

Three ways to quarterback the most important drive of the day —your drive home

1. Don't buck the line of traffic, stay in it. Fancy open field running doesn't pay on the highway.
2. When dusk falls and your visibility is limited, slow down and turn on your lights. What you can't see can hurt you.
3. Don't try to beat the clock by speeding. Remember, when time runs out on the highway, everybody loses.

Graduate Study—Key To Progress

THE HIGHLY TRAINED men and women who study and do research in Auburn University's graduate program, to a considerable degree, hold the key to Alabama's continuing progress.

The growth in graduate instruction at Auburn is clearly evidenced by the fact that 2,372 graduate degrees have been granted in the past decade. Two hundred seventy-eight of those degrees were awarded in 1963. Since the first doctorate was awarded in 1955, Auburn has awarded a total of 106 doctoral degrees. Graduate Dean W. V. Parker reports that 1,081 students now are enrolled in graduate study.

The first graduate degree was awarded in 1870 when Howard M. Hamill was awarded a Master of Arts degree while the institution was still known as the East Alabama Male College.

New Graduate Areas of Study

WHEN THE CURRENT FALL quarter began, Auburn initiated doctoral programs in English and in electrical engineering. In 1962 two new doctoral programs, physics and mechanical engineering, were initiated with the new master's degree programs in aerospace engineering and business administration.

Multi-disciplinary graduate programs with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the U.S. Public Health Service now are in progress or are awaiting final approval. The NASA grant, supporting the three-year program which began this fall, is for approximately $147,000.

Fellowship Recipients

FELLOWSHIP RECIPIENTS attending Auburn have increased during the past year, a period

Graduate students spend time in both the laboratory and the classroom.

that found graduate training programs supported by the U.S. Public Health Service continued in the departments of animal science and physiology and pharmacology. The department of animal science also had one USPH post-doctoral fellow and one fellow of the Alabama Heart Association.

Included in the Graduate School's administration of 43 fellowship programs during the year were the National Defense Education Act (27), National Science Foundation (6), S. Allen Edgar (3), and others (7). The Annual Report shows that stipends on these programs amounted to $114,000 for the year.

Auburn offers the Master of Arts degree in three areas, the Master of Science degree in 32 fields and the specialized Master's degree in seven areas. The doctoral degree is offered in 16 different areas.

The Greatest Auburn Game I've Ever Seen

By BENNY MARSHALL
Sports Editor, The Birmingham News

It has been a cold November Saturday, now the sun was lost back of the giant West stands at Birmingham's Legion Field. The football players ran in shadows as the last minutes of the Auburn-Miami game came on, and the wind was a knife down on the sidelines. This, surely, was a football game lost. Auburn had been a team moving toward greatness under Shug Jordan in 1953. Surely 1954 would be better. But it wasn't.

Florida beat the Tigers. So did Kentucky. So did Georgia Tech. Chattanooga, Florida State and Tulane were Auburn victories, but this wasn't enough.

And now Miami had the Tigers on the ropes, for the nationally-ranked Hurricane had scored on a 11-yard pass in the second quarter, and a 53-yard run by Mario Bonofiglio in the third. Bobby Freeman, the great Auburn quarterback, had broken through to block the extra point kick after the second score, and that was about all good that had happened for Auburn this icy afternoon.

It was the fourth quarter. Miami drove again. But eight minutes, 49 seconds from the finish, the Tigers got them stopped. George Atkins, M. L. Brackett, Jack Locklear, Jim Pyburn rose up and threw them back.

On the sidelines, last rites were held in a hurry for the X-Y, two-team system, which had worked so well the season before. Now, Jordan gathered his best ones all together and sent them forth to salvage something.

From the 29, Joe Childress, Fob James, Hoppy Middleton and Freeman and friends set forth. Freeman, whose passing hadn't been sharp, went on the ground now, driving his team up the middle, Childress and Middleton weren't stopping.

Miami reeled back under this ripping, tearing ferocity. Auburn was at the 50, the 30, and the 20, then Middleton slammed 14 to the three, and Freeman scored from there. Childress stepped back and kicked the extra point. Now it was 13-7, but the clock was speeding.

Auburn kicked off, and Miami was at the 29. If Miami could hold.

