid interest in his alma mater.

In the late '60's, a trio of Deacon All-Americans led the Deacons to two successive second place finishes in the NCAA Championships and now, all three, Jack Lewis, Leonard Thompson, and Joe Inman are professionals. Lewis and Thompson are regulars on the PGA tour while Inman is a rising comer in the Mini-PGA tour.

The top young star in the game of golf today, and a former ACC and U. S. Amateur Champions while at Wake Forest (like Palmer) is Lanny Wadkins, a freshman on the 1970 team with Lewis, Thompson, and Inman that was second in the nation. Now completing his second year on the PGA tour, Wadkins has already won three major professional championships and over $300,000 in earnings in his two years since turning professional in the summer of 1971.

Wadkins' brother-in-law, Mike Kallam, and Haddock's son-in-law, Jim Simons, are also two former All-Americans who are just beginning to bloom on the PGA tour. Loge Jackson and Eddie Pearce, also of the Kallam-Wadkins-Simons vintage, are two of the top stars on the Florida mini-tour.

BASKETBALL: Even though such former Deacon greats as Len Chappell and Dave Budd have retired from the pros, the Deacons are still well represented. Charlie Davis, the 1971 ACC Player of the Year and a two-time All-American, now enters his third year as a professional. After spending one year with the Cleveland Cavaliers of the NBA, he is now playing for his former Wake Forest coach, Jack McCloskey with the Portland Trailblazers of the NBA.

Charlie's teammate and close friend, Gil McGregor, spent one year in the NBA. He now has ambitions of trying to catch on with an ABA club. Eddie Payne and Pat Kelly, members of the 1972-73 Deacon squad, are teammates playing professionally in Grenoble, France.

And last, but certainly not least, is Pat Williams, a former star catcher for the Deacon baseball nine, who now is the General Manager of the NBA Atlanta Hawks. One of the top promoters in all professional athletics, Williams is regarded as the man who made the Chicago Bulls NBA team a success for his excellent job while with that club.

FOOTBALL: Norman Snead, a former gridiron All-American for the Gold and Black, is beginning his 13th season as a professional. The 1973 All-Pro quarterback with the New York Giants, Snead still holds eight Wake Forest football records.

The young man who broke even more of Snead's records while at Wake Forest, Freddie Summers, is currently playing professionally in Canada after playing in the NFL for four years. He is playing against Ed George, a teammate for the Deacons in the late '60's.

Jim Clack and Ed Bradley also Deacon stars within the past five years, are members of the resurgent Pittsburgh Steelers club which was the runnerup in the AFC in 1973.

They face two former Deacon greats who are now NFL coaches, Bill Barnes, offensive backfield coach with the Atlanta Falcons, and Red Cochran, offensive backfield coach with the Green Bay Packers. Jim Duncan, a former All-Conference end with the Deacons, is coaching with the Saskatchewan Rough Riders in the Canadian Football League.

BASEBALL: Wake Forest teammates in the early seventies, Jim Eschen and Craig Robinson are now making it big in professional baseball. Eschen hit .300 this year in his second year as a pro playing with the Clinton Pilots of the Midwest League (Class A). Robinson, a 1970 graduate, has been overwhelmingly impressive and jumped to his major league club, the Philadelphia Phillies, in July after playing Class AAA ball for four months.

Randy Halsall 6-2 245 Offensive Tackle
Born Oct. 24, 1949. Hometown, Toronto, Canada.
The "biggest" yet one of the friendliest members of the Deacon squad, Halsall returns for his second season as a starter at offensive tackle. Although possessing massive strength and an intense spirit, "Canuck" has a most humble personality which makes him respected by everyone. He hopes to return to his native country of Canada to play professional football after graduation next May.

"The Most Rewarding Experience of My Life"

BY STEVE MESSICK
Head Student Trainer

As a junior at Mount Tabor High School in Winston-Salem, I became interested in athletic training, although I knew very little about it. My interest arose quite naturally out of a profound interest in medicine and an intense love for all types of athletics. I was quite fortunate to be associated with Dr. Jack Hamrick while in high school. He was then the Mount Tabor team physician and he did everything possible to help me learn all that I could.

During the later part of my senior year Dr. Hamrick, a 1963 WFU graduate, suggested the possibility of my getting a scholarship to Wake Forest as a student trainer, for he was to become team physician of Wake Forest and knew there to be an opening for a student trainer. I readily accepted this opportunity, but little did I realize how deeply I would become involved with my work.

My first meeting with Doc Martin, the head trainer at Wake Forest, left me scared to death, because Doc presents quite a formidable appearance although he is one of the most popular and efficient trainers in the country. Not only was I apprehensive about Doc, but also I began to realize how little I did know about training.

Reality finally struck when summer ball began. Practice would begin at 9:00 A.M., but since every player had to be taped before practice, this meant beginning work around 5:30 A.M. each morning. There would be another practice in the afternoon and I would finally get off work around 9:00 P.M.

Little did I realize that my first season would be Wake Forest's greatest football season. To this day the greatest moment of my life was when Larry Russell and Co. drove 94 yards in the final three minutes to beat our fiercest rival, Carolina, 14-13. I still get chills when I think about that game.

Trainers at Wake Forest are different from most other college trainers in that they have to work for all sports—not just one such as football. There is not "off-season." This makes the job of combining training with schoolwork terribly demanding, but constantly rewarding.

I feel very lucky to have had so many great experiences and to have learned so much at the same time. Just getting to know such great athletes as Larry Russell and Charlie Davis has been an honor, and I must say that serving these and many other great athletes has been the most rewarding experience of my life—so rewarding that I plan on making athletic training my career, or should I say, my life.

GROVES STADIUM "Home of the Deacs"

Groves Stadium, which is now only five years old, has already been the scene of many exciting football games. The move into the new facility in 1968 from the old Bowman Gray Stadium (capacity under 17,000) climaxed a dream of a dozen years, and since then, a total of 591,625 fans have attended the home games.

The 30,500-seat Groves Stadium was dedicated and named at the 1968 opener against N. C. State in honor and memory of Henry Herman Groves, Sr., formerly of Gastonia and now of Jacksonville, Fla., and his two deceased brothers, Earl C. and L. Craig Groves.

The stadium, which cost $3.9 million, was in the plans when the university made its historic move from the Town of Wake Forest to Winston-Salem in 1956, but the need for other buildings on the campus delayed construction. As early as 1955, the year before the move, some studies were made for the building of a stadium, but it wasn't until June 4, 1966, that ground was broken.

Site of the stadium is an area less than a mile from the center of the campus between 30th and 33rd Streets. Adjacent or nearby to it are Ernie Shore Field, the varsity baseball park and Memorial Coliseum, the site of all home basketball games.

