Colorado State spikes FSU out of the NCAA playoffs

By Becky Hines

Democrat correspondent

The disappointment was apparent on Deanne Kaleta's face.

The only senior on Florida State's volleyball team accepted a loss to Colorado State in the first round of the NCAA tournament Saturday with composure. But slightly tearful eyes and a tired voice reflected the pain of the loss.

"Win or lose, I just wanted us to have a good match," said Kaleta after the 3-1 loss in Tully Gym. "I, personally, can deal with the loss . . . I just wanted us to have a better match than we did."

The Lady Seminoles (28-8) were overpowered right from the start as Colorado State (22-11) jumped to two quick 15-3 wins before FSU even got warmed up. The early games were filled with FSU attack errors, and punctuated with Colorado State's strong blocking and hitting.

"Our blocking team is one of the best in the country," said Colorado State coach Rich Feller of his front row that features three players over 6-feet tall. "It's intimidating to other teams."

While FSU was worrying about how to hit against Colorado State, the Rams' Jill Johnson and Angie Miller were putting on a little demonstration across the net.

"We always look for the middle first," said Johnson, an outside hitter who had 15 kills Saturday. "So whenever I get a set, I know I have to do something with it. If I see an opening there, I'll try to hit it."

The person Ram setter Cindy Cox-Bellin found most often in the middle was 6-foot-1 middle blocker Angie Miller, who had 16 kills for the night.

In the third game, though, FSU did a turnaround. Instead of tentative hitting and sloppy passing, things were beginning to click. "Much better ball control," said FSU setter Nancy Gaspaderek. "I was able to isolate a lot more." Strong hitting by freshman Amy Bronson and solid back-row play by virtually everyone propelled FSU to a 15-8 win in the third game, but the team faltered in the final game and fell 15-7.

"I really expected the match to be more like the third and fourth game," said Feller. "We know that Florida State has a very tough team. But after Games 1 and 2, we thought we should win it in three. When you get on a roll like that, you've got to go for the jugular and put it away. (FSU) relaxed and played like they could play."

Florida State coach Cecile Reynaud simply stated: "We have nothing to be ashamed of — we've had a great season."

Colorado State will face Texas in the regional round of tournament play next weekend.
