CHAMPIONSHIP
March 18-21, 1981

THE UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH CAROLINA

COLUMBIA, SOUTH CAROLINA 29208

"WE ADMIT IT. AFTER YEARS OF SWIMMING AND COACHING TOGETHER, IT WAS THE SWIM SHOP THAT MADE US LOOK GOOD."

Terry Maul, John Stafford and The Swim Shop. In a way, you might say we all grew up together in competitive swimming.

Terry and John swam together in college. Now they're both coaching the women's and men's swimming teams at Florida State respectively. And the Swim Shop has kept them and their teams in suits and supplies since the beginning.

How? Take our massive inventories. They offer a coach or swimmer anything they could possibly need.

The Swim Shop can supply everything from lane ropes to the widest selection of suits anywhere. We always stay stocked up so we can always say yes.

Our shipments are fast. We offer same day service on orders large and small. Because behind every thing we sell is a sales staff that gives service, not excuses.

The Swim Shop. Call us toll free and ask for our catalog. We've been making swimmers and coaches look good for years.

And we think you'll find a lot of them admitting it.

Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women

1201 Sixteenth Street, NW, Washington, DC 20036, 202/833-5485

DONNA LOPIANO
President AIAW

The Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women is a national voluntary organization which governs programs of women's intercollegiate athletics for nearly 1,000 college and university member institutions and serves more than 100,000 student-athletes throughout the United States.

Founded in 1971 by women in athletics and now the nation's largest intercollegiate athletic governance body, AIAW has provided an alternate model for intercollegiate athletic governance — one dedicated to the educational value of athletics as a part of a larger educational program, one committed to a dual obligation to the rights of student-athletes and institutional members, one dedicated to the fair and equitable treatment of the female student-athlete, one committed to standards of excellence in athletics.

With goals, policies and regulations established by institutional representatives, the AIAW approach has been a most successful one.

Created as a substructure of the National Association for Girls and Women in Sport of the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance in the formative years of women's sports, AIAW was designed to meet the need for institutional membership and elected representation, as well as an expanded national championship program.

AIAW established separate legal identity in 1979, and although now operating apart from NAGWS, the Association still maintains close educational, programmatic and philosophical ties with its parent organization.

Not only has AIAW more than tripled its active membership in less than a decade, making it the nation's largest governing body for intercollegiate athletics, but it has reached a stature of national recognition, respect and influence rarely attained in the athletic arena.

AIAW organizes and administers a full national championship program and currently offers 39 national championships in 17 different sports — badminton, basketball, cross country, fencing, field hockey, golf, gymnastics, lacrosse, skiing, swimming and diving, synchronized swimming, fast-pitch softball, slow-pitch softball, indoor track and field, outdoor track and field, tennis and volleyball.

Restructured from large and small divisions into three competitive divisions beginning with the 1979-80 season, AIAW offers six national championships open to all member schools and eleven national championships in each of its three divisions.

Classification in the new system is based on financial aid limits, with Division I membership permitting the awarding of up to 100 percent of AIAW's maximum permissible aid, Division II allowing up to 50 percent, and Division III granting up to 10 percent. Unlike the previous classification system based on undergraduate female enrollment, the three division system allows a school to declare its classification by sport, rather than by program.

AIAW has been in the forefront in the vital and highly successful drive to assure equal opportunity for all student-athletes, female and male, in collegiate programs through Title IX of the 1972 Education Amendments.

AIAW has been a leader in the development of amateur sport with assured athletes' rights and freedom from exploitation firmly rooted in its long-standing philosophy of first concern for the student-athlete.

AIAW works closely with various national sport governing bodies, developmental sport organizations, other governing organizations for high school and intercollegiate athletics, and international sport organizations. The overriding theme of the AIAW in its work and relationships with other organizations is one of cooperation and understanding complementary to its own purposes and recognizing a commitment to equality for women in sports programs and leadership roles.

Yes, the AIAW model has demonstrated that student-oriented, educationally-based athletics can be high caliber, high visibility. Ultimately, AIAW may well serve as the model for all intercollegiate athletic organizations.