The 77-acre tract was presented to the University for this purpose by the late Charles H. Babcock, Winston-Salem businessman and benefactor to the University.

The stadium, which cost $3.9 million, was designed by the architectural firm of Guy E. Crampton and Associates of Raleigh and is so designed that it may be easily enlarged in the future. George W. Kane Construction Company was the general contractor.

Unexcelled from a spectator's viewpoint, it seats slightly more than 30,000 in permanent seats — all along the sidelines of the playing field. All seats are equipped with backs. Absence of a running track brings all viewers closer to the action. The concave design angles all spectators toward the center of the field. Stands on each side rise 64 rows.

The two-story fieldhouse located at the west end of the playing field has ample dressing facilities for both teams as well as for coaches and game officials. The second floor has dormitory-type rooms for accommodation of players. The electric scoreboard is mounted on the roof of the fieldhouse.

The fieldhouse was named the Bridger Fieldhouse on Oct. 14, 1972 in honor of two Wake Forest alumni, James Albert Bridger and Dr. Dewey H. Bridger, both of Bladenboro.

The press box on the west side of the stadium is three stories and will be serviced by an elevator. The president's guest box occupies the first level. The second level is for working newspapermen and scouts while the third level will be for radio, television and photographers. The roof can also be utilized by photographers.

Bert Bennett of Winston-Salem and Joe Branch of Enfield headed up the drive to raise funds for the construction. R. B. Crawford of Winston-Salem served as chairman of the building committee.

Through five years, the Deacons have compiled a record of 12 wins, 11 losses and one tie playing in their home stadium.

WAKE FOREST FOOTBALL ALL-AMERICANS

BILL GEORGE—1949—George was a starter for four years for the Deacons, 1947-48-49-51, and an All-Conference performer at defensive tackle the last three seasons. He is the holder of two Wake Forest records, most PAT's in one game (7) and most career PAT's (55). He also had an outstanding professional career with the Chicago Bears and the Los Angeles Rams, earning All-Pro honors numerous times at linebacker.

JIM STATON—1950—Jim Staton was an All-American at defensive tackle in 1950 in addition to being All-Conference and the team's Most Valuable Player. He played professional ball with two teams, first, the Washington Redskins and then the Montreal Alouettes in the Canadian Football League. There, under his former Wake Forest coach, Peahead Walker, he earned All-Canadian League honors.

BOB BARTHOLOMEW—1955—Now the Director of the Wake Forest Deacon Club, Bob Bartholomew earned All-Conference honors three times during his career at Wake Forest. Besides being chosen All-American in 1955, he also earned a spot on the 1st team All-American Academic. He was a starter for four years for the Deacs and was National Lineman of the Week in 1954 after the Maryland game. His professional career was cut short after five games with Montreal because of a knee injury.

BILL BARNES—1956—"Bullet Bill" Barnes was the Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year in 1956 when he was chosen All-American at fullback. He was the Deacs' top rusher in 1955 and 1956 and was the first Wake Forest football player to rush for over 1,000 yards when he gained 1,010 yards in 1956. Barnes enjoyed an outstanding professional career, spending ten years in the NFL.

NORMAN SNEAD—1960—A first team All-American in 1960 and one of the nation's top passers of all-time, Norman Snead is still the holder of eleven Wake Forest passing records. He was the Deacs' top passer three years in a row, 1958-59-60, when he established such marks as most passing yardage and most career total offense. He is currently in his 13th season in the NFL, playing for his fourth team.

BRIAN PICCOLO—1964—The ACC Player of the Year in 1964, Brian Piccolo was also the nation's leading rusher that year when he gained 1,044 yards. As the Deacs' leading ground gainer for three years straight, 1962-63-64, he established eight school records, three of which still stand. Following graduation, he became a legend while playing for the Chicago Bears. His fine professional career ended when he died in June of 1970.

WIN HEADLEY—1970—A starter for three years and an All-Conference selection at defensive tackle, Headley earned numerous All-American honors his senior year. He was drafted in the 8th round by the Green Bay Packers but after one season, he switched to the Canadian League and played briefly with the Montreal Alouettes.

Wake Forest is a charter member of the Atlantic Coast Conference which was formed May 8, 1953, when the seven larger members of the Southern Conference withdrew from the 17-member organization to form a more workable and compact conference.

Professor F. W. Clonts of Wake Forest served as the conference's second president and since then Dr. Jack Sawyer of Wake Forest has been elected president twice, the latest term coming during the 1969-70 year. Dr. Sawyer is currently the Wake Forest faculty representative to the conference.

Wake Forest has represented the conference well in past years. In basketball, the Deacons placed third in the Eastern Regionals in 1961 but in 1962, the Deacs made all the way to the final round of four before losing to the eventual national champion Ohio State. In the consolation round for third place in the nation the Deacons defeated UCLA.

In baseball, Wake Forest won the national championship in 1955. The Deacons have dominated the conference golf scene since the mid-1960's. They have won ten conference titles and have finished in the top six in the nation for the past six years.

Maryland has been the national champion in lacrosse four times since the conference was formed and Virginia twice.

In football, ACC teams have made 15 trips to bowl games since the conference was formed and have been ranked nationally many times.

DEACON SPORTS HALL OF FAME

In order to honor former Deacon greats in the field of sports, Wake Forest established a Sports Hall of Fame in 1970. Plaques honoring each inductee are on display in the Reynolds Gymnasium on the Wake Forest campus. Murray Greason, Douglas C. (Peahead) Walker, Brian Piccolo and James H. Weaver were honored posthumously in 1970. Arnold Palmer became the fifth member of the Hall of Fame in 1971 and Tommy Byrne and the late Harry Rabenhorst were inducted in 1972.

PEAHEAD WALKER

BRIAN PICCOLO

TOMMY BYRNE

Murray Greason was an outstanding athlete for Wake Forest, earning 12 varsity letters in football, basketball and baseball during the years 1921-25. He served as the Deacons' basketball coach for 23 years, compiling a record of 285 victories and 239 defeats. He was Atlantic Coast Conference coach of the year in 1956 and later served as Assistant Athletic Director at Wake Forest.

Douglas Clyde (Peahead) Walker served as head football coach for fourteen years (1937-51) and compiled the most successful record in Deacon history, 77-51-6. He coached the 1946 Wake Forest Gator Bowl squad which defeated South Carolina 26-14.

Jim Weaver helped Wake Forest and the ACC attain major intercollegiate status. He was head football coach for four years (1933-36), and also served as Wake Forest Athletic Director from 1933-1954. He was the first Commissioner of the ACC, serving from 1953-1970.

