1987 XC

No words can fully describe the satisfaction of an athletic team which sets goals, suffers disappointment, regroups several times, bands together for the common good, and achieves more than expected. Few feelings are better than to discover that we can do without those who at one time appeared indispensable. In the words of Pieter Elmendorf, "all the important people were there," and their names were Stanley, Beyer, Drefs, Robinson, Niekamp, Paletti, and Leen. This was a great end to a most instructive season.
