Q Does Farm Bureau Insurance offer lots of different types of coverage?

A Do Sunflowers grow in Kansas?

It may not be exactly proper to answer a question with a question. . . but sometimes it can make an effective point, especially if you have a Sunflower for your company emblem.

Farm Bureau Insurance is a multiple line. . .all Kansas service. You may have the Sunflower line for farm or homeowners coverage. Or you may have our car insurance. . .or a life, liability, disability, hospital confinement, crop-hail policy. . .

It's more than likely, though, that you are one of the thousands of Kansans who have Farm Bureau Insurance policies for many different things! And that's logical because you have a single, quality source to look to for advice and counsel as well as confidence in coverage.

So if someone asks you if Farm Bureau Insurance has a policy for this or that, you could answer, "Do Sunflowers grow in Kansas?" But it would probably be nicer to say, "I'll bet they do!"

K-State vs Florida State September 17, 1977

Florida State opened its 1977 football season impressively enough, decking Southern Mississippi, 35-6, last weekend. So Coach Bobby Bowden's Seminoles can be forgiven if they spent part of the past week resting on their laurels.

Not so for the Kansas State Wildcats. In their case, week number two was "back to the drawing board" time after a disappointing, 39-0 loss to Brigham Young.

"We re-evaluated a lot of things this week," K-State boss Ellis Rainsberger admitted.

Just what that means, or how successful the second persual was, will have a lot of bearing on this afternoon's Parents' Day contest.

Florida State and Kansas State have met only twice previously on the gridiron. Unfortunately for the Wildcats, both of those games were claimed by FSU — 33-7 in 1970, and 20-10 a year ago.

It's the first time ever for the Seminoles to play in Manhattan.

"I know, the players know, and the coaching staff knows, that we are much better football team than we showed at Brigham Young," Rainsberger believes aloud.

"But what is scary, we also know that Florida State has every reason to be a much better football team than Brigham Young."

Mistakes are common place in season openers and Kansas State certainly made its share versus BYU . . . three lost fumbles, a pass interception, two bad snaps on punts and 110 yards in penalties.

Rainsberger knows the elimination of that kind of play will enable KSU to be "a much better football team."

Today's foe, Florida State, apparently had its act together a week earlier.

The Seminoles totaled nearly 400 yards in their first outing, while holding Southern Miss to a meager total of 180.

What's more, Florida State did it mostly with a weapon very familiar to the Kansas State defense — the pass.

Quarterbacks Jimmy Jordan and Wally Woodham completed 19 of 32 passes for 265 yards and three touchdowns versus Southern Mississippi.

So, for the second straight week, K-State can expect heavy enemy aerial bombardment.

Welcome to K-State

Welcome to an exciting afternoon of Wildcat football.

At Kansas State University we are proud of our faculty and staff who are dedicated to giving our student athletes every opportunity to develop their special talents. Our coaches know that student athletes must meet the normal rigors of college life, the challenges of academic pursuits, plus the demands of a first-rate intercollegiate athletic schedule.

The positive interaction between KSU players and coaches supports student success in these areas.

Our athletes and coaches enjoy tough competition. We have it scheduled this fall, in both pre-Conference games and in the Big Eight.

We hope you enjoy this afternoon and that you will come often to see KSU in action!

Red Skelton — A Man and His Magic

There are many faces to Red Skelton — the clown, the artist, the serious performer. The sellout crowd that gathers in Ahearn Fieldhouse this evening for the special Parents' Day show sponsored by the K-State Union Program Council-Concert Committee will see Skelton in his best known part — the clown.

Skelton has always enjoyed making people laugh, which is only natural since he does it so well. He has a certain magical quality that few people possess. He got his first comedy laugh at the age of 10, when he joined a medicine show run by a man named Doc Lewis and fell off the stage into the audience. -

After his first taste of comedy, Skelton went on to play tent shows, burlesque, vaudeville, showboats, minstrel shows, circuses, "Tom Shows" (shows that staged "Uncle Tom's Cabin") and walkathons during the depression of the 1930s. His first real fame came through a doughnut-dunking routine he perfected after watching another man dunking in a cafe.

This successful act brought Skelton a booking into New York's Loews State and then 16 weeks at the Paramount Theatre. In the late 1930s he became a radio comedian in Chicago, which won him a movie contract with MGM Studios in 1940. He has appeared in more than 40 motion pictures in his 15 years there.

From his highly successful radio show and movie career, Skelton moved into a half-hour television show. He was an instant hit. Red eventually expanded from the half-hour show to an hour with the advent of tape. In 1971, his 20th consecutive year on network television, Red reverted to a half-hour format and returned to NBC where, back in 1950, he first began a video career that has been unequalled by any weekly comedy show or star.

As a concert performer, Red Skelton takes the measure of each audience he faces and cuts the pattern of his show. Because of his years in vaudeville and personal appearances, Red has developed a sixth sense about audiences: an awareness of what makes people laugh. His tremendous repertoire of pantomime, "ver-bamimes," and jokes make it possible for him to select a program to accomodate spectators. Of course, there are classics among his repertoire that remain favorites of audiences everywhere.

He usually includes one or more of these, such as the Old Man and the Parade, the new father seeing his child for the first time in the maternity ward, Guzzler's Gin and the Pledge of Allegiance.

Red has a best selling record of his spoken interpretation of the Pledge of Allegiance. The record came into great demand after a recitation on "The Red Skelton Hour" of January 14, 1969. Skelton has won 48 awards for his Americanism and has been cited many times for his serious words. In 1973, he delivered the Pledge of Allegiance on the floor of the U. S. Senate. On July 4, 1976, Red had the honor of reciting the Pledge in one of America's most historic spots — Independence Hall in Philadelphia.

Besides being a performer, Red Skelton paints in oil, writes short stories and composes music. He has written four children's books which he illustrated: "Gertrude and Heathcliffe," "Clown Alley," "The Big Fellows," and "Frog Folley." He has written 8,000 musical selections and writings — from lyrical love songs to stirring marches. His music selections are included in two record albums: "Red Skelton Conducts" and "Red Skelton Conducts Music from the Heart."

Skelton was born Richard Bernard Skelton, July 18, 1913, Vincennes, Indiana. His father, Joseph, a circus clown and college teacher, died two months before Skelton was born.

Although he never knew his father, the love of clowning, the love of mime and of the Big Top with all its magic for everyone, is an innate thing with Skelton.

Whether it's making people laugh, composing music, or writing stories, Red Skelton will add a lot of class and a little magic to make the work extra special.

Parents' Day 1977

Parents' Day, what better time for a sentimental journey.

"Sentimental Journey," that's the theme of Parents' Day 1977, an effort to allow parents to take a sentimental journey back to their college days.

One of the newest events in the annual Parents Day activities is the presentation of a $150 scholarship sponsored by Chimes, the K-State junior honorary.

Parents were asked to write a letter of not more than 250 words expressing what they aspired to while in college and what they expect of their children.

The winning parents and son or daughter will be announced at halftime of today's game.

Coach Ellis Rainsberger and Staff

"The days of us taking anything from anybody are over at Kansas State. We plan to be highly competitive from here on out."

Those are the prophetic words of K-State football boss Ellis Rainsberger, who approaches the 1977 season with optimism of the guarded nature. He believes two seasons of laying painstaking groundwork and the careful recruiting of outstanding athletes will begin to show positive results.

"We know most people have picked us eighth (in the Big Eight), almost unanimously," Rainsberger reminds, "but neither our football players, or our coaches believe that. We have a much better team than we had last year."

Quite simply, since Ellis Rainsberger's arrival at Kansas State two years ago, Wildcat football players have weighed more, stood taller and ran faster.

"We are beginning to get the ingredients (speed and size) we want, now it's just a matter of how well we put it all together," Rainsberger adds.

He certainly is no stranger to being involved in building programs. Classic examples of his contributions were Washburn and Wisconsin.

In 1964 at Washburn, his first head coaching job, he guided the Ichabods to an 8-1 season, and the school's first conference championship in 31 years. At Wisconsin, he served as offensive and recruiting coordinator in 1973 and 1974. The latter year, under Rainsberger's tutelage, the Badgers ranked eighth in the nation in scoring, and second in the Big Ten in total offense, and wound up with a 7-4 record.

It was those type of coaching feats which made Rainsberger a solid choice for KSU's head football coaching position in 1975.

The added plus was the fact that Rainsberger's purple ties are deep. He received his B.S. degree from here in 1958, and was a Wildcat football standout.

That's how most K-Staters first became acquainted with the dynamo from East St. Louis, Ill. They remembered that square-jawed, crew-cut fighter who thrived on enthusiasm and determination, playing regardless of injury. He was a two-time all-Big Seven performer (although weighing less than 200 pounds) and captained the Bus Mertes-coached KSU football squads in 1956 and 1957. And he was only KSU's third academic all-American footballer.

Current K-State footballers obviously have been influenced by Rainsberger. They are a squad full of "100 percenters," who play with the same gritted enthusiasm displayed by their tutor during his salad days at KSU.

GEORGE WALSTAD offensive coordinator

Hard work does pay. George Walstad is living proof. He was rewarded for his tireless contributions both as coach and recruiter by being elevated to KSU's offensive coordinator last spring. Walstad also tutors the Wildcat offensive line-men.

"One of the hardest-working coaches I've ever known," is the way Ellis Rainsberger describes Walstad, who served as K-State offensive line boss the past two years.

Walstad was a highly-successful coach at Garden City Community College before joining the K-State staff in the spring of 1975.

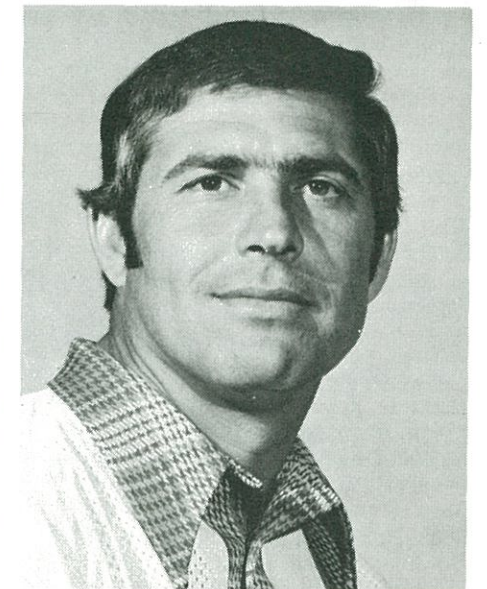

In seven seasons at Garden City Walstad's clubs compiled a 39-29-1 mark and they were 35-15 for the past five years. His teams recorded 7-3 marks in each of the 1970, '71, '72, '73 and '74 seasons.

The 37-year-old native of Mooreland, Oklahoma, played offensive and defensive end at Oklahoma under Cliff Speegle in 1959-62. In 1963 he served as a graduate assistant on O-State's freshman football staff.

During 1964 and 1965 he played for the Fort Benning Army all-star team while on military duty.

Prior to Garden City, Walstad spent three seasons as an assistant at Wichita Southeast High School.

DICK SELCER defensive coordinator

Dick Selcer is spunky and humorous, but when it comes to coaching defense, he's sure as a mid-wife pinned diaper.

For the third straight year he's the genius behind K-State's defense.

Selcer was the defensive secondary coach at Wisconsin for three seasons before joining the Kansas State staff in January 1975.

A native of Cincinnati, Ohio, Selcer was a halfback on the 1956-57-58 Notre Dame teams and was a third team all-American baseball player for the Irish his senior year. He was a football, basketball and baseball standout at Cincinnati Elder High School where he gained all-Ohio honors in football and baseball.

Selcer joined the collegiate coaching ranks as an assistant at Xavier University in 1962. After three seasons there he moved to Cincinnati where he coached the defensive backs and ends for two years (1965-66).

He moved to Brown University for three seasons (1967-68-69) as defensive backfield coach before taking the head coaching job at Xavier in 1970.

After two seasons at Xavier, Selcer joined John Jardine's staff at Wisconsin in 1972.

Thanks for your support

KSU's Department of Athletics extends a hearty thanks to the automobile dealers throughout the state who participate in the loaning of courtesy cars to staff members.

This program provides the athletic department with means for staff and team travel in addition to broadening the use of funds.

We salute these car dealers for their support in helping the athletic department meet its transportation needs in 1977-78 and over the years.

Pride of Wildcat Land

Phillip Hewett

Phil Hewett, assistant professor of music, has been at Kansas State University since 1968. Under Hewett's direction the Marching Wildcats have become one of the largest and best bands in the country. The 1977 "Pride of Wildcat Land" will have over 350 performers on the field and will be featured in NBC TV and CBS TV during the football season.

Hewett received his BME degree from Texas Christian University and his MS from Kansas State University. Before coming to K-State he taught in the public schools of Texas for twelve years and was on the faculty of Del Mar College and Texas Christian University.

son, Nancy Wilson, Mundell Lowe, Phil Wilson, Rich Matteson, Don Rader, Kim Richmond, Bill Case and Maynard Ferguson, all who have appeared with the band since 1970.

The band participates in local, regional, national and international jazz festivals and has compiled an impressive record of contest wins. The ensemble has been invited to participate in the prestigious Montreux Jazz Festival in Montreux, Switzerland the past two years.

Howdy Week

Planned to introduce the new bandmen to the excitement of a first-rate college marching band, Howdy Week begins with several days of playing rehearsal and marching drills. A traditional Howdy Week picnic, including games, softball and swimming, winds up the week. A Howdy Week King and Queen are chosen, and all band members participate in the fun.

The Bands

Pride of Wildcat Land Marching Band

One of the largest bands in the Big Eight Conference, and certainly the most spirited, the Pride of Wildcat Land Marching Band performs at all home football games and selected out-of-town games. The band also performs at major league professional sporting events in the Midwest. The 1976-77 edition of the band included 284 musicians, four drum majors, 11 K-Stepper twirlers; two featured twirlers, 36 women's drill team members, 12 flagbearers and 12 staff members.

