

Lady 'Noles drop first match

The FSU women's volleyball team opened its regular season on a sour note Wednesday night in Knoxville, dropping a decision to the University of Tennessee, 15-4, 7-15, 10-15, and 8-15 (in a best of five format).

According to head coach Cecile Reynaud, the Lady Volunteer squad "was young, but one of the hardest hitting teams we've ever played." Despite the loss, Reynaud rated the play of freshmen Sally Summer and Shannon Lages along with upperclassmen Alicia Cross and Barbara Mellon as "very strong."

The Lady Seminole spikers next match is Friday morning at 10:30 a.m. when they meet Central Florida in the first round of the University of Alabama Invitational in Tuscaloosa. Other teams in the tourney include Miami, South Carolina, Clemson, Texas Tech, Miami, and Metro Conference foe Memphis State.
