The Season Approaches with Four New Coaches

The Metro welcomes four new coaches who have put on a lot of miles on the road to winning.

By JOE CASTELLANO St. Louis Globe-Democrat

But I'm Ed Badger," Ed Badger was telling the veteran woman, the per-son in charge of keeping hooligans, cheapskates and riff-raff out of the University of Cincinnati parking lots. "I'm the new basketball coach here.

I don't care who you are," the woman said. "You don't have a sticker on your car, so you can't park in that lot."

But, but...

'Sorry, buster. We don't even have a record of you working for the university. So scram.

Well, Ed, welcome back to the college life, where things move just a little bit more slowly than in the pros. A heckuva lot more slowly than the comet you had been riding the last couple of years in Chicago. Of course, frightened waterbugs move more slowly than life in the National Basketball Association.

"Last year," said Badger, "we had a game at home New Year's Eve, played in Seattle on the first, in Portland on the second, back home on the fifth and in Denver on the sixth. I told my assistant, 'If the guys feel like I do, I don't know how they can play. I don't even know where I'm at. And what's worse, I don't Actually, his Chicago Bulls played at home Dec. 30, in Seattle Jan. 1, in Portland Jan. 3, at Golden State Jan. 4, in Chicago Jan. 6 and in Denver Jan. 8. But if he didn't know where he was at the time, how can he be expected to recall the dates and time now? He was in the NBA then, where they play, as he calls it, 'three college seasons in one year.'

"The biggest difference is the schedule," said Badger. "In the pros, if you get to the playoffs you can play more than a hundred games, compared to 27 or 30 in college. In the pros it's like three college seasons in one.

The way I look at it, I'm in my 32nd year of coaching. Fifteen seasons in five years (including three as an assistant) in the pros and 16 before that."

So he comes back to where they play just one season a year and what does he get? The runaround from the UC committees on parking lot stickers.

When she told me they had no record of me working for the university," said Badger, "I began wondering whether I was or not.

Of course, that reception is nothing like the one he and fellow newcomers Joe Williams of Florida State, Ron Ekker of St. Louis and Charlie Moir of Virginia Tech are going to get when they are greeted by all those Doctors and Scooters and whatever elses down in Louisville, the fanatical patrons of the Mid-South Coliseum in Memphis and the alluring violations of training on Bourbon Street in New Orleans.

They're in the Metro now, the conference that has been rated by some publications as being the second conference in the country. Moir enters his third year at Virginia Tech, the newest Metro member, with a group of recruits considered by some to be the best at Blacksburg in two decades and a team he calls his best since he has been there. And he has won 19 games in each of the last two seasons.

"It's going to be tough to win 19 games this year," he said. "Of course, the people expect

At least Moir is established in his program. The three other newcomers are still shaking hands and saying things like, "We hope to maintain our fine tradition and firmly establish (fill in blank) University in a position of national prominence."

Actually, Williams, Badger and Ekker each has a different sort of act to follow.

Williams replaced Hugh Durham, who averaged about 20 victories a year in a dozen seasons at Tallahassee before taking the job at Georgia. Last season, the Seminoles won the Metro's won the regular season championship and an NCAA tournament berth.

"When I was first starting out coaching in high school, I had to follow a guy who had a great team, off which everybody graduated," said Williams.

Yeah, and what happened?
"Well," Williams said, "it was my second year of coaching and I though I knew everything there was to know about coaching. I made some mistakes. I was a rookie coach."

In a sense, he is a rookie once more. But he has learned quite a bit about the profession in the interim, as his record indicates. In six years as the head coach at Jacksonville his teams compiled a 92-61 record, and his 1970 team finished second to UCLA in the NCAA tournament. In eight years at Furman his teams won 142 or 229 games and five Southern Conference championships. Now as he returns to the site of this first college job (as an assistant coach in 1962), Williams knows a thing or two more than he did as a young high school coach.