Brian Piccolo, the ACC Player of the Year in 1964 and the nation's leading rusher that year when he gained 1,044 yards, established eight school records, three of which still stand. Following graduation, he became a legend while playing professionally for the Chicago Bears.

Arnold Palmer was an outstanding golfer for the Deacons, capturing the NCAA individual crown in 1949 and 1950 and winning the first ACC championship in 1954. After capping the U. S. Amateur title in 1954, he turned professional and has become the leading name in all of golf. Now in his 18th year on the pro tour, Palmer has 75 career victories to his credit and has won over $1.6 million on the U. S. tour.

Tommy Byrne was an outstanding baseball player for the Deacons in the late 30's and later went on to shine in the professional ranks. He played both the outfield and pitched for the Deacons, leading Wake to the Southern Conference title his sophomore year before turning professional and signing with the New York Yankees. He was a dominant figure in the Yankees' success in the late 50's, leading the American League in pitching in 1955.

Harry Rabenhorst was a star athlete for the Deacons from 1916-1920, playing four sports and serving as coach of two of those teams. He captained the football team his last three years, earning All-South honors at running back and coaching the team his senior year. He also played on the basketball and baseball teams and was a member of the track team and its coach for four years.

WAKE FOREST COLLEGE

The School of Arts and Sciences

(This is the first of a five part series on the five schools which compose Wake Forest University. The School of Arts and Sciences, Wake Forest College, is the oldest school in the University.)

Wake Forest University, a private, liberal arts co-educational institution, was founded in 1834 by the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina as a manual labor institute for men.

The school opened its doors to students on February 3rd under the name of Wake Forest Institute and with Samuel Wait as principal. It was located in the forest of Wake County, North Carolina, on the plantation of Dr. Calvin Jones, near which the village of Wake Forest later developed.

Rechartered in 1838 as Wake Forest College, the institution operated exclusively as a college of liberal arts until 1894. The School of Law was established in that year, the School of Medicine in 1902, the School of Business Administration in 1948, and the Division of Graduate Studies in 1961.

In 1956, after 123 years at the old campus, the college moved to Winston-Salem upon acceptance of a grant from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation.

On June 12, 1967, with the beginning of the summer session, the official name of Wake Forest College (the institution as a whole) was changed to Wake Forest University. The old name was retained as the designation of the undergraduate school, previously called the School of Arts and Sciences of Wake Forest College.

Academically, Wake Forest College presents to its student body a chance to meet the challenge offered by a demanding and diverse curriculum. Honors programs, interdisciplinary studies and independent research facilities which enable the student to study a particular topic in greater detail and to see how it relates to or is affected by subjects of different disciplines.

The School of Arts and Sciences confers one of two degrees, Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science, on each of its graduates. Twenty-four major fields of study are offered in working towards these degrees.

Socially, Wake Forest offers to the student the cultural and educational benefits of some of the world's greatest musicians, lecturers, and entertainers. A diverse and well-rounded social with numerous opportunities is available to all students. An active student government, the College Union, the University theatre, campus radio station and school publications, and numerous social clubs including the Men's and Women's Residence Councils and fraternities and societies are present on campus.

The Z. Smith Reynolds Library

The campus atmosphere of the College is often noted as one of its greatest assets allowing for a warm and personal relationships to develop among students and between students and faculty. Enrollment for the Fall of 1973 has been predicted as just over 2900 students with male undergraduates outnumbering women two to one.

"It is the intention of Wake Forest to avoid allowing the undergraduate college to grow any larger," said Dr. Thomas E. Mullen, Dean of the College. "We do not plan any enlargement of the undergraduate college. I believe too many advantages of the small college would be lost."

Wake Forest is indeed proud of its high academic ranking, too. More than ninety per cent of all women at Wake Forest ranked in the top ten per cent of their high school class and over ninety per cent of the men ranked in the top fifth of their high school class.

The physical equipment of the University includes about 320 acres of land and 30 buildings, including chapel, administration building, gymnasium, three classroom buildings, law building, business administration building, four women's dormitories, six men's dormitories, 12 apartment buildings for faculty and married students, and a library.

The Z. Smith Reynolds Library has recently acquired volumes pushing its total number over the half million mark. "We are fortunate in having one of the best libraries in the South," said Dean Mullen. "According to one recent survey, we ranked second in the Southeast in comparing our number of volumes to our course curriculum."

TONIGHT'S OPPONENT — FLORIDA STATE

F. S. U. -- Tops In Academics and Athletics

The Twin Lecture Hall for Engineering and Chemistry

Florida State University's nine schools and colleges are the academic homes of more than 19,000 students in 1973—students who hail from all corners of the world as well as the home state.

This public, coeducational institution of higher learning is one of nine in the State University System of Florida. Founded in 1857, it is the second oldest university in the public system and a senior leader in graduate education and research programs.

Although Seminole athletics can be traced back to the first decade of the 20th Century, the University's history includes a number of years when it was known as the Florida State College for Women (1902-47). The dynamic growth of inter-collegiate athletics, since coeducation and university status came to the campus in 1947, has paralleled the phenomenal physical and enrollment growth of the institution in the last two and one-half decades.

Academically and athletically, Florida State is a contender for top ranking among the nation's leading universities. Early last year, the American Council on Education rated eight Florida State graduate programs in the physical, biological and social science areas among the better programs in the nation, giving chemistry the highest rating of "strong and distinguished."

Most recently, the National Science Foundation added $1.2 million to a previous $4.8 million grant to further the University's excellence in physics, statistics, chemistry and psychobiology. In athletics, the last eight years have seen Seminole teams earn major bowl and tournament appearances and several bona fide All-America titles. In academics, the same period of time has seen two Nobel Laureates added to the faculty roster—one on a full-time, the other on an annual winter quarter, basis.

One of only 24 institutions in the country which confers more than 100 Ph.D. degrees each year, Florida State is now graduating an average of 5,000 students annually from its Colleges of Arts and Sciences, Education and Law, and from its Schools of Home Economics, Music, Library Science, Social Welfare, Business and Nursing.

At the undergraduate level, Florida State students have a choice of more than 87 different baccalaureate fields of study; and at the graduate level, a choice of more than 85 master's degree areas and 58 doctoral programs.

Balancing its prestige in the sciences with academic achievements in the arts and humanities as well, Florida State is the home base for the State Theater, State Opera and State Symphony of Florida. Its role as an artistic and cultural pacesetter is long-standing and international in scope in art, music and theater.