But Miami couldn't. Bonofiglio was separated from the ball on the 27 and Frank D'Agostino leaped upon that prize. Defeat was written on Miami faces, in Miami posture now. This was a team which seemed to know it was about to lose, and Auburn lined up with the fire of victory in Auburn eyes.

Middleton ran nine yards, then Childress seven, then four.

Freeman knew the horse to ride. He called on Childress once more and Ole Joe from Robertsdale was on the three when they dragged him down.

The next time, Joe Childress wasn't stopping for anyone or anything in the whole, wide world. He saw an end zone.

Tiger blockers had opened the door. Childress went in.

And no one had any doubt at all about what would happen next.

They lined up for the extra point. Childress back there to kick it. And Childress did so.

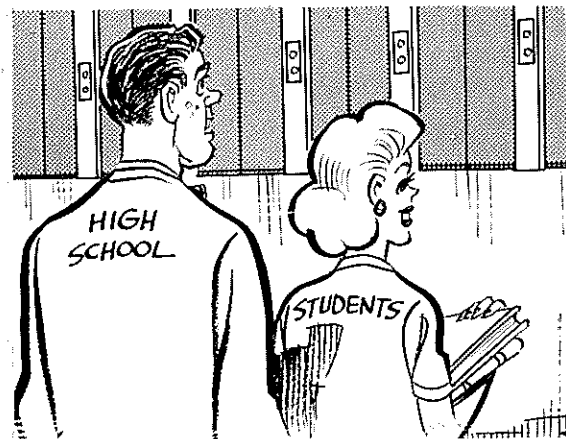

On his greatest afternoon as an Auburn fullback, Childress, the All-American, had 29 times with the football. He gained 164 yards, and Auburn won, 14 to 13, starting back up the road which was to lead, by 1957, to a National Championship.

I've seen a hundred Tiger football games or more, up and down the South, at Cliff Hare Stadium, Legion Field, Grant Field, on a hundred Autumn Saturday afternoons.

But the greatest of them all for me must be the one they played on the cold afternoon in Birmingham in November, 1954 when the shadows were long, and the wind was a knife, and Auburn's Tigers came marching toward greatness.

Eight minutes, 49 seconds to play, they were beaten. Then they weren't. And no one who saw it ever could forget.

Information for Prospective Students about Auburn University

THINKING about college? Then here are some things you should know about Auburn University. The University offers a way of life rich in tradition and a program of learning that may suit your needs and abilities. If Auburn offers courses of study in your area of interest, we hope you will consider continuing your education here. At best a presentation of this length can only begin to acquaint you with Auburn. If you would like any of several University publications which will provide additional information, a tour of the campus, or if you would like application forms, check the appropriate spaces in the form in the lower right-hand corner of page 17, tear out the form and mail to the Office of High School Relations, Auburn University, Auburn, Alabama.

Auburn Counseling Service

BEFORE you select the institution and the area of study, you should discover your aptitudes and abilities. Probably your high school has a guidance program to help you do this. As a supplemental service, the Student Counseling Service at Auburn offers, at no cost and no obligation, pre-college counseling to college-bound high school seniors.

On a one-day visit you are tested and interviewed by a trained counselor to help determine your best area of study. You will also have the opportunity to visit in the department of your interest. If you would like to take advantage of this service, contact the Student Counseling Service, Auburn University.

Auburn's Ten Schools

AFTER you have received guidance in determining your area of study, you will be interested in the wide choice of curricula available.

Auburn offers you academic training in ten schools, including the Graduate School. Listed below are the number of fields in which you may specialize in each school.

School of Agriculture—Agricultural administration, agricultural engineering, agricultural science, biological sciences, forestry, and ornamental horticulture.

School of Architecture and the Arts—Architecture, interior design, industrial design, visual arts, building technology, dramatic arts, and music.

School of Chemistry—Chemistry, chemical engineering, and laboratory technology.

School of Education—Preparation in elementary, secondary, and special education and opportunities in administration, supervision and guidance, and psychology.

School of Engineering—Aerospace, civil, electrical, and mechanical engineering, aeronautical administration, industrial management, textile management, and textile science.

School of Home Economics—Clothing and textiles, foods and nutrition, home management and family economics, family life and early childhood education, and nursing science.