"Instead of coming in here and saying, 'This is MY program, and changing everything, I plan to keep the good things in the program. The things that are weak, we'll make changes

The players know the things they did right will stay. I have respect for what they've done, and I'm not going to make any radical changes.

At St. Louis, on the other hand, a few radical changes seem in order. The Billikens have not had a winning team since 1973, and that was four coaches ago.

"I kind of like going into a new program and trying to get it organized," said Ekker, fresh from performing a miracle at West Texas State. "The job that has to be done is changing the attitude around of some players, the administration, the fans and the news media.

And building a team that can be known for more than losing by two points to Cincinnati, Marquette and Louisville.

"Winning is THE most important thing in establishing a program," Ekker said. "And recruiting has the most direct effect on winning. The major emphasis will be on the team and on recruiting, but all the other things are important, too. The booster club can be a very strong element for you. And you need promotions, so that you can get better attendance.

"People are selective. They want to go to a first class production. We have to be good. And then we have to be exciting."

The situation at Cincinnati seems to split the extremes at Florida State and St. Louis. Badger plans to squeeze all the potential out of this year's edition of what has been the Metro's most enigmatic program in the recent past.

"One thing I'm going to do is change the schedule," Badger said. "It has always been my belief that you should play good people so that when you get to the tournament you will be ready for it. In the past, Cincinnati has played a bunch of rummies and Sisters of the Poor teams in the regular season, then never did anything when it got to the tournament."

Badger has looked forward to his return to college, where he established himself as a successful coach at Chicago's Wright Junior College.

"There are great kids in the NBA," he said, "but I don't think many want to be taught anything. Most of them know it all. It'll be nice to get back to being a teaching coach-that's the kind of work I enjoy."

Of all the newcomers, Moir might feel the most at home.

"I'm pretty familiar with most of the teams in the Metro," he said. "We have played Memphis State, I watched Louisville and Cincinnati on TV a few times, I'm familiar with Ron Ekker - I knew him when he was at West Texas State, and I know Joe Williams real well - he was at Furman when I was at Florida State (as an assistant)."

And Moir coached for three years at Tulane, including his last season there in 1976 when Tulane first joined the Metro. That 1976 season resulted in an 18-9 record, the school's best record in 27 yers.

"I know all these teams," said Moir. "Now the idea is to keep from getting our brains beat out."

Welcome to the Metro.

Florida State Seminoles

The Seminoles will be hardpressed to match last year's accomplishments—winning 23 games, including the regular-season Metro title, and a berth in the NCAA tournament where they nearly defeated eventual national champion Kentucky.

In Harry Davis, David Thompson and Eugene Harris, the Seminoles lose three of last year's top four scorers whose combined averages were 45 points and 17 rebounds a game. A bit of good news, however, is that 6-9 center Kris Anderson, previously thought to be academically ineligible, now will join the team at the start of the second semester, in time to play all 12 Seminole conference games.

On top of the inevitable lineup changes, the Seminoles are experiencing a change of coaches. Hugh Durham coached FSU for 13 years and was named Metro Coach of the Year in his final season. He has moved on to the University of Georgia and has been replaced by an equally successful coach, Joe Williams.

Williams comes to Tallahassee from Furman University, where he won five Southern conference championships in eight years. The most recent title came last season when Furman won 19 games and advanced to the NCAA Tournament. His eight-year record of 142-87 (.620) is the best in Furman history and includes a string of 26 consecutive Southern Conference game victories.

Prior to that, Williams coached at Jacksonville University, where, in his first year, he took the Dolphins to the NAIA national playoffs. In his final season at Jacksonville in 1969-70, the Dolphins went 27-2 and lost the national championship game to UCLA.

Ironically, Florida State was Williams' first collegiate coaching assignment. In 1962 he was hired to coach the freshman team.

"I'm delighted to be playing in the Metro Conference," said Williams of his new challenge. "It is a good conference played in large cities and areas which will give tremendous exposure to our program.