Basketball Pep Band

The 50-piece Pep Band is the focal point for cheers, music and enthusiasm at all Wildcat home basketball games as well as for pep rallies, other athletic events and all-school functions. Membership in the Pep Band is by application from the Pride of Wildcat Land Marching Band.

Symphonic Band

The premier band in the concert organization, the 80-piece Symphonic Band is selected by individual auditions which are conducted in August, November and January each year. The band rehearses each Monday during football season and four days a week during the concert season.

Concert Band

Open to anyone who wants to participate, the Concert Band rehearses four times a week during concert season.

Concert Jazz Ensemble

The top band in the jazz program offers a great opportunity to expand musical knowledge and to accompany jazz greats such as Ed Shaughnessy, Doc Severinson, Arnie Lawrence, Clark Terry, Louis Bell-

The Great Weigh-In

During the 1976 football season the band conducted a fund-raising drive for new uniforms. Band members sold tickets with contestants trying to guess the weight of the entire marching band. The prize was a 1977 Dodge Aspen provided by Ed Schram Dodge of Manhattan. Although the proceeds were not as much as expected, the band members showed again their drive and determination to keep the Pride of Wildcat Land Band the best in the nation.

Band Day

K-State's annual Band Day is a gala celebration and is planned a year in advance to include all possible activities. All Kansas high school bands are invited to participate. In 1976, more than 6,000 students joined the parade and massed on the field to provide the show. The highlight of the performance was the "1812 Overture," augmented by cannons and bazookas provided by the Ft. Riley First Armored Division.

When it really counts, you send in the FIRST team.

Life always has its fourth-and-long yardage situations—when it seems the only thing left to do is punt.

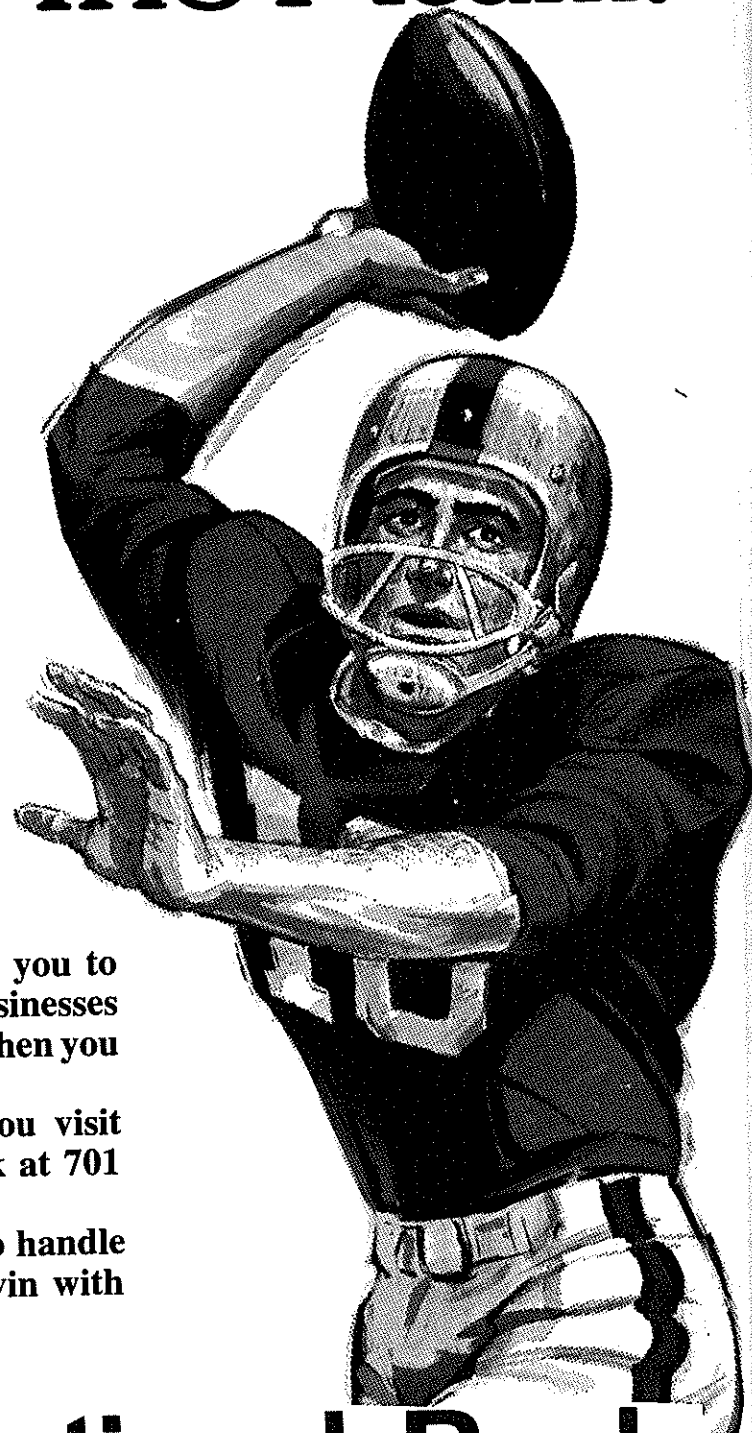

That's when you need to call on the FIRST team—the team at First National Bank, that is.

They're first stringers in every sense of the word: In money management...in service to you...and in service to Manhattan and the area community.

First National is the only Manhattan bank with four locations. It's the only bank with BankersCard, the card that enables you to get discounts at participating local businesses and at many hotels and restaurants when you travel—and nine other benefits.

Ask about BankersCard when you visit our "First Lady" at our main bank at 701 Poyntz Avenue.

Send in the First National team to handle your money matters...you always win with the First team.

T rue, Tony Dorsett and Ricky Bell and assorted other Great Dirt Machines have gone with the wins. Accord them respectful goodbyes and then return to your seat as quickly as possible and fasten the belts. Another batch of dynamite performers is due to snatch the autumn spotlight with little loss of glitter.

In keeping with the overall national economy, college offense has been struck by inflation, and struck again and again. The cost of defending keeps going up.

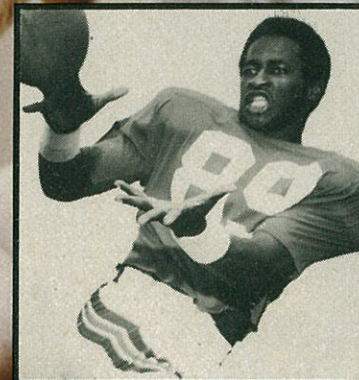

Only the names have been changed. Where it was Ricky Bell, now it will be Charles White of the same Southern California address. Headlines hogged by Dorsett last year may now go into the scrapbook of Terry Miller, the Oklahoma State racehorse. Instead of Rice's Tommy Kramer throwing for gluttonous acreage, now it may be Gifford Nielsen, the Mormon Rifle from Brigham Young. And perhaps the spiciest ingredient of all will be a mischievous dervish named Wes Chandler of Florida, who could be the most exciting offensive weapon in the land.

Not only do college runners and throwers and catchers keep bettering their marks, but the 1977 offenses should be juiced even more by a rather significant change in the rules. Offensive linemen may now block downfield on screen passes, whereas they formerly were tethered to the line of scrimmage until the pass was caught.

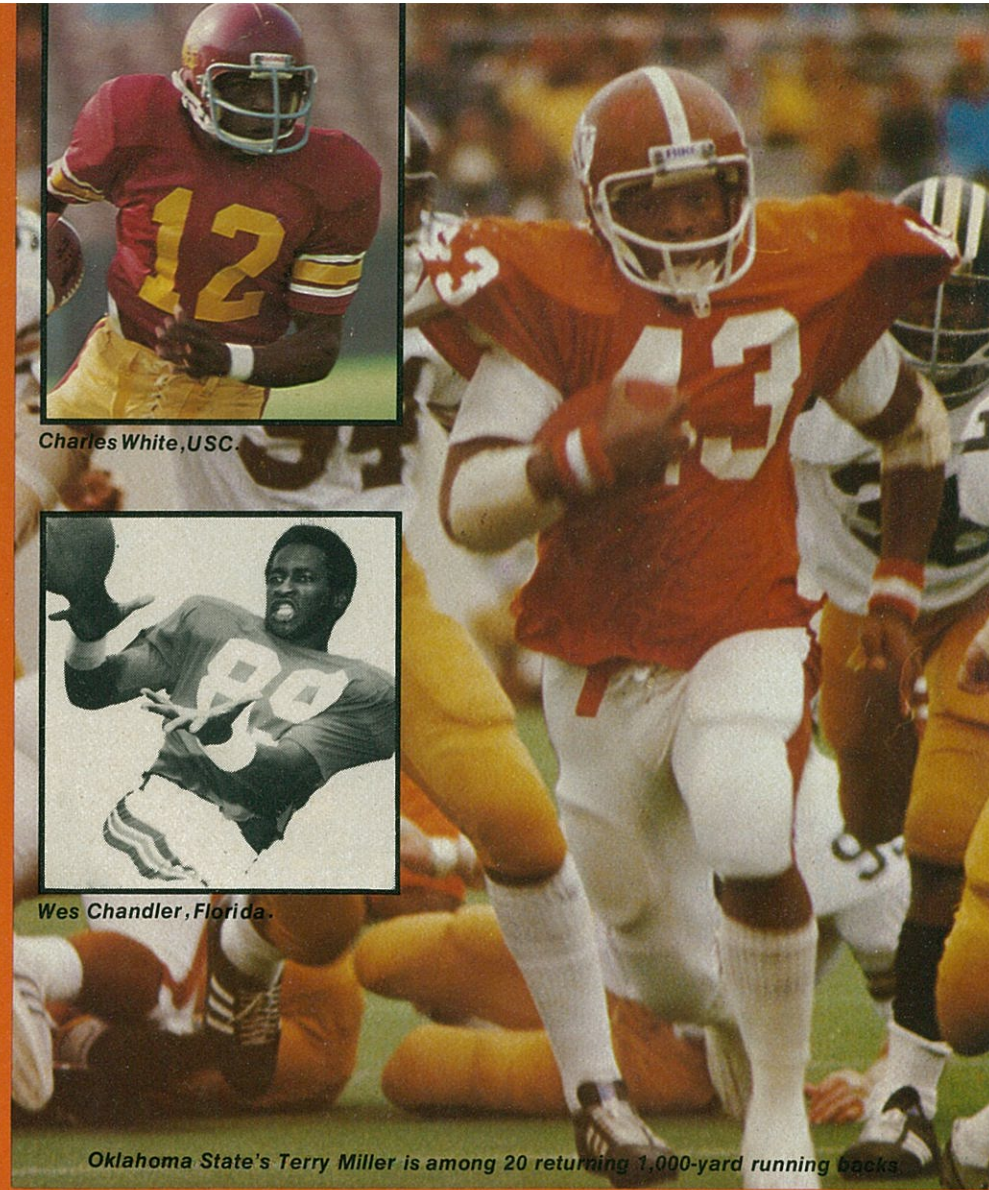

In other words, linemen can tear downfield and block the pants off linebackers and cornerbacks without worrying about being whistled for "ineligible receiver downfield." Providing, of course, the pass receiver catches ball at or behind the line of scrimmage. This blocking liberation should do much to open the passing potential of Wishbone or Veer teams; the quarterback now may throw a short forward pass or shovel pass to the trailing halfback while guards and tackles are laying waste downfield as if the play were a run.

Blockers also can do the same on rollout option plays, without fretting whether the quarterback's flip to the trailing halfback is lateral or forward.

"This is the biggest change in the passing game since they changed the size of the ball," said Dave Nelson, secretary of the rules committee. The streamlined ball was introduced in 1934 and immediately brought national attention to performers like Slingin' Sammy Baugh, TCU's great passer of the mid-'30s.

Now, across the country, weary defensive coaches are arguing there was no reason to loosen the rules for offensive advantage. Already college offenses are rushing for 100 more yards per game than they were a decade ago. The rushers, however, because of the popu-

ABOUT THE AUTHOR—Sports director Blackie Sherrod came to the Dallas Times Herald in 1958 after ten years with the Fort Worth Press. He has been elected Texas' outstanding sportswriter 13 times in the past 18 years by his news media contemporaries and in 1962 won the National Headliner Award for the most consistently outstanding sports column in America. larity of the Wishbone and Veer attacks, have been considerably ahead of the passing teams, which may account for the new rules.

As for the starring personnel—that Southern Cal production line of fantastic runners shows no indication of a slowdown. From the Trojan belt that produced O.J. Simpson, Clarence Davis, Anthony Davis, and Ricky Bell now steps Charles White. As a freshman tailback last season, White was Bell's understudy, but still he whipped off 858 yards when the senior tailback sat out injuries. White is built on one of those smaller lasts that have become so popular among collegiate tailbacks, 6'0" and 180 and able to run holes in the wind. Last season, he had runs of 79 and 60 yards, leading his coach to testify, "He's one of the best breakaway threats I've ever seen."

And yet White may have to split opportunity with Lynn Cain, a 205-pounder who has been lame with a knee injury for two seasons but now pronounces himself fit as a fiddle and ready to roll. Cain was the talk of the West Coast as a junior college halfback in 1974. For further confusion, Robinson calls fullback Mosi Tatupu (7.0 per carry) his "best all-around back."

Terry Miller, the Oklahoma State terror, finished fourth in the Heisman Trophy voting last season, behind Dorsett, Bell, and Rob Lytle of Michigan, the consensus All-America running backs. All have burnt up their eligibility.