A pioneer in the field of oceanography for many years, Florida State is making marine studies (including the U. S. Sea Grant Program) one of its strong points of emphasis in the decade ahead. Facilities for oceanographic research are located both on the campus and in the Ed Ball Marine Laboratories on the Gulf of Mexico, south of Tallahassee.

The University's largest grouping of physical facilities for scientific research is to be found in its Science Complex, on the western quadrant of the campus.

Rounding out the University's research resources are two nuclear accelerators, a million-book library and special research facilities in geophysical fluid dynamics, educational technology, molecular biophysics social research, political research, psychobiology and psychology.

Billy Joe, "Red", "Bones" Inducted Tonight Into Deacon Sports Hall of Fame

During halftime ceremonies of today's game, three of Wake Forest's most colorful athletic figures will be inducted into the University's Sports Hall of Fame.

Billy Joe Patton, John (Red) Cochran, and Horace (Bones) McKinney will join an illustrious group as their induction brings to ten the total number of members in the four year old Hall of Fame. James H. Weaver, Murray Greason, D. C. (Pea-head) Walker and Brian Piccolo in 1970, Arnold Palmer in 1971, and Tommy Byrne and Harry Rabenhorst in 1972 have been honored previously.

Patton and Cochran as participants and McKinney as a coach, are well remembered by Wake Forest fans for their contributions to the golf, football and basketball teams, respectively.

Patton, a 1943 graduate of Wake Forest College, was the first in the long line of Deacon golfers to gain national prominence. He gained national and international headlines for his phenomenal play while an amateur in the major professional tournaments.

In 1954, he astounded the golf world when he finished one stroke behind co-leaders Sam Snead and Ben Hogan in the celebrated Masters Tournament. His success in the Masters continued for the next fourteen years as he qualified for the classic event each year, even though maintaining his amateur status which he still holds.

Patton also put on a valiant performance in another of the world's great professional tournaments, the U. S. Open. Again as an amateur, he led the 1954 U. S. Open after eighteen holes and the 1957 Open after two full rounds of play.

Also included in his lengthy lists of golfing achievements include membership on six Walker Cup teams, serving as captain once, and championships of the North-South Amateur (three times), the Carolinas Amateur (three times) and the Southern Amateur (twice).

Now a lumber broker in his hometown of Morganton, he has also been named Carolinas Golfer of the Year and has won the coveted "Gold Tee" award given by the New York golf writers.

Cochran, a football and baseball star for the Deacons in the forties, has been in football for over thirty years.

An outstanding student in his undergraduate days at Wake Forest College, the Fairfield, Alabama native was a standout in both sports in the 1941 and 1942 seasons. Playing under the legendary Peahead Walker, Cochran was the tailback on the 1942 All-Southern team.

World War II necessitated him leaving Wake Forest to enter the Air Force before he graduated, but after the war, he returned to complete his eligibility. During the 1946 season, he was a halfback, punter and defensive standout in football and was one of the conference's top outfielders and hitters in baseball.

The versatile redhead played professional football for four seasons with the St. Louis Cardinals before moving into coaching. His first coaching job was at Wake Forest under Tom Rogers. From the collegiate ranks, he moved up to coaching professionally in the National Football League. He has seen coaching stints with St. Louis, Detroit, San Diego, and now Green Bay, where he currently is offensive backfield coach.

He has spent the majority of his coaching years working with the Packers' offense. As the offensive backfield coach under the late Vince Lombardi, Cochran worked with the All-Pro backfield of Bart Starr, Jim Taylor, and Paul Hornung.

Horace (Bones) McKinney, a native of Lowland, N. C., made his mark at Wake Forest as a head basketball coach although he was an All-Conference basketball star at N. C. State. He led the Southern Conference in scoring as a sophomore but then entered the service for three years. In 1946, he enrolled at the University of North Carolina where he played for one season.

Continuing his basketball career, McKinney went into professional ball, playing first with the Washington Caps for four years, making All-Pro the first year of the NBA (1947), and later with the Boston Celtics for two years.

After retiring as an active player, he entered Southeastern Baptist Seminary on the old Wake Forest campus in the fall of 1952 and served as Assistant Coach under Murray Greason. McKinney was named Head Coach in 1957 and served in that position for eight years, compiling one of the top coaching records in collegiate basketball.

His eight year record was 122 wins and 94 losses. Five straight seasons Wake Forest went to the Atlantic Coast Conference finals, winning titles in 1961 and 1962, placing third in the NCAA finals in 1962 by beating UCLA in the consolation game after losing to Ohio State in the opening game.

McKinney was honored as ACC "Coach of the Year" twice, in 1960 and 1961, during which time he coached All-Americans Len Chappell and Dave Budd. He later coached the Carolina Cougars and now resides in Hickory.

THE NEW DEACON HELMET

One of the more noticeable changes Chuck Mills has brought to the 1973 Deacon football team is the redesigning of the players' helmets. More specifically, not only is the helmet now a solid white, excluding a gold and black stripe down its center, but on each side is a decal unique to Wake Forest football. It is a red, white, and blue football, with corresponding stars and stripes similar to the American flag.

"The idea of the decal evolved from the Centennial of College Football in 1969," Mills explains. "Simply, our decal is to signify our game of American Football is more native and unique to America on the international plateau than any sport we participate in. It is also a reminder of the concepts we attribute to the 'American Dream' and the role athletics play in the endeavour to strive for that dream."

In 1889, there was no such place as Winston-Salem

There was the city of Winston and there was the town of Salem. The combined population numbered about 10,000.

There were also the outlying communities — such as Bethabara, Waughtown, Clemmons, Bethania and Rural Hall. Ardmore, Buena Vista and Reynolda Village were still years in the future.

In 1889, the first savings and loan institution in Winston (and Salem) was established — Winston-Salem Building and Loan Association. In 1889, we approved our first home loan and we started paying high interest on savings. Since 1889, we've helped build thousands of homes in Winston, Salem, Bethabara, Ardmore, Buena Vista . . . and we've never missed paying a dividend.

Today, we continue to help our neighbors build and buy their new homes. And, we continue to pay high dividends, regularly (with interest compounded daily for even higher annual yields).

We invite you to join us, and your neighbors, building and saving at Winston-Salem Savings and Loan.

The Brian Piccolo Award For Courage

Brian Piccolo lived only 26 years, but he packed a lifetime of memories into that short period of time that a nation will always remember.

Courage, confidence and determination were all part of his life that made him an All-American fullback at Wake Forest and a fine running back for the Chicago Bears.

He made his mark in football (the nation's leading rusher and scorer in 1964) and a member of the Bears' starting backfield, but more important is the mark that he made on the lives of millions throughout the country as he exemplified the true meaning of courage.