"My goal is to put a team on the floor where a group can enjoy playing basketball and enjoy playing well. I'm basically interested in team-oriented play that still gives players a chance to do things they do best."

Williams has only one returning starter,

Tony Jackson

Tony Jackson, but valuable sixth man Mickey Dillard is also back. Jackson, a 6-0 guard, scored sparingly (6 pts.) but led the Metro in assists (166) and steals (73). Dillard was perhaps the best player in the conference last year coming off the bench and will probably start this year. He scored in double figures 23 times last season, on his way to compiling a 13.7 scoring average, second best on the team. His efforts earned him a second team All-Metro selection.

Murray Brown is the only other returning player with a healthy amount of experience, excluding Anderson. He played in all but one game last year as a swing man and averaged six points a game. With the holes left by the departure of Thompson and Davis at forward, Brown will likely see most of his action on the front line.

He will receive some formidable competition, however, from two of the recruits Williams signed in late spring. Pernell Tookes is a 6-6 forward from Orlando, Fla. who averaged 21.0 points and 10 rebounds a game for the 1977-78 season. Greg Collinsworth brings even more impressive credentials to Tallahassee. As a 6-5 forward from Titusville, Fla., Collinsworth averaged 25 points and 12 rebounds a game.

A third quality recruit is 6-3 guard Ed Chatman from Gulf Coast Junior College, who averaged in double figures in both scoring and rebounding (21.0 pts. and 11 rebs.) last season.

If Tookes and Collinsworth, along with Brown and returnee Hank Mann, can fill the forward spots, the Seminoles will remain a dangerous foe. Florida State was the quickest team in the Metro last year and relied heavily on the play of their guards on offense and defense. And in Jackson and Dillard, who also contributed 30 steals last season, Florida State probably have the best backcourt in the Metro this year.

When the schedule moves into interconference play, the role of Anderson will become all important. His value to the team last season occasionally went unnoticed since it could not be readily extolled by his statistics, which were overshadowed by those of Harry Davis and David Thompson. But Anderson did average 6.7 rebounds and 8.1 points a game, and hit 56 per cent of his shots, sixth best in the conference.

His real contributions came on defense and in setting up his sharp-shooting teammates (Florida State led the conference in field goal percentage). Anderson handed out 36 assists last year, ranking him second in the league among centers.

Without their center for the first month of the season, and with new players gaining experience as the year progresses, the Seminoles shouldn't match those 23 victories of a year ago. But they should still be a factor in determining the Metro champion.

oe Williams, who began his collegiate basketball coaching career at Florida State, has returned to become the Seminoles fourth head coach in the 31-year history of the school.

Williams, with previous coaching stints at Jacksonville and Furman, replaced 12-year coach Hugh Durham who resigned to take the head coaching job at Georgia.

Florida State was Williams' first coaching assignment in 1962 when he was the freshman coach for the late Bud Kennedy. He went to Furman in 1963 as an assistant coach before assuming the reigns as head coach at Jacksonville in 1964.

During his first season at Jacksonville, the Dolphins advanced to the NAIA national playoffs in Kansas City. Five years after that, Jacksonville found itself in the NCAA championship game against powerful UCLA and finished with a 27-2 record. In a short span Williams had made the Jacksonville program one of the nation's most respected. His six year coaching record with the Dolphins was 92-61.

At Furman, Williams wasted no time becoming the school's winningest coach. The Paladins enjoyed a winning record in seven of eight seasons as Williams ran up a 142-87 record.

Five times in eight years, Furman won the Southern Conference championship with Williams at the helm. The most recent title came last winter when the Paladins compiled a 19-11 record and advanced to the first round of the NCAA tournament before bowing by a single point (63-62) to Indiana.

His record at Furman also included a 15-0 record against Southern Conference competition — its first undefeated record ever in league play — in 1974-75 and three consecutive 20 game win seasons.

Williams' overall ledger during his 14 years as a head coach reads 234-148, or .612 percent.