Miller has 4.4 speed, exceptional for 195 pounds, and he seems fiercest when the challenge is greatest. Against Oklahoma last season, an outfit noted for its hardrock defense, Miller rushed 159 yards. He followed with 228 yards against Missouri. Add Nebraska, Kansas State, and Iowa State to that string and Miller averaged 191 running yards in

Miller, who actually plays in long panty girdles (to prevent pulled leg muscles), is one of 20 college runners returning to the track after 1,000-yard seasons in 1976. Elvis Peacock, from that Oklahoma speed stable, didn't; but then he is in a situation like that of Johnny Davis and Tony Nathan of Alabama and Alois Blackwell of Houston—their Wishbone or Veer attacks utilize so many different runners that they don't get as many running opportunities as some of their contemporaries. Like Miller and Jerome Persell of Western Michigan, for example; the latter averaged 27 carries as a sophomore last season, cashing them for 150 yards each Saturday.

Mike Williams, a 215-pound junior from New Mexico, is another with a heavy work load and he gains 112 yards weekly and is an effective receiver as well. Ben (Go-Go) Garry of Southern Mississippi is not as large (197), but he's durable enough to carry 20 times a game and average 5.2 yards per try.

Two of the busiest backs in the land are from the same conference and have comparable dimensions—George Woodard, the Texas A&M fullback who plays anywhere from 230 to 250 pounds, and Earl Campbell, his counterpart at rival Texas, a 230-pound crusher who vows he'll be at full gallop for his senior season after a bout with bruises last year. Adding to the awe generally accorded Campbell is the fact that he'll probably run wide this fall, as well as smashing the middle. The Longhorn offense, under new coach Guy Benjamin was among top 5 passers in '76.

Fred Akers, will junk the Wishbone for the Veer attack with Campbell stationed as one of the deep backs.

Also from that sector of the country is a big (225) groundhog named Derrick Jensen, whose dogged travels on behalf of the modest University of Texas-Arlington team have escaped national recognition.

There are legions of others. Consider North Carolina State's Ted Brown who has gained 2,000 college yards and, he's still a junior! Roscoe Coles is one of those pint-sized rascals (5'9", 167) who must handle Wishbone blocking in addition to his travels, averaged 5.4 yards per carry and 101.7 yards per game for Virginia Tech, and that's the same play average as Theotis Brown, the UCLA junior dasher.

Yale's nifty John Pagliaro brings a 5.7-yard average into his senior season. Ohio's Arnold Welcher has put two 1,000-yard seasons back-to-back. Jeff Logan served his two-year apprenticeship at Ohio State well, although hidden by the considerable shadow of Archie Griffin. Inheriting the Buckeye's travel business department last season, Logan knocked off 106 yards per game and now enjoys his own pedigree.

Other members of that magic 1,000-yard club are Kim Kruis of William and Mary; Ben Cowins, with a gaudy 6.3 average at Arkansas; Dexter Green, who has two seasons left at Iowa State; Kevin McLee, the Georgia cracker; Calvin Prince of Louisville; James McDougald of Wake Forest; Mike Harkrader of Indiana (the latter two are sophomores!);

The Big 8 Offensive Outlook for '77

player they compare with former Nebraska Heisman winner Johnny Rodgers—were on everybody's All-Big Eight teams last fall.

But they're only a step or two ahead of other folks at the skilled offensive positions, like Missouri split end Leo Lewis, the Big Eight's premier kick returner; running backs Dexter Green of Iowa State, Richard Berns and Monte Anthony of Nebraska, Norris Banks of Kansas, and Ken King of Oklahoma, and veteran quarterbacks Thomas Lott of Oklahoma, Pete Woods of Missouri, Jeff Knapple of Colorado and Wendell Henrikson of Kansas State.

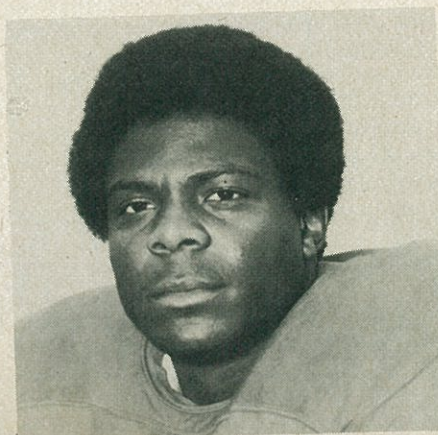

If it's the "beef" in the interior line you like, remember the names of behemoths like Colorado's Leon White (6'3", 271) and Matt Miller (6'6", 274), Kansas State's Bob Thompson (6'8", 275), Missouri's James Taylor (6'5", 255), Nebraska's Tom Davis (6'3", 230) and Oklahoma's Greg Roberts (6'4", 250) and Karl Baldischwiler (6'4", 255).

... And then there's Terry, as in Oklahoma State's Terry Miller, AP All-American, highest underclassman vote-getter in the Heisman balloting, who totaled 1,714 yards rushing as a junior. Perhaps never in its glorious history has the Big Eight had a runner to compare with the Colorado Springs native.

Miller, who can run 4.3 for the 40 without going all out, comes into his senior year with more career rushing yards (3,074) than any Big Eight back has ever garnered at this stage of a career. He's already one of only four Big Eight rushers ever to put 1,000-yard seasons back-to-back. He heads into '77 with a string of eight straight 100-yard plus games. Included in the streak are two 200-yard afternoons—228 yards and three touchdowns vs. Missouri and 221 yards and five touchdowns vs. Kansas State.

The OSU cast Miller plays with in '77

will be almost entirely new. Halfback Skip Taylor (378 yards rushing in '76) and quarterback Harold Bailey, a quick sophomore who is a super runner, are returning starters.

Significantly, perhaps, Oklahoma State was unbeaten with Bailey as its starting quarterback in '76, with the Houston-bred 185-pounder going 5-0 over the final six games, including the late October upset of Oklahoma which catapulted the Cowboys to a share of the title with the Sooners and Colorado.

While Bailey is just emerging as another of the great option running quarterbacks in the Big Eight, Lott, the latest wishbone wizard at Oklahoma, is already there.

Lott, thrown in as a starter for the first time in the Texas game last October, appeared to be in the class of Jack Mildren and Steve Davis, both OU legends, by the time the season ended with the Sooners routing Wyoming in the Fiesta Bowl.

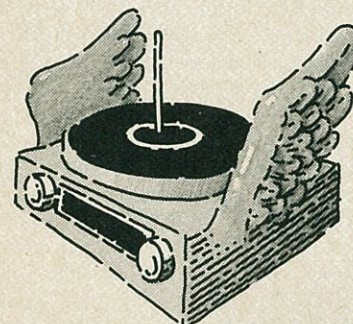

The league's other standout returning quarterbacks are noted more for their passing, although CU's Knapple, Missouri's Woods and K-State's Henrikson can run when it's necessary. It was Woods' mixture of option running and timely passing that lifted Mizzou to a stunning upset of Ohio State in Colum-and Ron Rowland of Washington.

And for sleepers, remember the names of Charles Alexander of LSU, Dennis Johnson of Mississippi State, Steve Atkins of Maryland (who averaged 151 yards in four games before he got hurt), and two other injured players: David "Deacon" Turner (982 yards in 6 1/2 games) of San Diego State, and Bruce Gibson (733 yards in 5 1/2 games) of Pacific.

Wes Chandler, the Florida whirlwind, may be considered a handicapped player by some, because he is a wide receiver in a Wishbone offense, a position that serves as a decoy more than an active participant. Chandler caught 44 passes last season and averaged a sensational 22 yards per catch. His wild helter-skelter sprints (he broke five tackles in a 64-yard run against Auburn) also are utilized in punt and kickoff returns, and he may be the most dangerous game-breaker in the land. In this category also are Ozzie Newsome, who plays tight end, split end, and kick returner for Alabama; Joe Stewart, Missouri's slotback; and Arthur Whittington of Southern Methodist, a lean whippet who leads all returnees in all-purpose running.

And goodness knows the potential of Johnny "Lam" (from hometown of Lampasas) Jones, the Olympic sprinter who will be at his new post of flanker (beware of those screen passes and reverses) for the Texas Longhorns.

Other outstanding players are scattered all over the landscape. There's John Jefferson, big and fast and strong, at Arizona State, Preston Dennard of New Mexico, USC's Randy Simmrin, and TCU's Mike Renfro. Split end Philip Logan is South Carolina's third all-time career receiver, and is blazingly quick. Last year's third most productive catcher, Doug Cunningham of Rice, returns for his senior season, but he no longer has Tommy Kramer throwing to him.

Mike Levenseller of Washington State, last season's fourth leading receiver, will have veteran quarterback Jack Thompson on the launching end, and Thompson was the third collegiate passer last year as a sophomore. Receiver Dan Doornink, also of Washington State, has the same happy situation. Another top West Coast quarterback, Stanford's Guy Benjamin, was one of three Pac-8 players ranked in the top five nationally in passing.

Illinois State's Jeff Gowan has the same problem as Cunningham: his passer graduated. But Army's tall Clennie Brundidge will have Leamon Hall throwing to him again, and Todd Christensen, Brigham Young's big fullback, again will catch Gifford Nielsen, who may become the most prolific career passer in college history. He needs 2884 yards to break the career record of John Reeves of Florida.

Nielsen is the classic dropback passer, tall enough at 6'5" to see over the rushers. His agility is supported by his background of two years as a basketball starter at Brigham Young.

Then, there are the two-way quarterbacks like Rodney Allison of Texas Tech, Danny Davis of Houston, and Noel Mazzone of New Mexico, all of whom combine rushing talent with passing. Rick Leach of Michigan, for example, averaged 7.7 yards every time he took the snap, either running or passing, and Allison averaged 7.1.

And don't overlook Pitt's Matt Kavanaugh, 1977 Sugar Bowl MVP, who hit 59 percent of his passes when not handing off to Dorsett.

Ken MacAfee, the Notre Dame mountain, was almost everybody's All-America choice as tight end last year. His challengers this season, if any should dare, may include Jim Moore of Ohio State, who missed nine 1976 games with a knee injury, William Gay of Southern Cal, and George Freitas of California.

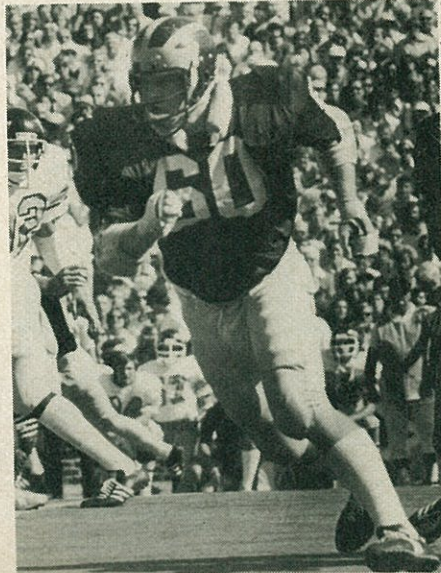

Offensive linemen generally are the most anonymous players at any level. "If I robbed a bank, I'd hide out in the offensive line," said one Southwestern coach. "Unless you jump offside, nobody notices you."

But there were enough coaches and scouts and pressboxers who noticed Chris Ward of Ohio State and Mark Donahue of Michigan last season to vote them consensus All-America tack-

280-ZZZAP

This is the latest Z-Car from Datsun. But allow us to delve into history for a moment to put it into perspective. The 240-Z was the first Z ever. It had zap. One of a kind. A two-seater, four-speed GT that quickly became America's most-wanted sports car. And you know, it still is. A good used one is worth more today than it originally cost. Next came the 260-Z, and so did a lot of Z refinements. The engine grew, for example, from 2400cc's to 2600cc's. It had zzap. And so does its resale value. Then came the 280-Z, with an electronically fuel injected 2800cc overhead cam engine.

To this year's Z, in both its two-passenger and four-passenger versions, we've added functional hood louvers, a 5-speed option, mag type wheel covers, breathable vinyl, center armrest console and 13 other small, but rather nifty, refinements. Z-Cars keep getting better. It's like investing in a sure thing.

Just see your Datsun Dealer for a zap-drive.

And if you decide to buy one and keep right on going, your friends will understand.

THE FREE SAFETY

Preventing the bomb is one of free safety's primary concerns.

by Pete Finney, New Orleans STATES-ITEM

If you could draw one up, you'd like him to be about 6'2", 190, a rangy guy who can run a 4.5 40 and have at least a B-plus average.

The free safety is the quarterback of the defense. It's a constant battle of wits, not only between him and the quarterback, but between him and the opposing offensive coach.

He needs the intelligence to make mini-second adjustments, he needs the speed and the range to cover a wide area of real estate, and he has one recurring king-size headache: making the tackle on the option play.

The option, something like the outside veer pioneered by the University of Houston, places more demands on the college free safety than on his pro counterpart. Actually, he is seldom what you call "free." With the option prevalent, defensive backs always must be alert to key the run, and, in the case of the free safety, it's essential to have a "can't miss" tackler.

From his station approximately 10 yards behind the line of scrimmage—lined up with the quarterback—the free safety is the tackle on the outside veer, that is, either on the quarterback or on the pitchman. Many times it gets to be a one-on-one situation when the quarterback fakes to the halfback, angling between tackle and end, and then either keeps or pitches to the trailing back. With the cornerback taken deep by an outside receiver, with the defensive end and tackle frozen by the fake, it can come down to the strong safety and free safety in one-on-one battles with the quarterback and trailing halfback.

FREE SAFETY

When the option suddenly becomes a pass, the free safety must be able to recover.

Basically, there are five receivers who can come from the offensive alignment. If a team is using a four-deep secondary and committing three of those players to "man defense" and two of the front line (linebackers) to "man" coverage, then there is a free man left in the secondary. In this case, the term "free" is applicable.

The four-deep scheme of play is probably the most popular today. The free safety and strong safety are usually interchangeable. However, as a rule, the free safety usually is the faster and quicker of the two, so his talents are needed more in the middle of the secondary rather than to one side of the offense.