School of Pharmacy—The five-year curriculum prepares students to become registered pharmacists.

School of Science and Literature—Curricula are designed to lead students to specialization as businessmen, accountants, statisticians, secretaries, mathematicians, physicists, linguists, journalists, historians, and sociologists, and pre-professional instruction is given to prospective lawyers, dentists, and doctors.

School of Veterinary Medicine—A six-year curriculum leading to the degree of Doctor of Veterinary Medicine.

Life at Auburn

AUBURN provides not only a wide choice in fields of study, but also a variety of out-of-class activities to promote a well-balanced life. Participation is offered in student government, student publications, debate council, intramural sports, acting, musical groups, and honor societies and professional clubs. The Lecture and Concert Series offers free programs which bring to the campus some of the nation's finest artists and speakers. Fraternities and sororities offer participation in social activities as well as competition in scholarship and intramural sports.

Facts About Entering Auburn

IF you decide to come to Auburn, you will need additional information.

Admissions—Applicants must now present a satisfactory high school record in college preparatory courses and attain a satisfactory score on the American College Test. Specific admission requirements may be found in the Auburn catalog in your principal's office, the library, and your counselor's office.

Housing—You should contact the Head of Women's Housing for women's dormitory residency, or the Manager of Magnolia Dormitories for men's dormitory residency. Housing information for off-campus residency and for married students may be obtained by writing to the Student Affairs Office.

Expenses—Minimum costs for each school quarter at Auburn are: University fees, $75; room and board, $180; laundry (optional), $18; books and supplies (estimated), $27; total, $300. Out-of-state residents pay an additional $100.

Financial Aid—Many scholarships and loan funds to aid worthy students in meeting their University expenses have been provided by civic organizations, business concerns, and individuals. Further information may be secured by contacting the Student Financial Aid Office.

Students in the engineering curricula, physics, mathematics, and business administration may participate in the Cooperative Education Program.

How A Veteran Sports Writer Feels About Coach Jordan

By SAM ADAMS
Sports Editor, Alabama Journal
Montgomery, Alabama

Where do you find a finer gentleman than Ralph (Shug) Jordan? You don't! He's in a very select group of people, who enjoy the warmth and friendship of all whom they meet.

I can make such a statement with all sincerity, having known Ralph Jordan for over 30 years as athlete and coach.

You would get the same appraisal of Auburn's head football coach if you were to question hundreds of intimate friends and casual acquaintances, starting with his high school days in Selma, Ala.

Talk with his former teen-age associates in Selma, fellow students and athletes at Auburn, World War II buddies, hundreds who have served under him as coach, and his associates in the coaching profession. All will tell you quickly, "They don't make 'em any finer than Ralph Jordan."

Although quiet and unassuming, Ralph has been a fierce competitor all of his life. He played to win. In victory he was gracious; in defeat he was the good sport, but never satisfied. These traits, coupled with natural ability as a leader, were to put him in good stead for a position in the coaching profession.

After serving as assistant at Auburn, with the Miami Seahawks and at Georgia, Ralph was recalled by his alma mater in 1951 as head coach. It was a challenge. The school's football fortunes were in a state of almost complete collapse. The Tigers had just gone through a winless season and three previous teams had won a total of five games. But Ralph accepted the challenge with the dedication that had marked his career as athlete and assistant coach.

Since then Auburn has enjoyed phenomenal success. Going into today's game, the Tigers have compiled an 89-35-4 record under his leadership, with a national championship in 1957.

A lot of excellent traits have combined to make Ralph Jordan a fine head coach at Auburn—loyalty, optimism, ambition and a captivating personality to name a few. But the key to his success probably is the fine treatment accorded his athletes. As long as they do their part there isn't anything he won't do for them. And he never embarrasses them in public. If a reprimand is in order it is carried out on the practice field or man-to-man, but never in print.

And if a player becomes physically unable to continue football due to injury or some other ailment he remains on scholarship. Thirty-five such players, most of them eliminated by aggravated injuries suffered in high school, have remained on scholarship during the past 13 years, even though they made little or no contribution to Auburn's football program.