"My goal is to put a team on the floor where a group can enjoy playing basketball and enjoy playing well," says Williams. "I want the players to be unselfish, give good effort and winning will take care of itself.

"I'm basically interested in team oriented playing that still gives players a chance to do things they do best."

Realizing a personal dream to someday return to Florida, Williams set forward a goal to strengthen collegiate basketball in the Sunshine State.

"I want to play as many teams in the state as I can," he explains. "I want to help improve basketball in the state and will do anything I can to achieve that goal. Florida State will resume its series with Florida and Jacksonville this season and I hope to add South Florida next year." Williams also plans to play a Florida State "home" game outside of Tallahassee on a regular basis in the near future.

Williams' coaching career began in 1960 when he guided Jacksonville's Terry Parker High School to the county championship. The following season he coached Ribault High to the Gateway Conference title.

Williams is a native of Morton, Miss., but he grew up in Oklahoma, graduating from Durant High School in 1952. He played and learned basketball under Abe Lemmons (now head coach at Texas) at Oklahoma City College. Williams received his bachelor's degree in English from Southern Methodist University in 1956. He later earned a master's degree in English from the University of Florida in 1968.

Williams enjoys outdoor activities and he spends time playing basketball and fishing with his two sons, Joey, 13, and Patrick, 11.

r. Bernard F. Sliger, Florida State University's president since 1977, is one of the most ardent fans in Seminole sports history.

When he is on campus, President Sliger rarely misses an athletic event. And, since he became president he has watched every Metro Conference basketball tournament game — not just the games involving the Seminoles, but all others of the colorful three-day tournament, too.

Known as "Bernie" to nearly all of the student athletes, Dr. Sliger makes no secret of his sentiments about athletics at Florida State. He says he wants a "spot in the top 20" for every Seminole team, including those who compete in the arenas of academe.

Although President Sliger now classifies himself as "an energetic spectator," during his high school days in his hometown of Trout Creek, Mich., he was a member of the basketball, track and football teams. He later returned to coach the latter two teams and teach math there, following a three-year tour of duty with the Army during World War II.

Dr. Bernard Sliger President

Since John Bridgers took over as Florida State's athletic director in the spring of 1973, the program has been on a constant upward trend.

The pattern climaxed during 1977 with startling results. Three Seminoles squads—football, basketball and baseball—participated in post season events. Only one other school in the country was able to do the same. The basketball team was the regular season Metro Conference champion while the golf, swimming and track and field teams also won conference titles.

Bridgers was primarily responsible for Florida State's admission to the Metropolitan (Metro) Athletic Conference through his personal friendship with conference athletic directors. The conference last year was ranked as the second strongest in the country for basketball.

And, it was Bridgers, who persuaded new mentor Joe Williams to leave Furman last winter for the Florida State position. Williams has often said there probably isn't another athletic director in the country who would have been able to convince him to leave the security he enjoyed at Furman.

FLORIDA STATE (0-0) vs. ECKERD (0-0) Tully Gym, Tallahassee, Fla. November 27, 1978, 7:00 P.M.

THE TEAMS: Florida State, a member of the fledgling Metro Conference, opens its season with Eckerd College of St. Petersburg. Eckerd, a member of NCAA Division II, plays in the Sunshine State Conference.

THE COACHES: Tonight for the first time ever, Florida State will be coached by Joe Williams. Williams joined the Seminole staff last spring after successful stints at Jacksonville and Furman. In 14 years, he has compiled an overall coaching record of 234-148.

Georgia Southern graduate ('55) Jim Harley is in charge of the Eckerd program. This is his 22nd season as a college head coach. His cumulative record is 274-182.

THE OFFICIALS: A three-man crew has been assigned by the Metro Conference. Robert (Bob) Collins of Biloxi, Miss., will be the referee with Dave Dodge (Columbia, S.C.) and Don Rutledge (Windermere, Fla.) serving as the umpires. This will be the first game played by FSU where three officials are used. It will be standard procedure this season in the Metro Conference.