In the three-deep scheme, eight players stay relatively close to the line of scrimmage, the remaining three defending the deep and outside passing zones. The free safety usually plays deeper (12-to-15 yards) in the three-deep than he does in the four-deep.

Maryland's Jerry Claiborne, a three-deep proponent, acknowledges there are some holes in the scheme—a good passer can hit the short ones—but he feels it provides the soundest coverage to stop the long touchdown pass. On the basic coverage, the tackles are the contain men while the ends drop off to cover the outside zones. Most always the safety acts as the centerfielder.

Most teams employ a variety of disguise coverages. Against a strong running team, they will move into "man" coverage, one that allows good pressure from the ends and tackles, the safety being responsible for the tight end in the event of a pass. In the three-deep, when teams blitz their front eight, the same responsibility exists; that is, the safety is responsible for the tight end, the corners for the outside receivers.

Larry Wilson, who starred at the University of Utah before going on to additional fame as a free safety in the pros, says the secret to defensive football is knowing what the other ten men are doing. If you know you have inside help, for example, it allows you to play a receiver pretty tough to his outside and dare him to run inside. "There are two different styles of going back," says Wilson. "One is to backpedal, when you just go straight back still facing the line. To me, it's the best because you remain square. You don't turn your body, so you're able to go either way quickly. The other way is like a basketball player when you turn and slide. I don't like this way because it's tougher to change directions."

Wilson feels the hardest thing for a safety to recognize is the fly pattern because most receivers break outside, break inside, or hook. It makes a safety used to dropping back 12 to 14 yards hold up. This second's hesitancy can be fatal. "You have to keep your feet moving," explains Wilson, "because once you stop your feet and a guy comes by you, you're in trouble."

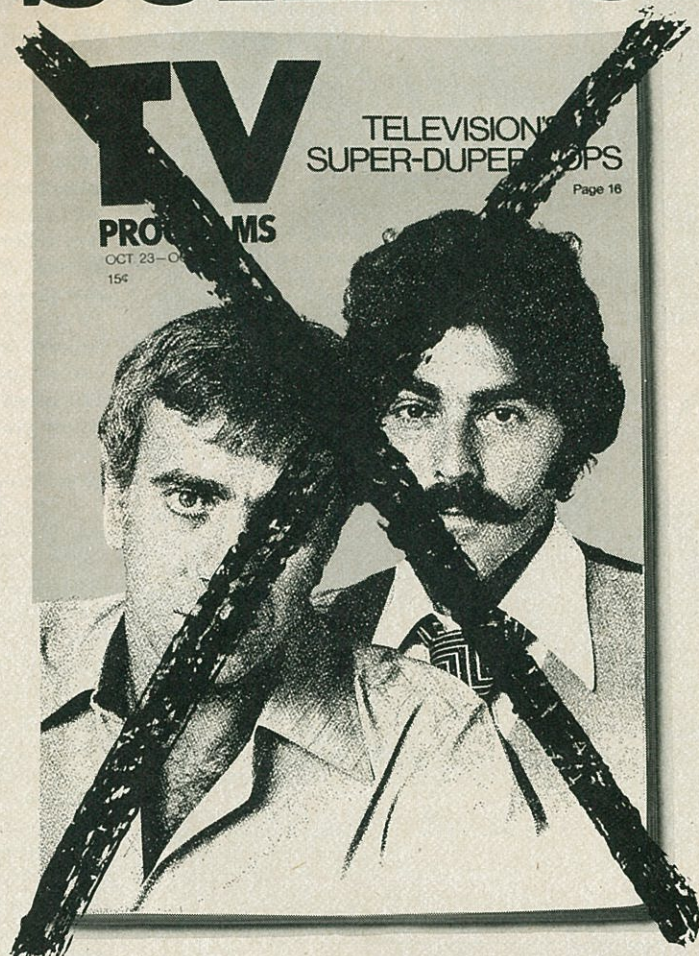

Among the most important skills for a safety are anticipation and range, along with speed, of course. Because of the ever-present demand of having to come up and make a tackle on the option, the college safety must be able to recover, that is, change courses when the outside option suddenly becomes a pass. This changes his assignment from making a tackle at the line of scrimmage. This alone makes it one of the most demanding jobs of the 22 positions, offense and defense. More often than not, a free safety in college has more one-on-one chances in six-point plays—making a tackle or breaking up a pass—than anyone else.

He starts out in a relaxed position, one that allows him to move in any of four directions. He must be able to bring everyone on the field into his vision, first keying the action and flow of the ball and then the receivers' actions.

The want ad would read something like this: Must be accurate open field tackler; able to trap runners or force them against the sideline; must be able to quickly recognize individual pass routes before they materialize; must understand pass-pattern strategy; should be able to anticipate passer's target; should be a smart, hustling leader-type athlete, a centerfielder with a lot more responsibilities.

Other than that, not much is required.

BIG 8 Offensive Outlook

bus last fall. The rangy 6'4" junior, who passed for 998 yards, also directed a Tiger win at Nebraska. "Pete had some great, great games for us," MU Coach Al Onofrio says. "He's one of the top quarterbacks in the Big Eight."

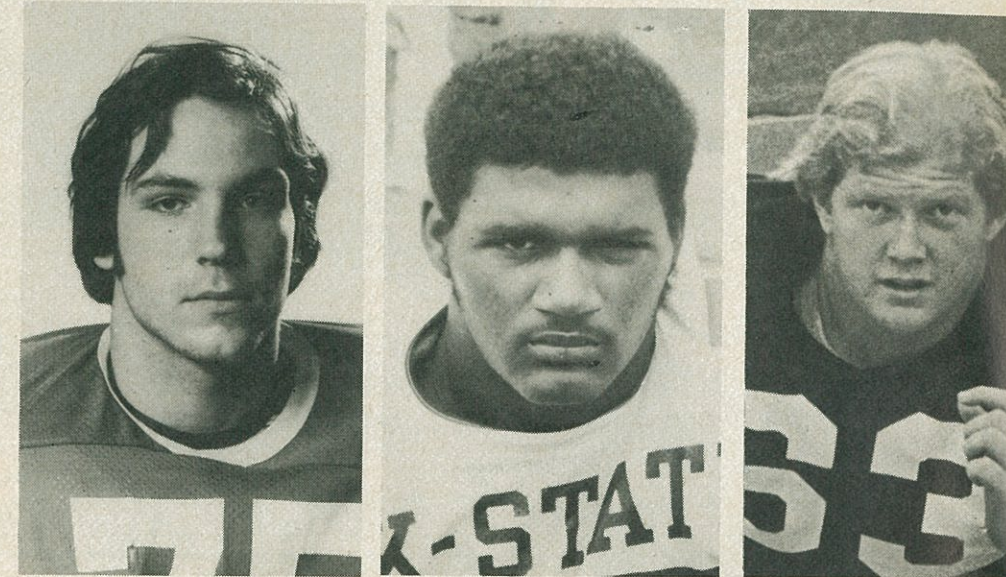

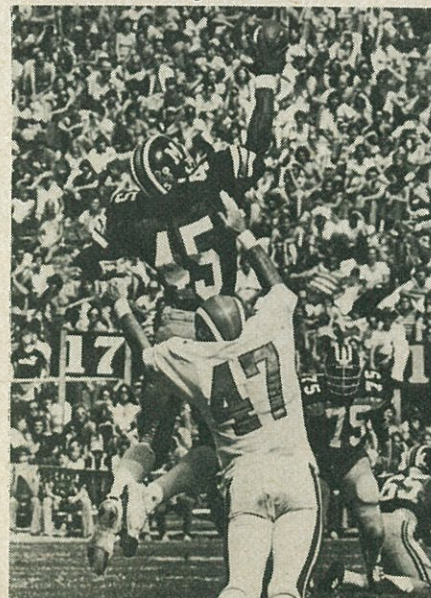

Woods will throw in '77 to receivers unequalled in the Big Eight—Stewart (45 catches for 834 yards and five touchdowns) and the pint-sized Lewis (30 receptions for 394 yards and six touchdowns). "There's no question about it, Stewart is as good as any receiver in the country," offers Onofrio, normally very cautious in building up his own players. To protect Woods, Missouri also has Taylor, probably the league's most respected returning interior line hand from '76, and Kellen Winslow, a 6'6", 230-pound tight end who is the heir-apparent to Colorado All-American Don Hasselbeck as the Big Eight's No. 1 player at the demanding blocking-receiving position.

At Colorado, Knapple, who returned to his hometown to play college ball after a year at UCLA, will be operating with an all-new backfield cast.

The rangy junior is well suited to lead the new foursome. He's an explosive type of youngster, as mid-season games against Iowa State and Oklahoma indicated last fall. Against Iowa State, Knapple came off the bench to direct a 26-point, 255-yard second quarter for the Buffs. A week later against Oklahoma, Knapple amassed 276 yards total offense in perhaps the most awesome individual display ever against one of Barry Switzer's team.

Knapple will operate behind what many feel will be one of the best offensive lines in the country. Because of injuries, CU Coach Bill Mallory has eight tackle-to-tackle performers who must be classed as returning starters. In his short stint as CU's coach, Mallory has sent enough interior forwards to the pros to stock an entire NFL franchise. He has the same type of material up front again. White, an All-Big Eighter at guard two years ago who was sidelined in '76 by an injury after one game, may play at center as a senior, so well stocked is CU at tackle with Miller and George Osborne (6'5", 266). Senior guard Steve Hakes (6'2", 245) is also all-conference calibre up front for the Bisons.

Missouri's Joe Stewart was the leading receiver in the Big 8 in 1976.

Nobody in the Big Eight, perhaps, has more respect for the 5'9", 160-pound Henrikson, a walk-on, than Colorado. Elevated to starting status in mid-season, Henrikson passed for 1,066 yards in '76, including more than 200 in the season-ending game as K-State threw a terrific scare into co-champion Colorado before falling 35-28. "He's just a winner," says KSU coach Ellis Rainsberger. "He has great leadership qualities and the other players respect him." Thompson was no surprise in his first year at offensive tackle. Great things were expected of the mammoth Columbus, O., product who also played in the defensive line in short-yardage situations.

Lott was just one of many young OU offensive hands who matured in '76. Fullback King, a 9.5 speedster, ran for 791 yards. Halfback Elvis Peacock produced 511 yards. They'll be joined this year by heralded red-shirt soph Billy Sims, who was held out of '75 play because of an injury. Roberts and Baldschwiler lead what could be one of the best Sooners lines ever. Its late-season development was one of the keys to Oklahoma's fast finish last year. Center Jody Farthing and guard Jaime Melendez may also press for all-league honors.

Berns emerged as a possible superstar in his soph season last fall at Nebraska, dazzling for 854 yards in the regular season, after moving ahead of Monte Anthony (probably a fullback this time around), and then almost making it a 1,000-yard year with 118 yards against Texas Tech in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl.

A back who did crack the 1,000-yard barrier, and did it on a knee requiring post-season surgery, was Iowa State's Dexter Green, a skittery 171-pounder. Green finished with 1,074 yards, had a 214-yard national Back-of-the-Week effort against Missouri and also caught 19 passes for 240 yards. He's an All-American candidate, although definitely overshadowed by Miller. In tackle Kevin Cunningham, slotback Ray Hardee and center Mark Boehm, Iowa State also has standout performers on offense.

With Nolan Cromwell and LaVerne Smith having walked the graduation plank, look for Kansas' Bill Campfield (at halfback) and Norris Banks (at fullback) to finally receive much deserved recognition. Kansas also has its best offensive line talent in years with Mike Wellman at center, Lindsey Mason at tackle and John Mascarello at guard.

I love tobacco. I don't smoke.

My tobacco pleasure is Smokeless. That means I get full tobacco enjoyment without lighting up, or tying up my hands. And you can too. With Copenhagen for straight tobacco taste. Or with my favorite, Skoal, with the wintergreen flavor. Then, of course, there's mild Happy Days Mint, for you guys that are just beginning. All three are dated for freshness. So just take a pinch and put it in between your cheek and gum. You'll see that going smokeless is a mighty nice way to enjoy tobacco, and mighty relaxing too.

If you can't find any of these fine brands at your local store, or if you're interested in just trying a few free pinches, write to: "Smokeless Tobacco," U.S. Tobacco Company, Dept. TD007, Greenwich, Conn. 06830. We'll tell you where to find "Smokeless Tobacco" in your area. And we'll send you a free sample in the mail.

Smokeless tobacco.
A pinch is all it takes.

NATION'S BEST IN OFFENSE

les. Donahue especially, with his 275-pound hulk, is hard to overlook. But Michigan has at least a couple other offensive linemen worthy of note, which could be the reason the Wolverines were the nation's leading offensive and rushing team last season. Bill Dufek, another tackle, and center Walt Downing, both 6'4" and 250, were All-Big Ten selections last year.

Cal's George Freitas is a solid tight end.

The Pac Eight will field four respected forwards in Gus Coppens, UCLA tackle, Gordon King, a Stanford tackle, center Blair Bush of Washington, and Pat Howell of Southern Cal, a guard. Colorado nominates three offensive linemen for your approval—Steve Hakes, Matt Miller, and Leon White.

All-America selectors also will keep eyes peeled for the blocks of Dan Irons, Texas Tech tackle; Ernie Hughes, a Notre Dame guard; Tom Brzoza, Pitt's tackle who may shift to center; Greg Jorgensen, a Nebraska guard; Craig Duhe of LSU, along with five other Southeastern stars, Robert Shaw and Brent Watson of Tennessee, Mark Trogdon of Mississippi State, George Collins of Georgia, and Eric Smith of Southern Mississippi.

Kick scoring? Forget it. Tony Franklin, a barefoot soccer-style (although he never played) placekicker from Texas A&M, has two seasons remaining. His ten field goals from at least 50 yards already is the all-time career high among major college booters.