Although held in high esteem by many, Coach Jordan's popularity among sportswriters, telecasters and broadcasters is unsurpassed. A newsman is always welcomed in his office. Interviews are always easy and fruitful. Never a pessimist, he has words of hope no matter how dire the circumstances. Information volunteered or divulged in answers to questions is always accurate. Through his willingness to cooperate in releasing news material, the Auburn mentor has the confidence and admiration of men working with the various news media throughout the nation.

Again I say Ralph Jordan is a fine gentleman, an outstanding coach and a credit to Auburn.

Thanksgiving Day is Thursday. Today's the game with F.S.U. While this you're reading has little to do with today. . . . Thank goodness for Thanksgiving and all these things us Auburn folk are thankful for:

We're thankful that Ivan Charles Frederickson, Sr., chose to be a Veterinarian and that Ivan C., Jr. (that's Tucker) wanted to be one also and chose Auburn.

I'm thankful that Billy Edge was so small in high school that no one would consider him for a college scholarship except Auburn.

Thank goodness for our Air Force because of their work with the missiles, defense, offense, and Bill Cody. Without the Air Force, Cody's air-minded father might have settled down at Northport and wanted his son to be close to home.

Be thankful also for Japanese movies because without them Auburn would not have Bruce Yates, Joe Wilson, and Carl Hardy on the football team.

We're thankful for the two-point rule in college football because Kentucky tested it early this season like L.S.U. did last week.

I'm thankful even for the depression back in 1932. Without it and the lack of funds for transportation, Coach Ralph Jordan might have taken his Civil Engineering degree and forsaken the resurrection of Auburn football.

Thanks for double-digit numbers, especially No. 12. Not only would the makers of kids' football jerseys suffer but what would Auburn do without all the young idols of Jimmy Sidle during the coming years?

Be especially thankful for the canine nicknamed "Super Dog" by Mailon Kent. While one admires his courage, one must doubt his judgment on harassing the Eagle mascot during the game.

We're proud of TV and thankful for the contrast in dignity, sincerity, humbleness, and leadership shown to us each Sunday on football replays.

Thanks for company, friends, and relatives for eating ALL the thanksgiving turkey.

Speaking for all little boys, thanks for sports. Footballs, baseballs, and basketballs may clutter the house or yard but they never do the damage of idleness and delinquency.

While we're hopeful for a bowl game this year, be thankful that the National Champions of 1957 didn't have to gamble their legend on one more outing.

As alumni, friends, students, and fans, we are thankful for a football team like we have today.

I'm thankful that Alumnus Wilton Kilgore and his lovely wife get such a kick out of watching son Jon perform.

We take pride in saying that Auburn has a team of which we can be proud, and our team has a University of which they are proud.

Auburn—A Growing University

AUBURN University, with the largest on-campus enrollment in the State of Alabama, has experienced its most phenomenal growth over the past 20 years, most of it within the past decade.

The goal at Auburn of teaching the principles of science and their application to the needs of agriculture and industry is unchanged, but rapid strides in technological fields and the liberal arts have highlighted recent growth.

Enrollment Growth

TODAY, with a total of 9,819 students studying in Auburn's ten schools, enrollment has increased two and one-half times over that of 1940, and by almost 40 per cent in the last ten years.

On the basis of the American College Test, one of the admission standards, Auburn's freshman class as a whole is far superior to the average college-bound student in Alabama. They compare favorably with the average college-bound student nationally and far surpass national averages for last year's high school seniors.

Approximately 550 faculty members teach students at Auburn. At least 250 of them hold the doctoral degree, a percentage that compares favorably with other colleges and universities on a national average.

Graduate Study and Research

THE master's program at Auburn extends to almost every field of study and the doctoral program leads to terminal degrees in 16 areas. During the 1962-63 academic year alone, 20 doctoral and 258 master's and specialist's degrees were awarded.

Professors go beyond the area of teaching in a university. To keep their students current with new developments, they engage in continuing programs of research.