Piccolo entered Wake Forest in 1961 and proceeded to lead the Deacons in rushing over his three-year varsity career. During 1964 he reached the peak of his Wake Forest career as he led the nation in rushing with 1,044 yards and in scoring with 111 points.

After being shunned in the professional draft, he finally signed as a free agent with the Chicago Bears where he teamed with Gale Sayers. They were rivals for the same position, but out of the rivalry developed an extremely close friendship.

In November, 1969, Piccolo was stricken with cancer and lost his battle with the dreaded disease in June of 1970.

Three years ago, Wake Forest initiated the "Brian Piccolo Award" which is presented annually to the Wake Forest player, who as judged by the coaching staff, exemplifies best the qualities and courage of the former Deacon All-American during the North Carolina game.

Defensive tackle Win Headley in 1970, fullback Larry Hopkins, who broke several of Piccolo's rushing records in 1971, and fullback Frank Harsh have been the first three winners of the award.

BRIAN PICCOLO

WIN HEADLEY

A stubborn Deacon defense led by senior All-American Win Headley stymied a powerful Tar Heel offense, and an incredible 93 yard touchdown drive which ended with a Larry Hopkins touchdown, carried Wake Forest to a thrilling 14-13 come-from-behind win over North Carolina at Groves Stadium.

The Deacons, on the road to their first ACC football title, scored with merely 12 seconds remaining in the game to eke out the one point emotion-packed victory.

Hopkins and quarterback Larry Russell led the offense but Headley, playing with an injured foot and more than his share of bruises, fired up the defensive unit to shut off the Carolina running game.

The 6-3, 239 pound tackle from Westport, Conn., in his third year as a starter, was credited with nine individual tackles and six assists.

Headley had his finest game," said head coach Cal Stoll. "He rose to the occasion. He had a magnificent second half, playing under such great odds."

Headley's courage was certainly evident. He was walking on crutches because of the foot injury after the game.

LARRY HOPKINS

On a dreary, rainy, muddy afternoon at Kenan Stadium the weather foreshadowed the Deacons' fate as hopes of a second straight ACC title for Wake were washed away.

A first quarter touchdown by Carolina provided the slim margin of victory for the Deacons ran well, compiling more total offensive yards, yet had trouble to share when trying to cross the goal line.

Senior Larry Hopkins, the Deacs' bruising, 5-9, 200 pound fullback gained 143 yards on 34 carries, running through, over and around the Tar Heel defenders.

FRANK HARSH

Only a week earlier Hopkins had broken the Wake Forest career rushing mark of 1,735 held by Piccolo as he rushed for 230 yards against Tulsa. "Hoppy" broke three Piccolo records that year setting new marks of 1,228 net yards rushing in a season, 111.6 yards per game rushing average, and 2,212 yards gained rushing in a career.

A two-time All-Conference selection, the Panama City, Fla. native said after receiving the award, "I just wish we'd won the game. When you win any award, it means that some group of people recognize your achievement. I didn't see that I'd done that much but they say I did."

Lost in the thick of a losing cause to Carolina was a sterling performance by a hard-nosed running back who wears No. 44, the same as his predecessor at fullback for the Deacons.

Young and eager but full of all the stamina and strength of a graduating senior, freshman Frank Harsh won the Brian Piccolo award for his play in the Deacons' 21-0 loss to the Tar Heels.

Harsh, a 6-0, 230 pounder, gained 77 yards in 22 carries, including one run of 14 yards. Called by some experts as potentially Wake Forest's greatest rusher ever, Harsh carried for over 600 yards in his first varsity season.

"I never saw Brian Piccolo play," said Harsh. "But I saw the film 'Brian's Song'. When I decided to come to Wake Forest, people kept asking me if I was going to break his records. Naturally, I'd like to try."

Now a sophomore and running as hard as ever, Harsh humble manners and dedication to football remind many of Piccolo's style.

Deacon Assistant Coaches

JESS CONE

Head coach Chuck Mills claims he has four criteria for all of his assistants. They must be loyal, compatible, have a good football sense, and be smarter than he. In this first installment of a five part series, we feature Mills' top two assistants, his offensive and defensive coordinators.

CLIFF YOSHIDA

Behind every successful head coach, so the saying could read, is always a top assistant who shares in the decision-making and who assumes added responsibilities of his own.

Deacon head coach Chuck Mills is no exception to the rule. Noted primarily for being an "offensively-minded" head coach, it is only natural that Mills' top aide be his offensive coordinator, Jess Cone.

An untiring worker who meticulously investigates every detail of his work, the 44 year old Cone reflects his head coach in both speech and mannerisms. Both are knowledgeable students of the game and are widely known for their expertise in designing potent offenses. Similar in voice, in their dedication to their work, and in their coaching backgrounds, (Mills succeeded Cone at the head coaching position at Pomona Junior College), the two men have known each other for more than fifteen years.

Cone is now entering his fifth year as an assistant to Mills and is beginning his fourth as offensive coordinator. He joined Mills' staff at Utah State in 1969 after 18 years of coaching at the high school, junior college, and small college level. His philosophies on offense thus stem from over twenty years of coaching experience.

"We would like to be able to take, both in terms of personnel and our offensive potential, what the defenses give us. We would have to be vastly superior to our opponents if we were to force things on them which they didn't give us," says the Antioch, California native.

"If we can be error free with a sound kicking game, we are going to be hard to beat. As a sound team, we won't beat ourselves; we won't give them something for nothing."

Cone was a former All-Coast defensive guard at Stanford where he was captain of the 1952 Rose Bowl team. He knows the value of offensive coaches being familiar with defensive alignments.

"A coach can't do a good job with an offense unless he has a through knowledge of defense. Our defensive coaches are constantly helping our offensive coaches and vice versa. They give us ideas by telling us what is hard to defense.

"It would be easy for the offensive and defensive coaches to split up and compete against each other. But that isn't so with us. We have an interflow of ideas. Cliff (Yoshida) and I periodically get together and exchange ideas."

Cone is duly given much of the credit for the successful Utah State high-powered passing offense. The 1972 team averaged over 35 points per game and was nationally ranked in three offensive categories.

"We like to be able to stretch our opponents' defensive front and secondary across the field. We try to make them cover as much of the field as possible."

Although Utah State was primarily feared for its dynamic passing attack, many observers mistook their offense to be solely a passing offense. True, many of their big plays and scores came on passing plays, but the passing attack could not have been successful without an effective running game.

"I don't believe an offense can be sound unless it can throw the ball effectively. Even primarily running teams must establish some passing threat in the game. Very few teams are successful as solely running teams without the threat of a passing attack.