No, with Dorsett and Bell and Lytle and Kramer gone, college football offense may never be the same. It may be more so.

K-State Frosh to Watch

54 Ben Landry
LB 6-2 228 Port Arthur, Tex. (Lincoln)

He has impressed the 'Cat coaching staff in fall drills and will see some action, particularly on special teams...considered a prize catch after earning prep all-American honors...claims kinship to pro football players Joe Washington (San Diego), Aaron Brown (Minnesota Vikings), and NBA great Elvin Hayes...mechanical engineering major...7-6-59.

60 Monte Bennett
NG 6-4 223 Sterling, Kansas

Wildcat coaches like this rangy Sterling native...has worked his way up to the second defensive unit...another frosh who will contribute heavily to the special teams...earned all-Central Prairie League and all-state laurels at Sterling...agriculture major...4-27-59.

Having celebrated its 30th anniversary during the 1976-77 term, Florida State University, the second oldest university in the state, continues to revere its historic past while at the same time setting high standards for the future.

Since its founding in 1857, when it was known as the Seminary West of the Suwannee, Florida State has forged out a sprawling campus in Tallahassee, grown to over 22,000 students, and boasts a faculty that is both nationally and internationally recognized.

Long regarded one of the top research institutions in the nation, Florida State continues its leadership in the field with the recent possible discovery of new chemical elements and millions of dollars for research efforts.

In addition to approximately 90 different baccalaureate fields of study at the undergraduate level, 59 doctoral programs and more than 85 master's degree areas, the University offers a variety of innovative and challenging special programs. Florida State maintains study centers in Florence, Italy, and London, England, and conducts summer study programs in Switzerland in certain academic areas.

KANSAS WHEAT

Wheat Team fans may be assured that the Kansas Wheat Commission is carrying the kernel. Adding to the Wheat Team's depth is the ability and agility of Kansas producers, specialists at Kansas State University, the Kansas Department of Agriculture, and a seasoned squad of wheat researchers.

The Wildcats and members of the World League depend on this team to fill the breadbaskets at their training tables. The Kansas Wheat Team has consistently scored a 320-million-bushel average during the past seven seasons.

The Wheat Team is known far and wide. Their bowl appearances span the globe—Kansas to New York to Japan to Moscow—and Kansas wheatmen are gaining more yardage every season in the marketing grid-iron.

Odd-makers say one dollar will get you seven. One dollar of wheat generates $3 in the Kansas economy, and $7 in the U.S. economy.

The Wheat Team's first All-American was Turkey Red. Added to the Hall of Fame have been ground gainers like Blackhull, Kan-red, Tenmarq, Pawnee, Comanche, Wichita, Triumph, and Scout. Members of this year's All-Star team includes such linemen as Sage, Eagle, and Centurk.

Wheat scouts search far and wide for players to sign to this All-Star team. Let-termen on this team must possess a certain quality. Just recently they announced the signing of Larned for the '78 season.

When exuberant football crowds fill stadia with choruses of "Dee-fence! Dee-fence!" they show that fans have at last come to appreciate a hallowed truism that cagey coaches have long been preaching: in order to win football games, you first have to avoid losing them. The recent shift of public and press attention to the defensive stalwarts of the game is fitting, because athletic ability (both the raw and refined kinds) is needed as much on one side of the line of scrimmage as on the other.

And, fortuitously, this appears to be a season when more and better defensive beef is present on the nation's playing fields than any year in memory—maybe ever. In fact, this could be the year when the judges who award the Heisman Trophy will at last give that honor to a player who does something other than run, catch, or throw.

If the Heisman is awarded to a defensive player this fall, it will likely be a lineman, because that seems to be the area with the biggest overload of superstuds. Ends Ross

ABOUT THE AUTHOR—Anson Mount helped to found Playboy Magazine in early 1952 and has authored the publication's annual Pigskin Preview article on collegiate football for the past 20 years. Mount, 52, lives with his wife, Nancy, a former professional golfer, and family on an 80-acre tract of virgin timber near his native White Bluff, TN.

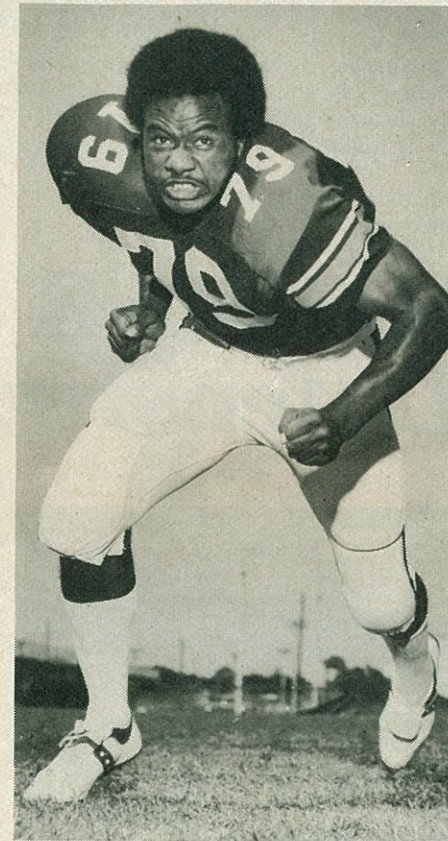

Mississippi State, Dee Hardison of North Carolina, Bruce Thornton of Illinois, Andre Anderson of New Mexico State, Steve Midboe of Minnesota, and middle guards Don Latimer of Miami (Florida) and Gary Don Johnson of Baylor.

A few defensive linemen will merit special attention for unusual reasons. End Burl Toler of California weighs only 200 pounds, which makes him a midget among modern defensive behemoths, but he plays like a maniac. "He's terrific—unbelievable," says one scout, "I just wish he were fifty pounds heavier."

Bubba Green of North Carolina State is only a sophomore, but he wrought so much damage on opposing teams as a freshman starter last season that his coaches insist he could become the best in the land before his senior year.

Dennis Harrison of Vanderbilt, transferred from tackle to end for his senior season, could—belatedly—become one of the premier defensive linemen in the country. At 6'8", 270, Harrison is an awesome physical specimen with astonishing speed and agility.

And keep an eye on Iowa State. The Cyclones have an embarrassment of riches in their defensive line with three tackles who are capable of winning All-Tackle Don Latimer, a hard-hitting Hurricane.

American honors: Tom Randall, Ron McFarland, and Mike Stensrud.

Though J.C. transfers usually have a better chance to win immediate stardom than incoming freshmen (especially in the defensive line), a few raw rookies will make their debut this season with enough native ability to become first year starters and future superstars. Among them are John Odell of Kansas, Frank Warren of Auburn, Nick Westerberg of Oregon State, and Carlos Collaza of Oklahoma State.

Three of last year's most coveted high school defensive linemen enrolled in Pacific Eight schools. Brian Holloway went to Stanford (all the way from Potomac, Maryland), Curt Marsh enrolled at Washington, and Pat Graham opted for California.

Houston and Louisiana State each got a couple of nuggets in the recruiting wars; linemen Darrell Shepard and Hosea Taylor went to Houston while Benjy Thibodeaux and George Atiyeh enrolled at LSU.

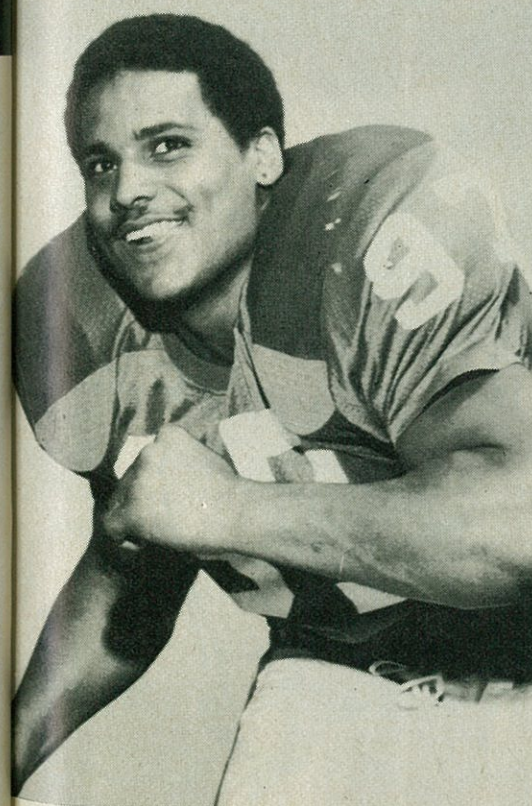

Linebackers have a better chance to win recognition than other defensive performers, probably because their feats are more visible and they can be in the thick of the action whether the other team passes or runs the ball. Linebackers who appear—at season's opening—to have the best chance for post-season honors are Tom Cousineau of Ohio State, Jerry Robinson of UCLA, Lucius Sanford of Georgia Tech, John Anderson of Michigan and Ben Zambiasi of Georgia. Sanford, Anderson and Robinson are all relatively small as top-flight linebackers go (all three are in the 215-lb. range), but all are fierce tacklers and have the instinct to get to the ball with blinding quickness. Other linebackers who, with a good season for both them and their teams, could win national honors are Daryl Hunt of Oklahoma, Ron Hostetler of Penn State, Danny Bunz of Long Beach, Kimmie Weaver of Vanderbilt, Clay Matthews of Southern Cal, Jim Kovach of Kentucky, Kem Coleman of Mississippi, David Hodge of Houston, Rick Scudellari of Boston College, Gordy Ceresino of Stanford, Brad Carr of Maryland, Keith Butler of Memphis State, Whip Walton of San Diego State, Doug Curtis of Colgate, Carl McGee of Duke and Terry Lee of Cornell.

Be sure to watch the performances of three super-soph linebackers: Scot Brantley of Florida, Freddie Smith of Auburn, and John Corker of Oklahoma State. They were so impressive as freshmen that stardom seems imminent for all three.

Also keep an eye on Colorado linebacker Tom Perry; he could become this year's most spectacular late-bloomer.

Art Still has 'em talking in Bluegrass Country.

Gerald Small looms large in San Jose secondary.

After having six defensive linemen selected in the first round of the last two NFL drafts, the Big Eight conference may face a defensive shutout in the first round of the next draft.

The two best defensive linemen, the prizes of an exceptional group of linebackers, and several of the best defensive backs in the Big Eight, will not be considered for the first round, or any round, in the 1978 draft.

However, this is a tipoff on classification, not quality. Most of the Big Eight's best defensive players in 1977 are juniors and sophomores.

The senior class is not without stars. Free safety Zac Henderson of Oklahoma, a four-year starter and twice All-Big Eight, and linebacker Gary Spani of Kansas State, all-conference in 1975, are All-American possibilities.

But the best defensive player in the conference, Colorado coaches and others believe, is tackle Ruben Vaughan, the Buffs' 261 lb. junior. The first time Bill Mallory went to Los Angeles to recruit Vaughan, the Colorado coach concluded, "he ought to be something special."

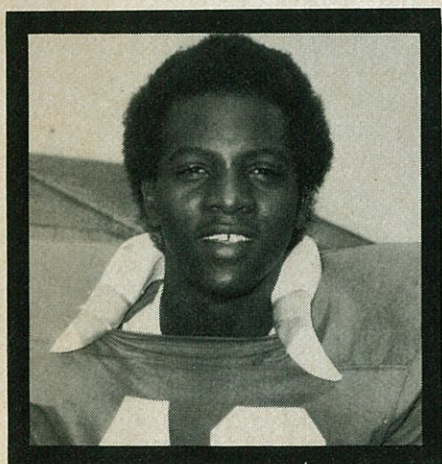

Vaughan's sophomore performance, as Colorado won a three-way share of the championship, justified Mallory's faith. "He has a chance to be one of the great linemen in the country," Mallory said.

Oklahoma coaches doubt Vaughan will be the Big Eight's premier lineman if their remarkably quick junior noseguard, Reggie Kinlaw, regains his pre-surgery form. Before being disabled by a knee injury in the seventh game last season, Kinlaw was considered farther advanced at a comparable stage than either of his Selmon predecessors, Luci-

Possessing a plethora of physical tools, Perry became a starter only toward the end of his junior year.