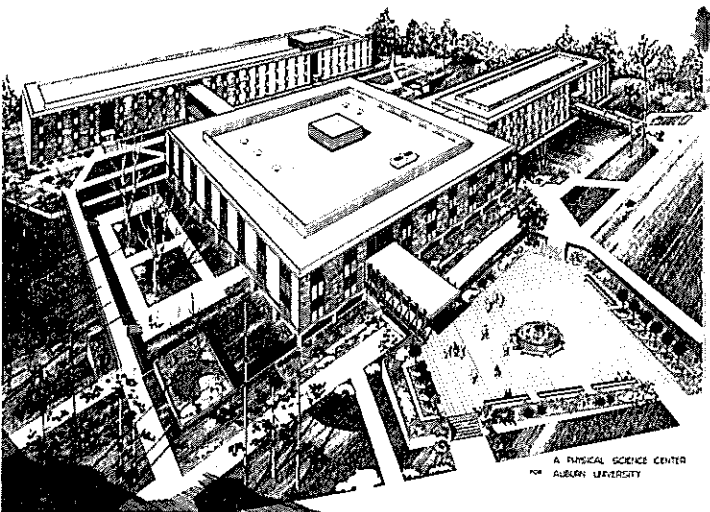

Auburn's organized research expenditures amount to approximately $5 million annually, or one-fourth of the annual operating budget.

Physical Plant Growth

AUBURN'S physical plant value has nearly doubled in the past five years with more than $18 million available for new buildings and other expansion. The major building program began with passage of Amendment Five in 1957 and gained impetus through the $100 million bond issue of 1959. Friends and alumni contributed $2,594,000 for buildings and equipment and student housing was expanded through loans from the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Auburn Serves Alabama

THROUGH its three divisions—instruction, research and extension—Auburn serves the entire State of Alabama. The instruction prepares students for future careers. Research is conducted through the Agricultural and Engineering Experiment Stations, the Auburn Research Foundation and at the graduate level in all academic fields. Results are transmitted to citizens through the facilities of the Agricultural Extension Service and the Engineering Extension System. All divisions participate in off-campus services through the Auburn Educational Television Department which provides one-third of the programming over the Alabama ETV network.

Research and instruction are combined in the Physical Science Center which was occupied this fall.

SMOKE ALL 7

Smoke all 7 filter brands and you'll agree: some taste as if they had no filter at all... others filter the fun and flavor out of smoking. But Viceroy tastes the way you'd like a filter cigarette to taste!

not too strong...not too light...

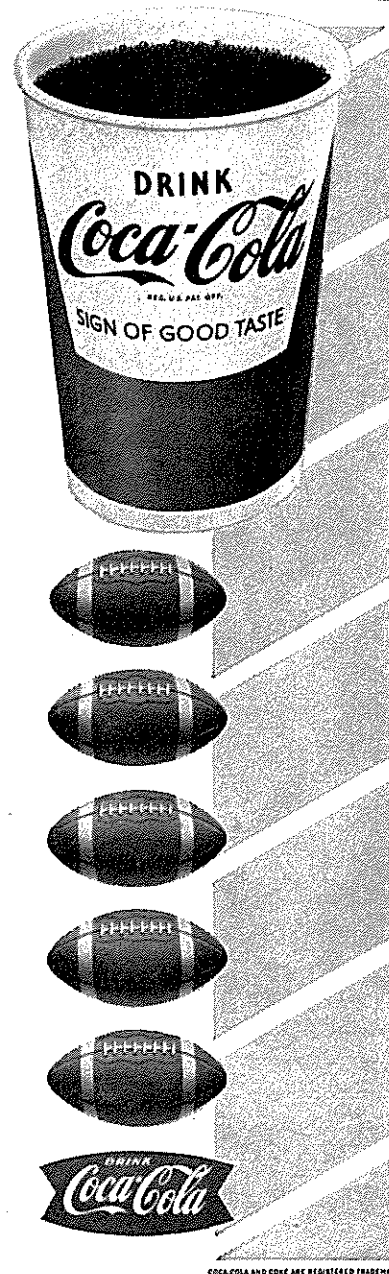

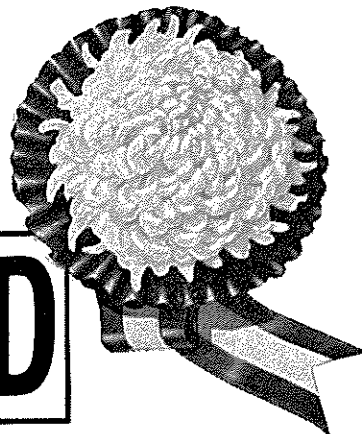

Viceroy's got - the taste that's right!