"We'd like to have an offense throw the ball well enough without having to establish the run."

Cone's throw-and-go aerial circus may seem complicated to some, but conversely, he strives to keep it simple. "Football is a complicated game," he says, "that only successful coaches simplify. It is easy to know more football than one can teach."

Jess Cone can certainly teach the game, and more evident is that he knows football as well as any coach in the game today. Chuck Mills couldn't have a better man behind him.

"I always wanted to be part of the best."

Words from the national sports hero after his team won the title? Nope. The crushing comment by a successful head coach who resigns to take a job with his alma mater? Not that either.

Instead, it is a Wake Forest assistant coach talking. A man who is proud of his position at present and proud of his past experiences.

They are words from Cliff Yoshida, the defensive coordinator under Deacon head coach Chuck Mills. And Yoshida is talking about two things: 1) His four year tour of duty in the Marine Corps. 2) His affiliation with Chuck Mills' football team.

The 34 year old Yoshida, a native of Glendora, California, has also come with Jess Cone from Utah State to Wake Forest. A former small college All-American at California Polytech at both guard and linebacker, Yoshida recognizes the marines and the working experience with Chuck Mills as two important factors in his life.

"A military experience is good for people," he says in retrospect of his four year marine tour from 1965 to 1969. "I enlisted because I wanted to be a part of the best. I heard the marines were the top service organization. It gives one the necessary discipline and training which can carry over to life after the military."

The 5-8, 187 pound Yoshida, whose stocky build seems awesome to most who meet him the first time, is a most humble, personable and mild mannered person. He attained a rank of captain during his service days, certainly a credit to his ability to lead men and assume responsibility.

He was also a highly established football coach during those days and coached Steve Bernstein and Harry Elliott, two fellow Deacon assistants, while at Quantico, Va. In 1968, he was head coach at Okinawa where his team was the Pacific Coast interservice champion.

Besides knowing Bernstein and Elliott, Yoshida was no stranger to Cone, who coached Yoshida at Mt. San Antonio Junior College. "He was a tough guy then, just as he is now," Yoshida kids.

After he came back from overseas, Yoshida met Mills at a coaching clinic in California. There, the two men exchanged ideas for the first time and the next year Mills hired Yoshida to join him at Utah State.

While Yoshida is no stranger to Mills, he is also no stranger to organizing a defense. With nearly ten years of defensive coaching experience, he is familiar with just about every trick an opponent could try.

And his philosophies on defense reflect Mills' personal views as do Cone's ideas on running an offense.

"I like for our teams to play an aggressive type defense. We like our players to give an all out effort and feel that speed and quickness should be two of our players greatest assets.

"Our players must also be disciplined. Each has to do his own job or else the entire defense breaks down."

But that is not likely to happen. Not with Cliff Yoshida. He's too organized to have his squad falter to the point of confusion.

In fact, he's so organized and regimented that he gets a hair cut once a week—from himself! His clean shaven head adds to his awesome appearance but only gives him more comfort. "It is easy to keep this way," he insists. "I've been wearing it this way since my freshman year in high school. I'm glad I don't have to worry about combing it."

His stocky frame and clean head make it just about impossible for him to get lost in a crowd. Even his Japanese heritage gives him a distinguishing trait. Yet he is as American and as partiotic and as loyal to his job as anyone could ever hope to be. In his desire to be part of the best, he fits in perfectly.

HERE'S TO WAKE FOREST

Oh, here's to Wake Forest, a glass of the finest,
Red, ruddy Rhenish filled up to the brim!
Her sons they are many, unrivaled by any;
With hearts o'erflowing we will sing her hymn.

Chorus

Rah, Rah, Wake Forest Rah!
Old Alma Mater's sons we are;
We'll hearlad her story and die for her glory.
Old Gold and Black is ever waving high.

As frosh we adore her, as sophs we explore her,
And carve our names upon her ancient walls;
As juniors patrol her, as seniors extol her,
And weep to leave fore'er her sacred halls.

Though fortune forsake us and fate o'ertake us,
We'll ne'er forget our dear old college days,
And o'er memory's treasure we'll drink without measure,
And sing fore'er our Alma Mater's praise.

DEAR OLD WAKE FOREST

Dear old Wake Forest!
Mystic they name to cheer;
Be thou our guardian near
Fore'er and aye.
We bow before they shrine
Thy brow with bays entwined,
All honor now be thine,
Mother today.

Dear old Wake Forest!
Thine is a noble name;
Thine is a glorious fame,
Constant and true.
We give thee' of our praise
Adore they ancient days,
Sing thee our humble lays,
Mother so dear.

FRIENDS OF WAKE FOREST

The most vital aspect of any successful college athletic program is the ability to recruit qualified student athletes; and once recruited, to underwrite their grants-in-aid so that the program will not be a burden on the other areas of the University. This is the aim of the Deacon Club Foundation.

The Wake Forest Athletic program is supported by many alumni and by many other supporters with no direct University ties. We are grateful to each and all.

We invite you to contribute any amount that you like through any of our plans. We need and want you!

It takes only $25.00 to join the Deacon Club Foundation. However, there are several categories of membership. The larger financial supporters are Stadium Club members. Executive Club sponsors contribute $2,000.00 or more per year. Scholarship sponsors contribute $1,000.00 or more per year. Golden "W" members contribute $500.00 or more per year. This automatically qualifies them as Stadium Club members. The stadium club room is a beautiful carpeted and air-conditioned facility on the second floor of the Groves Stadium Fieldhouse. The club is open 2 hours before each home football game and for certain selected basketball games. A buffet luncheon is provided members before these games.

If you would like to participate in our program, write to the Deacon Club Foundation, P. O. Box 7265, Winston-Salem, N. C. 27109.

Sincerely yours,
Bob Bartholomew

Athletic Scholarship Sponsor Program

All grants under the Wake Forest Athletic Scholarship Sponsor Program are based on character, leadership and athletic ability. Candidates are recommended by coaches on this basis, and grants are awarded by a faculty committee of Wake Forest University. This committee prescribes regulations under which the program is administered, including the selection of candidates and the awarding of scholarships.

Deacon Basketball 1973-74

THE OUTLOOK

After taking what Coach Carl Tacy described as "a step in the right direction" a year ago, there is plenty of hope that the 1973-74 basketball season will bring more strides in the Wake Forest surge.

CARL TACY

Byers led the team in scoring a year ago with a 21.7 average and is considered one of the finest shooters in the country.