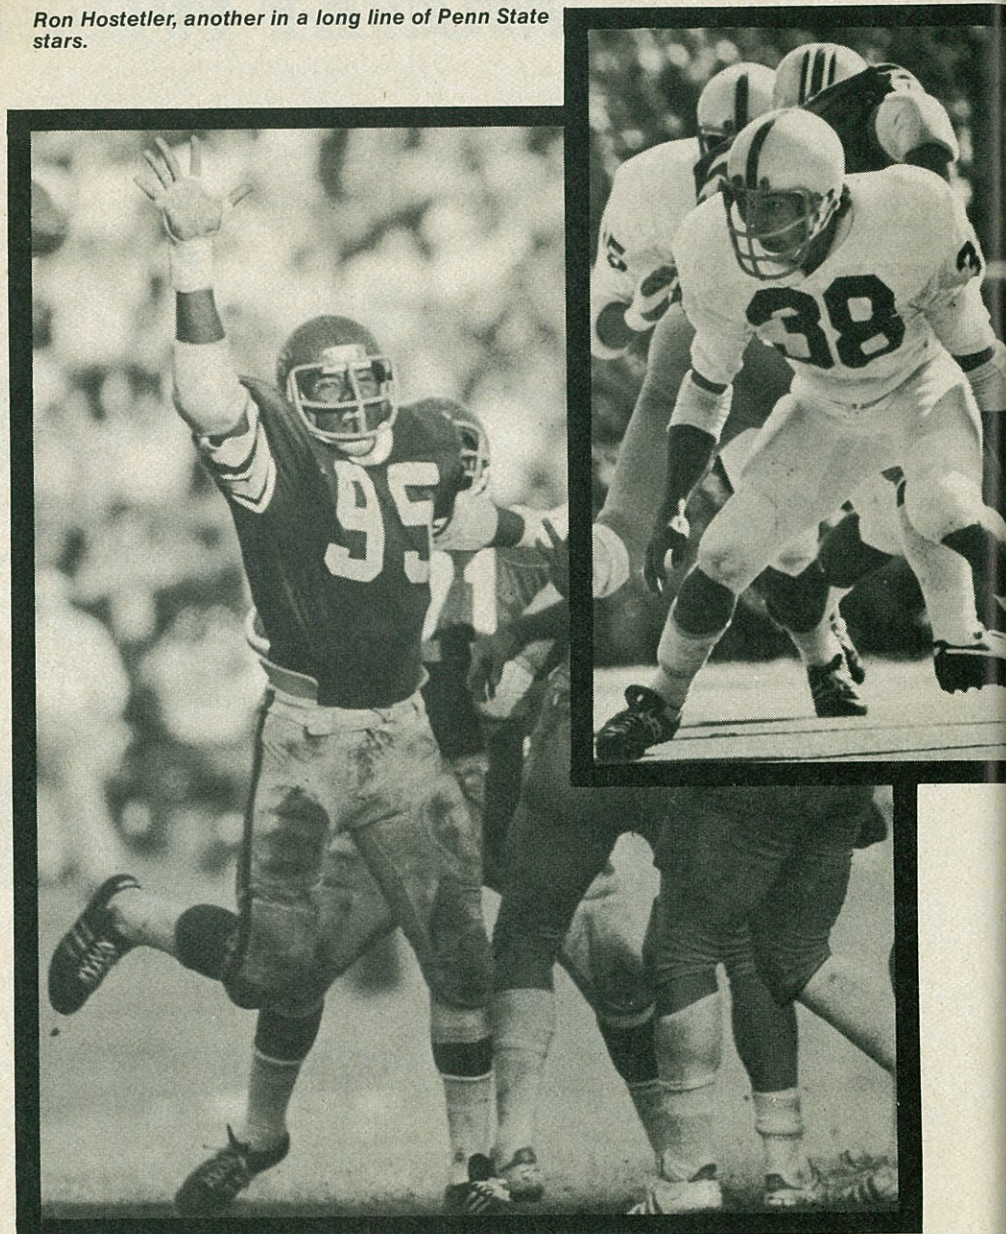

And, as usual, there are several newcomers who will win wide acclaim as linebackers. Wesley Williams, a junior college transfer, has enrolled at Arkansas State, but all the other new faces are freshmen. Among those most likely to make big waves their first year are Yancey Sutton of Florida, Mark Ippolito of LSU, Stan Browder of Colorado and Ronald Simmons of Florida State.

Defensive backs are divided into a bewildering variety of sub-positions, with a varied nomenclature that is colorful at best and confusing at worst. Besides such usual names as cornerback and safety, they can also bear such titles as monster, free safety, stinger, rover or a variety of other lethal terms. Some coaches, eschewing hyperbole, simply refer to them as defensive backs.

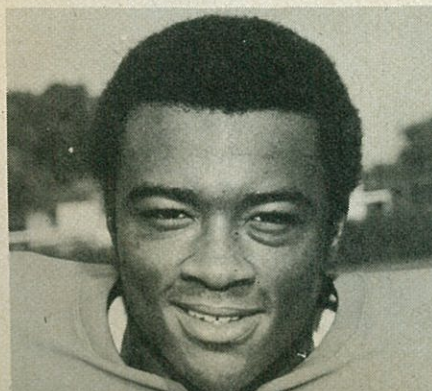

Among those players called cornerbacks, Luther Bradley of Notre Dame, Gerald Small of San Jose State, Henry Davison of Mississippi State, Anthony Francis of Houston, Charles Jefferson of McNeese State, Clinton Burrell of LSU, and Bobby Weber of Minnesota have the most impressive pre-season credits. The nation's better safeties are Ray Griffin of Ohio State, Zac Henderson of Oklahoma, Dwight Hicks of Michigan, Ron Burns of Baylor, Gary Petercuskie of Penn State, Russ Williams of Tennessee, J.T. Smith of North Texas State, Dennis Thurman of Southern California, and Jeff Nixon of Richmond.

Two of the nation's more impressive defenders with descriptive titles are rover Bill Krug of Georgia and monster Maurice Harvey of Ball State. Among just plain defensive backs, Ralph Stringer of North Carolina State, Larry King of Syracuse, Mike Kramer of Alabama, and Derwin Tucker of Illinois seem to have the best chances for post-season honors.

Punters are usually considered defensive players, primarily because their skills are called on to keep the team out of trouble when the offensive platoon can't produce. This year's premier punters are Gavin Hedrick of Washington State and Russell Erxleben of Texas, with Dave Jacobs of Syracuse and Mike Deutsch of Colorado State not far behind.

Steve Little of Arkansas is not only an excellent punter, he is also one of the better field goal kickers. Michigan defensive tackle John Anderson (mentioned earlier) is also one of the country's better punters, and Bruce Allen (son of Washington Redskin coach George Allen) is the pride and joy of Richmond's coaches.

And, in conclusion, permit us to take a flyer. Earlier in this article we opined that this may be the year when—if sanity prevails—the Heisman Trophy will at last be awarded to a defensive player. He will be an exceptional person, to be sure, and we're convinced that he'll be far more typical of today's college football players than the unfortunate but pervasive public image of the Neanderthal jock. Some of the most admirable people we know wear college football uniforms on Saturday afternoons. Too bad more fans can't get to know them personally.

Practical.

Practically perfect.

After bringing you a perfectly practical car, it should come as no surprise that we now bring you a car that's practically perfect. The Volkswagen Rabbit.

In February of 1976, Car and Driver said of our car, "What we have now is a faster Rabbit that has benefited from step-by-step, under-the-skin attention to detail—which is damn encouraging because it shows that VW is sending the already-excellent Rabbit down the yearly refinement path that made the Beetle last almost four decades. Using that system, the Rabbit may be the world's first perfect car in just a few short years!" Last year alone, we made 17 major changes and improvements toward making our '77 Rabbit even more perfect.

Since it was already big on room and performance, we added fuel-injection to help give it easier starts, yet allow it to use an economical grade of gas.

In a world that's far from perfect, isn't it nice to find something that's practically there.

HOW PLAYERS KEEP IN SHAPE IN OFF-SEASON

by Del Black, Kansas City STAR

Several years ago, John Stucky, an All-Big Eight Conference middle guard from Kansas State, was on a summer goodwill tour in Western Kansas. Part of the hospitality tendered Stucky by a K-State alum was an invitation to spend the night at the family farm. Stucky accepted. A farm boy himself, Stucky was an early riser, and that morning in August was no exception.

When the farmer went to call Stucky for breakfast, he found John in one of the farm buildings on his back under the front bumper of an old pick-up truck. To the farmer's amazement the robust Stucky was bench pressing with the old vehicle as the resisting force.

This is only one example of how collegiate football players participate in self-invented programs or school-supported and National Collegiate Athletic Association-approved conditioning work during the off-season.

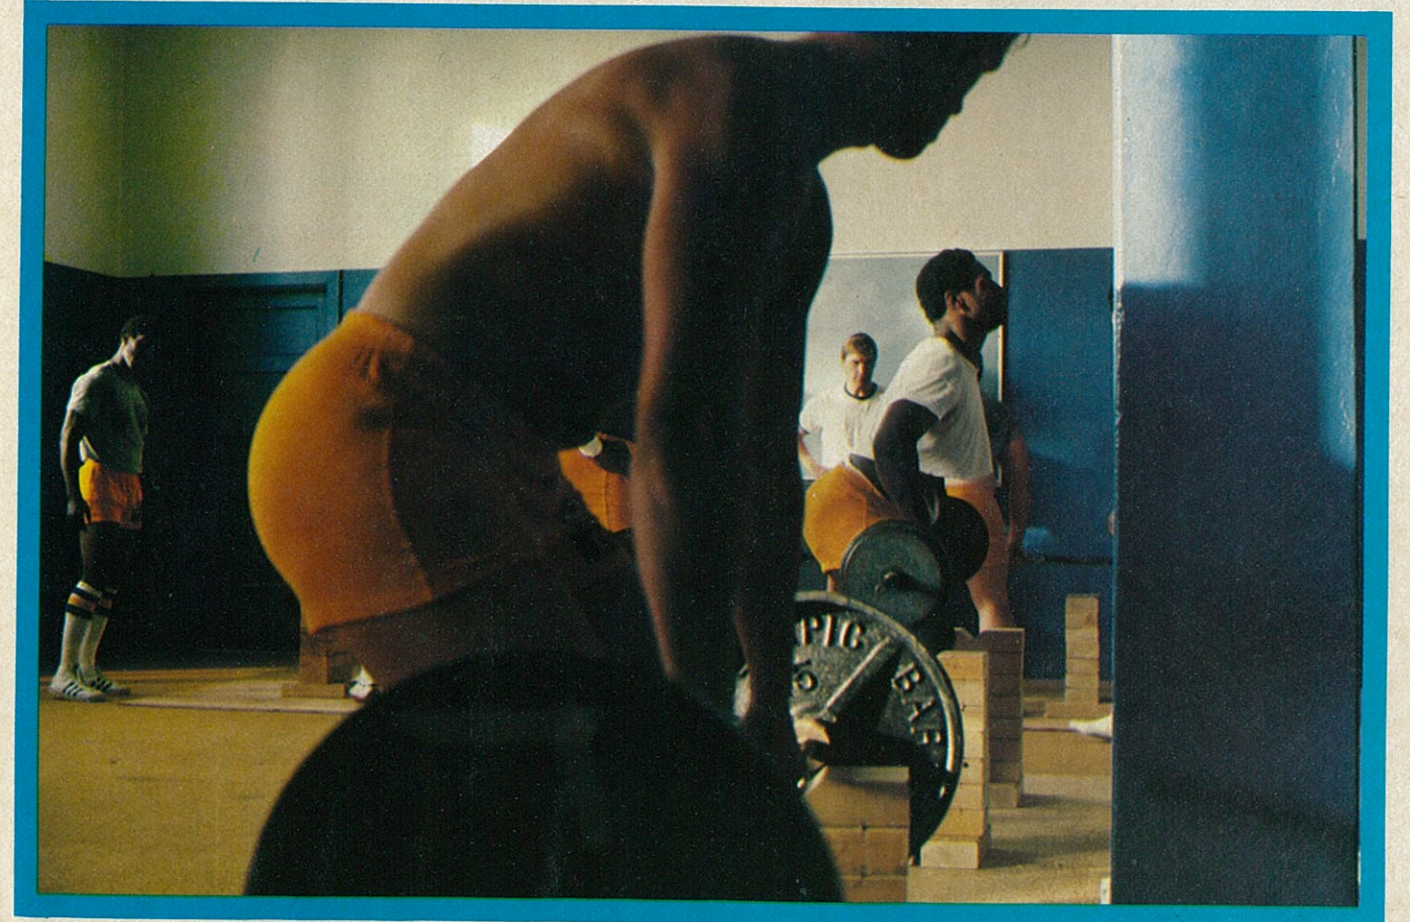

It used to be that players sought out work in heavy construction for summer employment in an attempt to build their bodies into the rock-like condition befitting their fall-time status for grid-iron warfare. Not necessarily so today. Organized off-season programs under the guidance of coaches and weight-lifting instructors have changed the conditioning approach. Most schools encourage their players to begin lifting weights about a week after the final football game of the season.

Many players then work with the weights at least three days a week, averaging an hour and 15 minutes per session. They lift bulk based on power lifting, employing power racks. This system can be identified with the Olympic free-style format.

"You know, Nebraska always seemed to have such an advantage in our conference because they were so much bigger and more physical than anybody else," recalls Sandy Buda, an assistant coach at Kansas State. "The weight program was what was doing it. They were before their time. Now most schools have adopted the off-season plan and I'd say about 10 per cent of the major college teams have weight coaches."

The general schedule includes escalating the three-day work to four days a week by mid-December. The four-day drills are structured around two days with the weights and the other two concentrating on agility and running. This phase of the program usually extends to the start of spring drills.

As in any athletic endeavor, the work the player does on his own is vital. Crash programs are always paid for and expensive to the individual, often costing him his on-the-field job and not only athletic notoriety, but possibly a lucrative future to which he could spring from college.

Among the pioneers in the off-season programs were the coaches in the Southeastern Conference. One of the most enthusiastic programs was undertaken by Vince Gibson, an aide at Tennessee, who used the gruelling drills as one of his weapons in a win-quick atmosphere. "We all thought we'd die," recalls a former Volunteer. "Talk about work! I've never been so miserable in all my life. I never appreciated the training until I got on the field, and probably not to the fullest extent until I got in the pros."

"Then I realized how valuable it was. Actually, I think players who went through that program, and others like it, have had a tremendous jump on some of the others. I know I felt I was farther ahead of most of the other guys I was competing against for a position."

Without a doubt, the more sophisticated off-season programs now being utilized are not as exhausting and have proven to be more beneficial.

"While all football players do stretching and endurance work," said one trainer, "power movement is more valuable."

Take a lineman, for instance. His job lasts only a few seconds on each play, but he needs to employ short and powerful movements. This means he must train with heavy resistance. He uses weights with low repetition—like 8-to-10 quick, short and powerful thrusts.

Pumping iron helps players reach their potential and then some.

When players leave the campuses for summer vacation, coaches stress following the same programs, and help them along with a check-list to follow the same programs in which they were involved between the regular season and spring practices.