Sports lovers of the world, unite... let's all go Wildcat-ing!

Face it—if you're the rocking chair, watch-it-on-TV type, forget the wild, wild '64 Buick Wildcat. But if you like your action furious and first-hand, Wildcat is for you! You can bark your signals to a regular 325 hp V-8 formation, or really take to the air with a 340* or 360* hp passer. Three scat-back transmissions add to your fun: 3-speed synchromesh; 4-speed synchro stick shift on the floor*, or Buick's new trigger-quick Super Turbine 400 automatic* (very sparing with gas, too!). Four new models: 4-dr. hardtop; 2-dr. sport coupe; 4-dr. sedan; convertible. Give one a workout; see why we say...

*Optional at extra cost.

JIMMY HITCHCOCK, now deceased, was Auburn's first all-America. A triple-threat back in every sense, he ran, passed, punted, kicked off, kicked extra points, returned kickoffs and punts and was a great defensive back. Wallace Wade, one of the nation's great all-time coaches, said "Hitchcock is the finest all-around back ever to play against any of my teams."

WALTER GILBERT, center on Auburn's 1937 winning Orange Bowl team, was a big, strong and swift boy who loved the game. Ralph Jordan, an assistant on that '37 team, remembers Gilbert as "a student of the game conditioned mentally and physically to become a great football player."

MONK GAFFORD, three-year regular at halfback, ranks third among total offense leaders in Auburn history with 2005 yards. In one year he gained 1282 yards via passing and running. His career rushing total was 1414 yards, an average of 6.4 on every carry. In 1942 he gained 1004 yards rushing, an Auburn record.

TEX WARRINGTON, second Tiger center to win all-America honors, is regarded as one of the toughest, most durable linemen ever to play here. He wasn't fast, but coaches regard him as a great linebacker due to knack of sizing up situations and love of contact.

TRAVIS TIDWELL is the finest offensive football player ever to perform for the Tigers. He is the all-time leader in total offense for career and season. He is the career passing leader, one-year passing leader and fifth in seasonal rushing. He gained 3820 yards in his career, a record which will likely never be topped.

JIM PYBURN, 1954 end, was the supreme pass receiver who rated this from Coach Ralph Jordan: "We had a passing attack... just throw the ball in Pyburn's direction." He holds the Auburn record for yardage by a receiver in one year, 460 in 1954.

JOE CHILDRESS, still a professional football star, ranks sixth in total offense in Auburn history, all his yardage coming in rushing. He is second in career rushing with 1667 yards gain in 321 carries, an average of 5.2 per carry. In addition to power-running, he kicked extra points and seldom missed under pressure.

FRANK D'AGOSTINO, an extremely quick and powerful big man at tackle in 1955, was noted for his offensive play. He had tremendous explosion as blocker in line and was great downfield blocker.

JIMMY PHILLIPS, great end on the 1957 national champions, averaged 23.8 yards per catch that year and ranks with the finest collegiate pass receivers in history. This can't overshadow his efforts as an all-around offensive and defensive end, however, and he's regarded as the best end in Auburn history.

ZEKE SMITH, two-year all-America, cat-quick and overpowering guard, won the Outland Award as the nation's outstanding lineman in 1958. He overcame handicaps to become a great lineman and will long be remembered for his blocking and for his in-born ability to make key defensive plays.

JACKIE BURKETT, also a two-year All-America, is the fastest, quickest linebacker in Auburn history and also a standout offensive lineman. He is perhaps the finest all-around athlete in Auburn history and served as captain of the 1959 team.

KEN RICE, two-time all-America, made more All-America lists than any player in Auburn history. Fast as most backs in the SEC, weighing 254 pounds, noted for offensive brilliance and twice chosen the league's top offensive lineman, he was honored as the top defensive lineman in the conference his senior year. First draft choice of teams in both pro leagues, he chose the Buffalo Bills.

ED DYAS, excellent pre-medical student, swept All-America honors in football and scholastics in 1960. He set a national record for career field goals (17) and season field goals (13). He won four games in the SEC in 1960 via field goals and kicked three in one game to defeat Georgia, 9-6. He was a rugged ball carrier who ranks sixth among all-time career ground gainers. Turned down pro football offers to enter med school and was captain of the 1960 All-America scholastic team.
