

UF Track Team Hopes to End 9-Year Drought

The last nine years have been a little frustrating for the University of Florida track and field team. It has been that long since the Gators have beaten Florida State University in a dual meet. This year though, John Randolph's team wants to end this frustration and start its own streak.

If you were to look at the two teams on paper, the Gators might be the better's pick. In fact, if all the Gators were healthy, "FSU would have to regroup after the field events to see if it would be worth continuing with the rest of the meet," as always quotable Coach Mike Bozeman would say. But the Gators are not at full strength, and that will make this Saturday evening's task a little tougher.

Nonetheless, the Gators are hungry. Shot put and discus sensation Neil Serafenas, who has been sidelined with a fractured wrist, will tear his cast off Saturday and compete. This guy gets so pumped up that he might just win out of sheer determination.

Also returning from an injury and vying to go is Greg Robinson. Coach Tommie Turner predicts that Robinson, who will be running the high hurdles for the first time since pulling a muscle during the Indoor SEC meet, will be one of the highlights of the meet.

meters at the Penn Relays with a world-leading junior time (19 and under) of 28:31, will be commissioned to square off with the Seminoles' Herb Willis. Brantly who is more versatile than Willis, and certainly a more fluid runner than his gangling rival, should handle everything that Herbie throws his way.

Another resurging Gator is sophomore Tedd Sinclair. After an illness which threw off the miller's training program, Sinclair has not been up to par. But this weekend Sinclair should battle FSU's Rob Gomez in the metric mile, and the thought of losing to Gomez, or to anyone for that matter, just irks Sinclair. Besides, Tedd Sinclair is the best miller UF has had in years and he likes to win.

FSU on the other hand, won't be an easy foe. Coach

Dick Roberts' team has eight returning All-Americans, including triple-jumper Leon Hutcheon and decathlete/punter Robn Stark. For the Seminoles, this dual meet is a top priority. They skipped the Penn Relays and competed in a lesser meet at home in Tallahassee in preparation for the Gator clash.

"For them, it's a Super Bowl", says Gator Coach John Randolph.