"We mail out a week-by-week program for them," said Buda. "We want them to escalate their work up to just before the first practice session in the fall. In June we want them to work on weights and jogging. In July we encourage speed work and agility to be added. In August we want more running, plus Kinlaw (230) is not as strong as the Selmons, but with 4.6 speed in the 40 he is quicker. Coach Barry Switzer said, "We thought Kinlaw might have been the best lineman in the conference before he was hurt. If he regains his quickness and picks up the way we expect, he ought to be the next great lineman at Oklahoma—and maybe in the country."

The best sophomore probably is line-backer John Corker of Oklahoma State whom the Associated Press named Big Eight defensive newcomer of the year in 1976 when he became a mid-season starter. He was a key figure in the Cowboys' drive to a share of their first conference championship.

Corker came from Kinlaw's hometown of Miami, Fl., with the kind of blue chip credentials to suggest he would be a tall destroyer. He was widely recruited. Ohio State might have landed him, but Corker decided to sign with Oklahoma State.

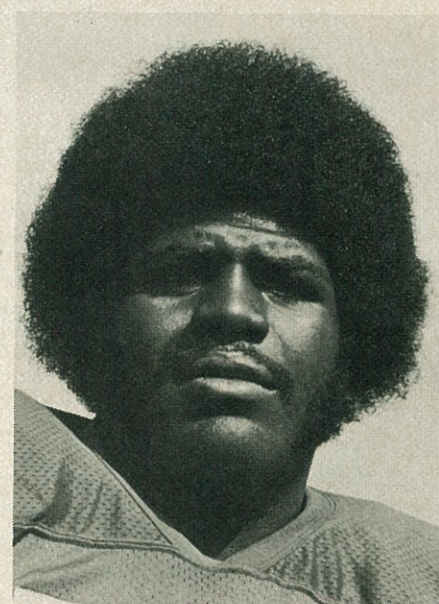

Daryl Hunt of Oklahoma, 220 lb., junior, was all-conference last year. Though not as fast as Corker, Hunt is a bruising tackler and excels in blitzing and big plays. He was the only prominent member of the Sooners' 1976 defense to survive a tidal wave of injuries. He held the defense together during a surge to salvage a share of the championship. Then, in the first week of spring practice he sustained a knee injury that required surgery.

Oklahoma coaches will be surprised if sophomore George Cumby, converted fullback, does not become a standout. The 212-pounder has 4.5 speed.

The best-known senior linebackers are Spani and Bryan Cabral (214) of Colorado. They were second all-conference last year. But Cabral's senior teammate, Tom Though neither established nor newcomers, Nebraska linebackers Lee Kunz, 211 lb. junior, and Jeff Carpenter, 218 lb. senior, might rate with the above before the season is over. Missouri's Chris Garlich, a rugged player at 6'1", 210, bears watching too.

As if such a cast did not give linebackers a crowded, all-star look, one of the Big Eight's best players may move to linebacker. Daria Butler, all-conference defensive end last year whom his coaches call a "textbook player who does exactly what he is coached to do," played linebacker in Oklahoma State's spring practice.

Butler, a 215 lb. senior, would be the class of ends if he returns to his former position. There is a scarcity of experienced ends. Steve Hamilton (228) of Missouri and Colorado's pair of Stuart Walker (203) and Randy Westendorf (197) are the best of a lean group. Westendorf is a senior; Walker and Hamilton are juniors.

Tackle Franklin King of Kansas, 265 lb. junior, started every game for two years and is expected to bloom now that he is not in the shadow of Mike Butler, considered by many to be the Big Eight's best lineman in 1976.

Noseguard Mike Stensrud of Iowa State, a 270 lb. junior, has endured disabling injuries and position switches since his freshman debut evoked Selmon-type Tackle Phil Tabor of Oklahoma, a 240 lb. junior, and noseguard Laval Short of Colorado, a 247 lb. sophomore who started last year at tackle, are perhaps the best of the Big Eight's other established young linemen.

The best of the inexperienced linemen may be tackle Mike Robinson of Oklahoma State, who is 6' 6", 255 lbs. and runs the 40 in 4.8. Coach Jim Stanley thinks Robinson "can be as good as (Phillip) Dokes." If Robinson is not the league's best new lineman, that distinction may be won by his sophomore teammate, Billy Wells. Wells, moved from noseguard to tackle, went from 290 pounds to 264 and "would be illegal if he gets down to 240," Stanley said.

The best of the senior defensive linemen are Iowa State's tackle pair of Ron McFarland (261) and Tom Randall (247) and Oklahoma noseguard Chris Dawson (243). McFarland started for three years before a knee injury sidelined him last year. Bruce thought Randall was "the most consistent and underrated lineman in the conference last year."

Dawson developed into a solid tackle last year and was moved to noseguard in spring practice. Stanley said, "Dawson is the kind who will play well anywhere. He will be one of the best noseguards in the Big Eight."

With the exception of Henderson, the most heralded of last year's defensive backs are now in the NFL. Most of those moving into the spotlight are from Colorado and Oklahoma.

Cornerback Odis McKinney of the Buffs was second in interceptions last year, with five. His teammate, strong safety Mark Haynes, started as a freshman, and Colorado welcomes back free safety Tom Tesone, 1975 standout who was sidelined last year by a knee injury.

Cornerbacks Terry Peters and Bud Hebert of Oklahoma, Willie Lester of Oklahoma State (who had four interceptions last year) and Ted Harvey of Nebraska are capable and proven.

The most talked-about newcomer in the secondary is Iowa State's Jerry Washington, a junior college transfer who has excellent speed and a reputation for hitting "like a truck." He will probably play cornerback. So will Darrol Ray, though probably as backup, at Oklahoma, where the fast and tough sophomore is considered the most versatile athlete the Sooners have recently recruited.

A robust tailgate picnic that nourishes many a fan

Napoleon sagely observed that an army marches on its stomach. Consequently, the diminutive Corsican made elaborate preparations for his troops' rations.

It's no different with today's legions of college football fans. In order to root their forces to victory, they must cheer on full stomachs ... thus the vital necessity for a well-executed tailgate picnic plan. It must be nourishing but, alas, wives and dates aren't galley slaves so it must be easy to prepare as well.

Try this plan, created by The R.T. French Company Test Kitchens in Rochester, N.Y., for a smashing pre-game picnic. Steak Sticks are mouth watering and very portable. At home, cut the steak into strips, wrap in bacon, and marinate in a zesty mixture of pineapple juice and prepared yellow mustard. Pack in a plastic container with a tight fitting lid and tote to the game in an insulated picnic bag or chest.

Broil over a hibachi or a small charcoal grill, and serve on rolls. It's very hearty and very flavorful.

A robust potato salad would make an ideal accompaniment. So who wants to start peeling and slicing fresh potatoes? No need to! Quick and Easy Potato Salad uses a package of scalloped potatoes that does the work for you. The carton also contains an envelope of seasoning which combines with mayonnaise for a perfectly flavored salad dressing.

Complete your tailgate party with carrot and celery sticks, fresh fruit and a cake you make from a mix. A thermos of coffee should calm even the most anxious fan until kick-off.

There it is ... a delicious repast, very nutritious, easy to make, and easy to bring along. Napoleon would surely promote you to corporal.

STEAK STICKS

- 1 to 1½ pounds round steak
- 6 to 8 slices lean bacon
- ¼ cup prepared yellow mustard
- 1 cup pineapple juice
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 6 to 8 frankfurter rolls, split and toasted

Cut steak into 6 to 8 strips, 1-inch thick; wrap each with a slice of bacon and fasten with wooden picks. Stir together mustard, pineapple juice, and brown sugar; pour over steak sticks and refrigerate 1 hour. Grill over hot coals about 10 minutes, turning frequently and brushing with the mustard mixture. Remove wooden picks; serve on toasted rolls. 6 to 8 servings.

QUICK AND EASY POTATO SALAD

- 1 package (5½-oz.) scalloped potatoes
- 3 cups water
- 1 cup chopped celery
- ¼ cup chopped green pepper
- 4 hard-cooked eggs
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- ¼ cup vinegar
- cherry tomatoes, if desired

Combine potato slices from package of scalloped potatoes with water in saucepan; cover, bring to a boil, and simmer 15 minutes, or until tender. Drain and cool. Combine cold potatoes with celery and green pepper. Chop three eggs; add to potato mixture. Stir together contents of envelope of seasoning mix from potatoes, mayonnaise, and vinegar. Add to potatoes; toss lightly. Garnish with 1 sliced hard-cooked egg and cherry tomatoes. 6 servings.

Give our country a college education.

As an Army ROTC graduate, you bring more than training and gold bars to your new job in the active Army, Army National Guard or the Army Reserve.

You also bring a college education which makes you one of our country's most valuable assets. Why? One reason is the wealth of experiences and ideas you bring with you. This enables the Army to better relate to an ever-changing society.

And since you'll be an Army officer, you'll have plenty of opportunities to put your ideas to work. In fact, you'll be running your own show, right out of college.

Another reason we value your education so highly is that the people you'll be leading are better educated and more highly motivated than ever before. This makes your job as an Army officer more of a challenge.

To help you meet this challenge when you get out of school, we'll help you while you're in by giving you a living allowance of up to $1,000 each year you are enrolled in Advanced ROTC.

There are also opportunities for scholarships that cover tuition, books and lab fees.

That way, you can make the most of your education. And when you graduate, our country can make the most of it too. For details, see your professor of military science or send in this coupon.

weights and a concentration on conditioning."

Not all doctors and trainers agree on one of the oldest training routines—running steps. Another disagreement arises when they discuss full squats. Some prefer squats over running stadium steps, and vice-versa.

"I encourage running steps, especially by power-running backs," one trainer revealed. "And especially for a player who is coming off an injury. I like distance running for the wind factor, the respiratory factor."

"Players are more conscious about being ready for Fall drills than ever before. If they have a weight problem, they have to adjust their diet accordingly. This goes for those overweight as well as those who need to add poundage. If these goals are kept in mind and a sensible program is followed, players go to camp not needing crash programs."

"What really encourages me, and I know other trainers—plus today's coaches—is that more players are more determined than ever before to get in shape before they come back to school."

"They don't seem to take as much for granted as they used to. They are aware that these programs are sound, and they have more respect for our judgment regarding what is good for them and what isn't good."

"The diets have played an important part in why athletes today are possibly the best we've ever seen."

The approach taken by doctors, trainers and coaches seems to be reflected not only in the athletes, but comes from the families of the sports participants.

Most coaches will confirm that they are having the privilege of recruiting and training not only better athletes than ever before, but also more intelligent and competitive-minded individuals.

Running backs today are the size of many linemen a decade or more ago. And they are not only bigger, but quicker.

One of the major reasons for better collegiate products for the gridiron is high school and junior college programs where the coaching and instructing techniques have improved. Coaches and trainers for the pre-college football player are the same ones involved in the dawning of the off-season program for those grunting, complaining and exhausted players.

It all adds up to help produce the nation's most thrilling and competitive game: collegiate football.

Engineering New Foods...

A Race Against Time and Energy

The world has, of course, only what the world produces. Still, if the world's population is going to keep on growing, as it seems determined to do, the world must produce more and utilize better what it produces — or else the world suffers.

Ongoing research with exotic and novel proteins and meat analogs, along with improved agricultural methods and crop utilization, hold promise for the future of our world. Upgrading the biological utilization of available foodstuffs becomes most practical by optimal thermal processing.

One company committed to improving the utilization of the world's available foodstuffs is Wenger.

Thermally efficient Wenger extrusion cookers are now being used in 40 countries around the world for the production of high protein foods, meat extenders and meat substitutes made from vegetable proteins. These economical proteins consume much less energy per kilo of protein than meat, milk, or eggs and have an important role in meeting the growing world demand for quality protein foods at reasonable prices.

Steer-A-Year Club

Dear Cattlemen's Steer-A-Year Club members:

The Cattlemen's Steer-A-Year Club at Kansas State University is, and has been, a vital member of our athletic support group. Through its participation we hope to improve communications, both incoming and outgoing, as well as improve club membership numbers through a well organized membership drive.

Your contributions are greatly appreciated and we in the Department of Intercollegiate Athletics at K-State are dedicated to the steady improvement of the total program, much of which is made possible through the contributions of our Cattlemen's Steer-A-Year Club.

Due to the new administration and reorganization of the Cattlemen's Steer-A-Year Club, and in order to be fair with all parties who wish to participate, a complete list of club members will appear in our 1977-78 souvenir basketball programs.

Any inquiries concerning the Cattlemen's Steer-A-Year Club should be directed to Merle "Bones" Nay or Max VanLaningham, Department of Intercollegiate Athletics, Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kansas 66506, Phone 913/532-6910.

K-State's No. 1 Football Family

Always a Good Day

By Tracie Dittmore

Most youngsters usually don't appreciate their parents until that first time away from home for a couple of days or weeks.

College students really appreciate their parents as they write check after check for tuition, books, and housing. They realize how much money their parents have spent getting them through the first 18 or so years of their lives. And suddenly the dirty clothes don't disappear overnight and they'd give almost anything for one of their Mom's home-cooked meals.

Some children are fortunate enough to realize before they leave home just what their parents do for them. The Rainsberger children are lucky in that regard. Ellis and Shirley Rainsberger are pretty lucky, too. They have six such children.

The minute you enter the Rainsberger home, you get the feeling of family unity. When I arrived last Wednesday evening Mrs. Rainsberger was getting ready to leave the next morning for Provo, Utah, and the KSU-Brigham Young game. She was traveling with a K-State alumni group.

"I've never done anything like this before, but Ellis said go on. I decided to go since all the kids are in school," she explained.

Four of the six Rainsberger children — Cathy,

Sandy, Christy and Michael, better known as Boodgie — still live at home. All four of them were laying around the living room, watching television. The other two children, Becky and Bud, are away from home.

Becky, the oldest, lives in Chicago where she works as a home economics journalist. She graduated from K-State at mid-semester last year.