Two other starters return in forwards Lee Foye (6-6) and Mike Parrish (6-6). Parrish was the team's leading rebounder a year ago with a 7.5 average in addition to ranking third in scoring with a 9.6 pace. Foye, who landed a starting spot as a freshman, scored at a 6.6 average and ranked second in rebounds at 7.1. The sixth returning letterman is center Tim Stare (6-8), who played in 15 games last season.

One of the major reasons for the optimistic outlook are the newcomers to the Wake Forest program. Skip Brown (a 6-foot guard), Don Mulnix (a 6-8 Forward) and Charlie Ryan (a 6-foot guard) will enter Wake Forest as freshmen this fall. The junior college transfers include Cal Stamp (6-8) from Gulf Coast JC and Haley Hall (6-7) from Kittrell JC.

Dan Moody, a 6-5 forward or guard, transferred to Wake Forest last January from Tennessee, where he led the Volunteer freshmen team in scoring during the 1971-72 season.

Junior guard Phil Perry's last second lay up gave the Deacons a dramatic 54-52 win over North Carolina in the first round of the 1973 ACC basketball tournament.

GROVES STADIUM INFORMATION

Welcome to Groves Stadium, home of the Wake Forest Demon Deacons. We sincerely hope you enjoy today's game and will visit with us throughout the season.

As guests of Wake Forest University, your cooperation is solicited in maintaining the dignity and reputation of the institution. We request your cooperation in observing the rules and tradition of this University and the state law which makes it illegal to bring or consume alcoholic beverages of any kind on the campus.

LOST AND FOUND — Lost and found articles should be reported to the West Entrance Ticket Booth, located behind the press box. If the booth is closed inquiries should be directed to the Athletic Ticket Office, located in the lobby of the W. N. Reynolds Gymnasium on campus. The ticket office is open daily except Sunday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 9 a.m. to 12 noon on Saturday.

SERVICE TO PHYSICIANS — Doctors anticipating emergency calls are requested to notify attendants at the First Aid Room, located at the Northwest corner of the stadium on the concourse. This service cannot be extended to the general public.

REST ROOMS — Rest rooms are located underneath both stands on the East and West sides of the stadium.

FIELD REGULATIONS — Spectators must keep off the playing field at all times during the game and at the completion of the game. At the end of the game, all spectators must use the section exits rather than the field level exits.

PUBLIC TELEPHONES — Pay stations are located on the concourse under the stands on both sides of the field.

TICKETS — The Athletic Ticket Office in the W. N. Reynolds Gymnasium on the campus will be open until 12 noon before the games for person desiring to purchase tickets for the remaining games on the schedule. Tickets may be purchased at the stadium after 12 noon on the days of the games.

PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEM ANNOUNCEMENTS — No special announcements are made over the public address system except in case of gravest emergency. Please do not request the service needlessly.

EMERGENCIES — FIRST AID — Attendants are on duty during the game at First Aid rooms located under the stands on both sides of the field. On the West side the room is at the Northwest corner, and on the East side at the Southeast corner. In case of illness or an accident, fans should attract the attention of the nearest arm-banded usher.

REFRESHMENT STANDS — Refreshment stands are located on both the East and West sides of the stadium on the concourse.

ATHLETE OF THE YEAR

Eddie Payne poses with head basketball coach Carl Tacy at the Tenth Annual All Sports Banquet this past May after receiving the Arnold Palmer Award for being Wake Forest's Athlete of the Year. The 6-1 guard from Charlotte who came to Wake Forest without an athletic scholarship, was the basketball team's floor leader and second leading scorer with a 15.5 average. Now a professional playing in Grenoble, France, Payne made both the Big Four and ACC Tournament teams last year.

GENE OVERBY

ADD PENFIELD

A perfect blend of youth and experience will once again serve as the broadcast team for all of the Deacons' football games during the 1973 season.

Gene Overby, considered one of the top newcomers in the broadcast field, will handle the play-by-play for the second year while Add Penfield, who has over 30 years of broadcasting experience, will assist with the color.

Radio Station WSJS will once again serve as the originating outlet in Winston-Salem for all the home and away games. The broadcast will include a 15-minute pre-game show and will offer a complete wrapup at the conclusion. Joining Overby and Penfield will be Frank Donaldson, who is now serving as network manager and engineer for all broadcasts.

Overby is no stranger to North Carolina sports fans. He has served as sports director for WXII television since Dec. 1, 1966. He began his broadcasting career for radio station WFRC in Reidsville, N.C., and in 1962 joined the staff of WDNC in Durham. While with WDNC, he was on the Duke Network as color man in addition to doing the play-by-play on high school games.

During the 1966 Carolina League baseball season, Overby was the play-by-play man for WAAA in Winston-Salem. He has also served as the voice of the Carolina Cougar basketball television network for the last two seasons and has been the winner of the North Carolina "Hot Stove Award" for contributions to the broadcasting of baseball news and features to the public.

Penfield is also no stranger to the Deacons Network and sports fans in North Carolina. He is in his fourth year as color man for Wake Forest and did the Deacons' play-by-play in 1964.

He joined the Deacon Network in 1970 after handling the play-by-play for Duke for 18 years. He has also broadcast Georgia Tech, Cornell, Colgate, Penn State and Syracuse football.

Penfield is a past president of the North Carolina Sports Broadcasters Association and is a former president of the Atlantic Coast Sportswriters Association. In 1969, he was presented the award as the Outstanding Broadcaster in North Carolina during 1968.

How I Discipline Myself
To Play Athletics

PAUL VELLANO

MIKE BOMGARDNER

MARK DICARLO

DICK AMBROSE

KEN PENGITORE, Clemson Quarterback: It's obvious that athletic competition requires a combination of ability as well as physical and mental dedication. It's also a combination of mental attitude and the desire to be the best athlete that you can possibly be. In a physical respect, training is extremely important. In order to compete, the athlete must push himself beyond his limit. But for a quarterback, I feel that the mental training may be the most important part of the game. He must know the offensive strategy so well that he is like an extra coach on the field. And he must know the opponent so well that he can properly adjust to its changes. With the proper overall training, you will have confidence in yourself. This self-confidence will reflect on the team and this will make your teammates have confidence in you. As a quarterback, you must have the right combination of mental and physical training, and you must believe in yourself and have confidence in your ability.

FRANK HARSH, Wake Forest Fullback: Football, perhaps more than any other sport, requires a great deal of discipline. It takes a very special person to play the game. It takes a person who is willing to dedicate a tremendous amount of time and effort to achieving a goal. It takes patience, self-control, and above all, hard work. Both the game itself and the coaches I have been fortunate enough to be associated with have taught me the value of teamwork and self-discipline. I have also learned to let this discipline work to my advantage off the field as well. Before a game, I try to stay calm and let nothing bother me. A prayer helps ease my mind. But, it's all worth the hard work when you walk off the field knowing you've done your share and contributed to the team.