Bud is next to oldest. He's a senior at K-State, plays on the Wildcat football team, and lives at Edwards Hall, formerly the athletic dorm, with most of his teammates.

The four children living at home are all still in school. Cathy, 21, just graduated from Manhattan Area Vocational Technical School and is a licensed practical nurse, but plans on continuing in school to become a registered nurse. Sandy is 17 and a senior at Luckey High School. Christy also attends Luckey as a freshman.

Then there's Boodgie. (He got his nickname from his great-uncle who used to call Ellis that.) He's 10 years old and in the fifth grade. All six children have red hair, not surprising since both parents do, too.

As soon as all the introductions were made, Mrs. Rainsberger put on a pot of coffee and we started looking through family pictures. Soon the girls were on hand making sure they approved of the pictures we hoped to use.

After everybody decided on the pictures, Mrs. Rainsberger, Boodgie and I went into the kitchen. Boodgie fixed himself and I a bowl of raspberry sherbert and started talking about what he'd like to be when he grows up.

"I'd like to play quarterback on some football team. Then when I get to be about 25 years old I'll work at odd jobs till I'm 19. Then I'd like to become head football coach somewhere."

Bud and Boodgie aren't the only Rainsberger children who play football. Christy played boys football while in junior high. She was a receiver.

"Dad would help me with plays and stuff. Besides that he never really said much about me playing. I really liked it, but now that I'm in high school, the guys don't want me going out." Christy also is an avid Royals fan.

But unquestionably it's football that the whole family really loves.

On Sunday afternoons they bet on their favorite team. The Minnesota Vikings seem to be the overall family favorite, but the Baltimore Colts, St. Louis Cardinals and New England Patriots are individual favorites. Money is never wagered. More important things like cleaning another one's room or doing someone else's chores are at stake.

Even though Becky isn't around these days, she's always in the thoughts of the rest of the family and often in on family activities, at least by telephone. And so it was for this family discussion.

"I'm going to get back to Manhattan for at least one game this season. I think K-State is going to have one of its best years."

Being from such a football-minded family, Becky found things a little different in Chicago.

"It's a completely different world. Up here in Chicago the big sport is baseball. Both teams have done so well this year."

After my conversation with Becky, the rest of the family had to say a few words. Boodgie wrote down a name of a perfume he was going to buy her for her next birthday. He usually buys her "Charlie" but thought it was time for a change.

Later in the evening Sandy decided to fix popcorn. She also enjoys playing sports. She played basketball for four years and volleyball and track for two.

Moving to Manhattan wasn't easy for Sandy. When she learned her father had been made head football coach at K-State she went to her room and cried.

"I still write to a lot of my friends. Coming here, I was kind of shy, but I just had to overcome it," she admitted. "Next year I'll probably to go K-State and major in business or art."

By now Boodgie had on his pajamas, the ones with college pennants decorating them, but his night wasn't over yet. He stays up with his mother every night waiting for his Dad to come home. Coach Rainsberger usually gets home about 11:30 p.m.

"It's our quiet time," explains Mrs. Rainsberger. "The rest of the kids see him in the morning. I fix him dinner and we sit around and talk."

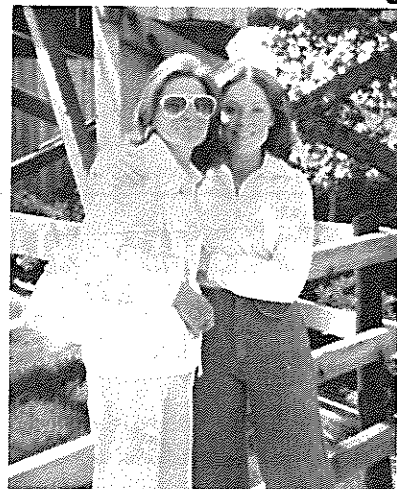

Boodgie, perched atop a built-in, added "I always ask him if he's had a good day and he always says 'yes'. I guess he always does."

With a family like that to go home to, Coach Rainsberger would have to have a good day!

Bring Back The Purple

There's something happening in Wildcatland these days. We've started bringing back the purple...and that ole K-State spirit!

In Kansas City they're manufacturing purple tractors. Out in western Kansas they're raising purple cattle. And in Manhattan everything is turning purple...including the people.

Once again, K-State's purple bull will be making special appearances at each of KSU's five home football games this fall thanks to the efforts of Edwin H. Rein and the Russell Wildcat Club.

Also on display each week will be the latest model of the Cat-er-puller, a customized tractor furnished by Philip Helwig and the Kansas City Cat-Backers.

And the folks enjoying the pleasant surrounds in KSU Stadium's refurbished press box can thank the Purple People of the Manhattan Wildcat Club.

And if in spite of all that K-State fans don't have anything to cheer about, they'll still have something to tap their toes to—no matter what beat gets them going.

For Dixieland lovers the Phil Hewett Dixieland Band, under the direction of Frosty Lawson, will be entertaining before the game each week and for the 'with-it' crowd, there'll be disco sounds played by K-State track star and disc jockey Vince Parrette.

Yes, we've got pride again in Wildcatland...and it's starting to show. We're bringing back the purple!

K-State Near the Top

"I don't care how good the KSU football team is, after this picnic Kansas State should be picked no lower than sixth. It was super."

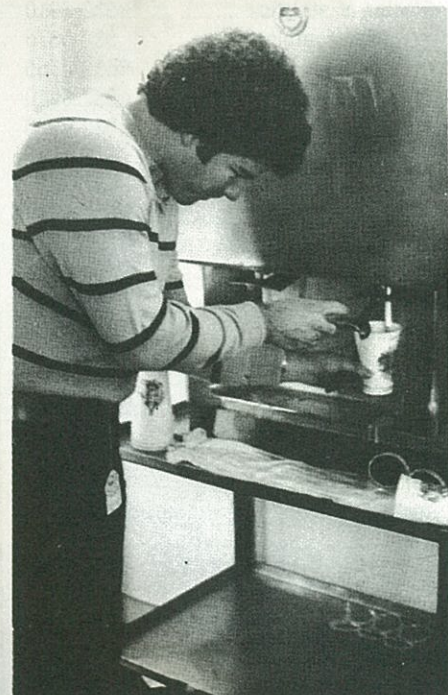

Those were the comments of Tom Ash, sports editor of the Omaha World-Herald, following the Big Eight Skywriters pre-season picnic hosted by K-State and put on by a number of state agricultural organizations.

Well, those sports writers and broadcasters lucky enough to be covering Wildcat football this fall can look forward to that same kind of feast at each home game.

Once again, the Kansas Wheat Commission, the Kansas Lamb Association, the Kansas Pork Producers Council, the Midland United Dairy Industry Association, and the Kansas Beef Council have combined their efforts to provide members of the media with the finest in tasty food and drink.

Now in its third year, the program has not only established K-State as offering some of the best press box dining in the Midwest, but has given the state's agricultural organizations the exposure so important in market development and promotion.

And chances are it's a few inches on the waistline of those who cover the Wildcats on a regular basis.

FOOTBALL
CAMP

For boys grade 5 thru 11

The purpose of the Ellis Rainsberger Wildcat Football camp is to teach every boy the fundamental and advanced skills necessary to make him a better football player. It is also hoped that our camp will help him to develop future athletic ideals in sportsmanship, leadership and citizenship. An evaluation of each boy will be given if so desired. No pads will be used.

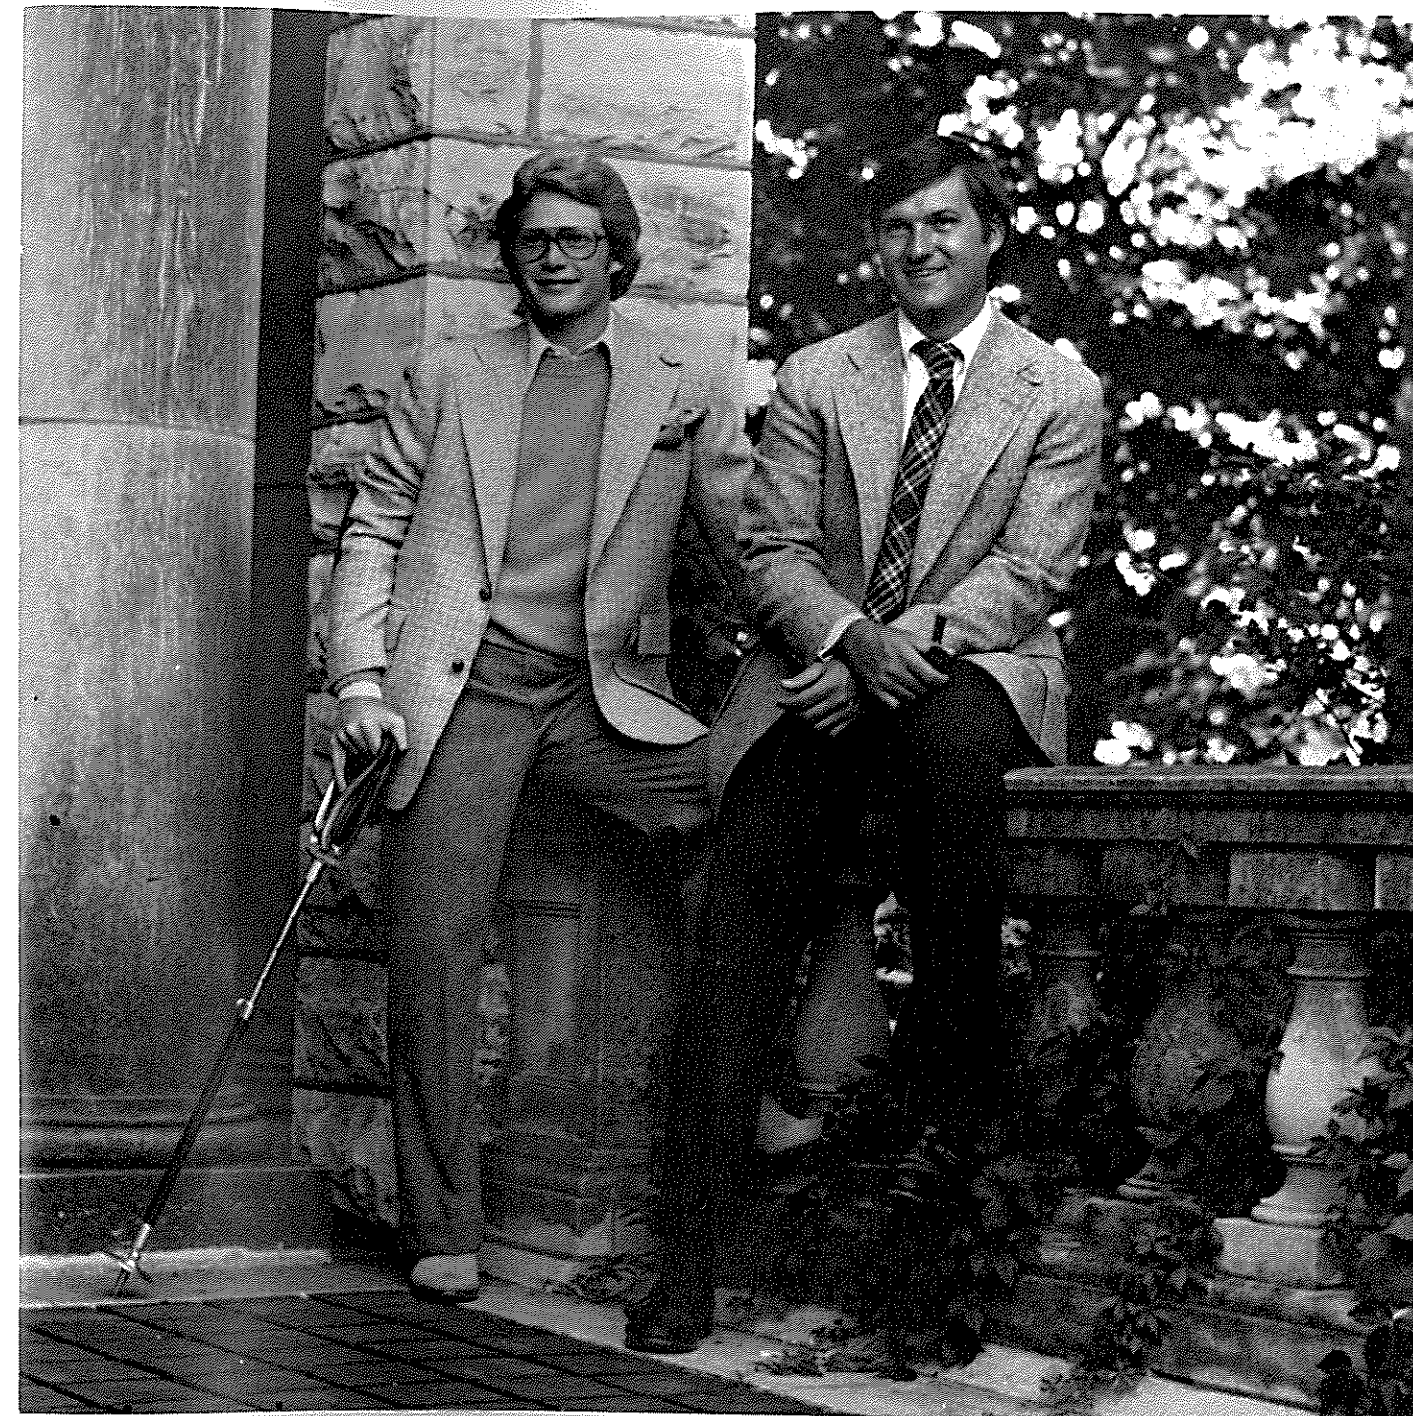

For brochure and application phone or write Ellis Rainsberger, Football Camp, Kansas State Football Office, 2201 Kimball, Manhattan, Kansas 66502. Phone (913) 532-5876.