BRIAN KRUEGER, N. C. State Defensive End: The discipline which I have to apply to myself is more complex than it is for most athletes. I'm a full-time student and football player, but on top of that, I'm married and last summer had knee surgery which required some extra attention. I have learned that I have to study or I'll never get to play football, yet during the season, there are times that football has to come first. Organization is the key. Getting the most out of the limited time available takes work and planning. For example, by using even the few minutes between classes to review my class notes, I have found that I save time later when I have to study for an exam. It has been my experience that I can make time for anything I want to do. And football is something that I make time for through planning and self-discipline, not just on a day-to-day basis, but with a long range plan in mind, too.

PAUL VELLANO, Maryland Defensive Tackle: For me, it was a case of making up my mind to do it. The off-season between my sophomore and junior years, Coach (Jerry) Claiborne suggested that I take off 40 pounds. He said the weight reduction would make me a better player. Coach Claiborne made such a great impression on me, so I just made up my mind to drop the pounds. I lost the weight between February and August. It took a lot of exercise and food-watching. I had to learn to pass up banana splits. The reputation of Coach Claiborne, the unity of the team, and the interest that a lot of people, who were close to me had in me, were big factors in being able to keep myself on the diet and lose the weight.

MIKE BOMGARDNER, Duke Fullback: Before each season I set up a challenging goal that I hope to achieve through hard work by season's end. After this initial step, I define the means of achieving my goal and then discipline myself to successfully fulfill my obligation to myself and more importantly to the team. My goals for this season are an ACC Championship and a bid to a major bowl game. Since both of these goals depend on total team victories, I feel the best way to achieve them is to maintain an unselfish attitude both on and off the playing field. At all times, my fundamental concern is to give all of myself, both physically and mentally, to improving the team game. If all of our players do this, I feel that our individual talents will blend together to produce the team victories needed for success.

DICK AMBROSE, Virginia Linebacker: I feel that discipline, and in particular self-discipline, is essential for success in athletics. To discipline oneself for athletics is to combine a total mental and physical effort towards a predetermined goal. This is the philosophy I try to follow closely both on and off the field, for you must discipline yourself for life as well as athletics. Physical ability is the basis for an athlete's potential to succeed. A player must be in top shape to compete with others. Once you have physically disciplined yourself for athletics you then must concentrate on giving yourself the proper mental attitude that it takes to play to win. It takes desire and willpower to stay with any conditioning program and this willingness to work hard is the real test for any athlete. If the proper mental attitude is there the rest will fall into place.

MARK DICARLO, North Carolina Linebacker: First of all, I think you must realize how very essential it is to have discipline in athletics. That's the first step. Once you've done that, then lay down some rules for yourself. Learn to ration your time so that you can devote ample time to academics, some to athletics and some to social life. Discipline really begins in the family. I feel I had learned the lessons before I came to college. Now I try to follow the rule of disciplining myself throughout the year — not just in football season. It's a great deal easier if you do it that way.

The Deacon Cross Country Team: Dedication Personified

Cross country at Wake Forest is by no means a glamorous sport.

In fact, cross country is not a glamour sport at too many schools, nonetheless at the smallest university in the country with a major intercollegiate athletic program.

But the Deacon cross country program, under the capable guidance of Coach Hal Rhea, now starting his sixth year, is a remarkable one solely in the fact that the Deacons can be competitive.

"We don't have the financial resources or the numbers of runners that so many other schools have," Rhea said before starting fall conditioning in late August, "but we have some of the most dedicated athletes I have ever known.

"Our cross country runners are a unique breed of athletes, as are all distance runners. They must be satisfied solely with seeing their name in the paper occasionally instead of reaping the rewards of television and big crowds as do the major sports."

Cross country has often been referred to as a mental sport more than anything else. Young men drive themselves endlessly running through fields, on paved roads, and along winding paths through the woods with no goal except to get to the end as fast as possible. As the saying goes, "the loneliness of a long distance runner never ends."

The Wake Forest team members are perfect examples of the typical cross country runners. And then, they are a little unique.

The Deacon squad is small, in fact, only five lettermen return from last year's team.

And they train endlessly, running ten to fifteen miles a day, seven days a week. This is a necessity to build stamina for the five mile races they run at meets.

Yet at Wake Forest, the cross country runners are unique. They perhaps represent the most intelligent athletic team, gradewise, at the University. Three of the five returning lettermen are on the Dean's List. All made over 1000 on their college boards, a fact necessary for all to be admitted to school. And one runner, Rick Barfield, is an honor student who compiled a 3.66 grade point average last year as a sophomore.

The entire squad must get by on a half scholarship a year due to a limited budget. But that, too, is only natural for a non-revenue sport.

HAL RHEA

Wake Forest will host the 1973 Atlantic Coast Conference Cross Country Championships on November 3rd. Deacon Coach Hal Rhea is optimistic about his team's chances this fall.

"It's hard sometimes to keep the older athletes interested without being able to give them much aid financially," Rhea, a professor in Physical Education said. "But this year, we do have one senior and four rising juniors who have been with us for two years previously."

The lone senior, a rarity somewhat to the cross country team, is Duncan McMillan. He lettered as a freshman and sophomore but sat out last season.

The closely knit group of juniors includes Barfield, Tom Rae, Mack Roebuck and Mike Shrader. All ran in each meet last year leading the Deacons to a 5-4 finish.

"We'll have more depth this year, and the fellows seem to have a better attitude and are working harder," Rhea said. "They are pushing themselves hard in practice trying to get ready for the season."

Rae, the Deacs' top runner last year as a sophomore, will again be the main threat. He is regarded as one of the best runners in the ACC which itself is regarded as probably the second toughest cross country conference in the nation, behind the PAC 8.

Tommy Rae has the capability to be a conference champion before he graduates," his coach said. "But this year, there are so many strong runners in the conference it will be a great challenge for him to finish at the top."

Bob Wheeler of Duke, an Olympian in 1972, Tony Wal-drop, a member of the American World University team, Jimmy Wilkins of N. C. State and Otto Mazzoni of Maryland, the defending ACC champion, should be the ones to beat this year. Maryland and Duke are rated as co-favorites to win the conference title.

"It should be a good season all the way," Rhea continued. "Wake Forest host the ACC Cross Country conference meet this fall on November 3rd so we hope the interest in cross country will increase this year."

The Deacon cross country runners represent probably the purest form of dedication in athletics. There are few people who would give themselves as much as the long distance runners.
